ROSES

THE YEAR-OLD ROSE PLANTS.

The replanting of rose benches is one of the very considerable items of expense and it is one from which many growers seek to escape by carrying their stock more than one year. It was not many years ago that plants one year on the benches were unceremoniously dumped on the rubbish heap, but a better disposition of them has been found. Credit must be given to Lewis Ullrich, Tiffin, O., for showing that the year-old rose plants could be turned into money. Mr. Ullrich read a paper before his local horticultural society in which he told how to handle these plants. The result was that he has each year sold increasing numbers and others in the trade are doing likewise. Frequently he is asked if the plants will endure the winter. His reply is that at the price they are sold the purchaser can well afford to replant each year, for a good showing of bloom is assured from spring planting. The South Park Floral Co., New Castle, Ind., has taken up the idea and sells by mail all over the country, securing its orders by means of liberal advertising in the general magazines.

ROSE COLUMBIA.

The rose Columbia is the result of a cross between Bon Silene and President Carnot. The flowers are large and full and of a fine shade of pink in color, with a deeper shading in the center. The keeping quality of the flower is excellent and it does not fade. The buds are borne on long, stiff stems, with heavy, dark green foliage. It is a strong and vigorous grower and produces flowers in abundance during the winter, just like its parent, Bon Silene. It originated several years ago with Paul Niehoff, Lehighton, Pa., who has worked up a large stock and says it is easy to grow and does not need a high temperature.

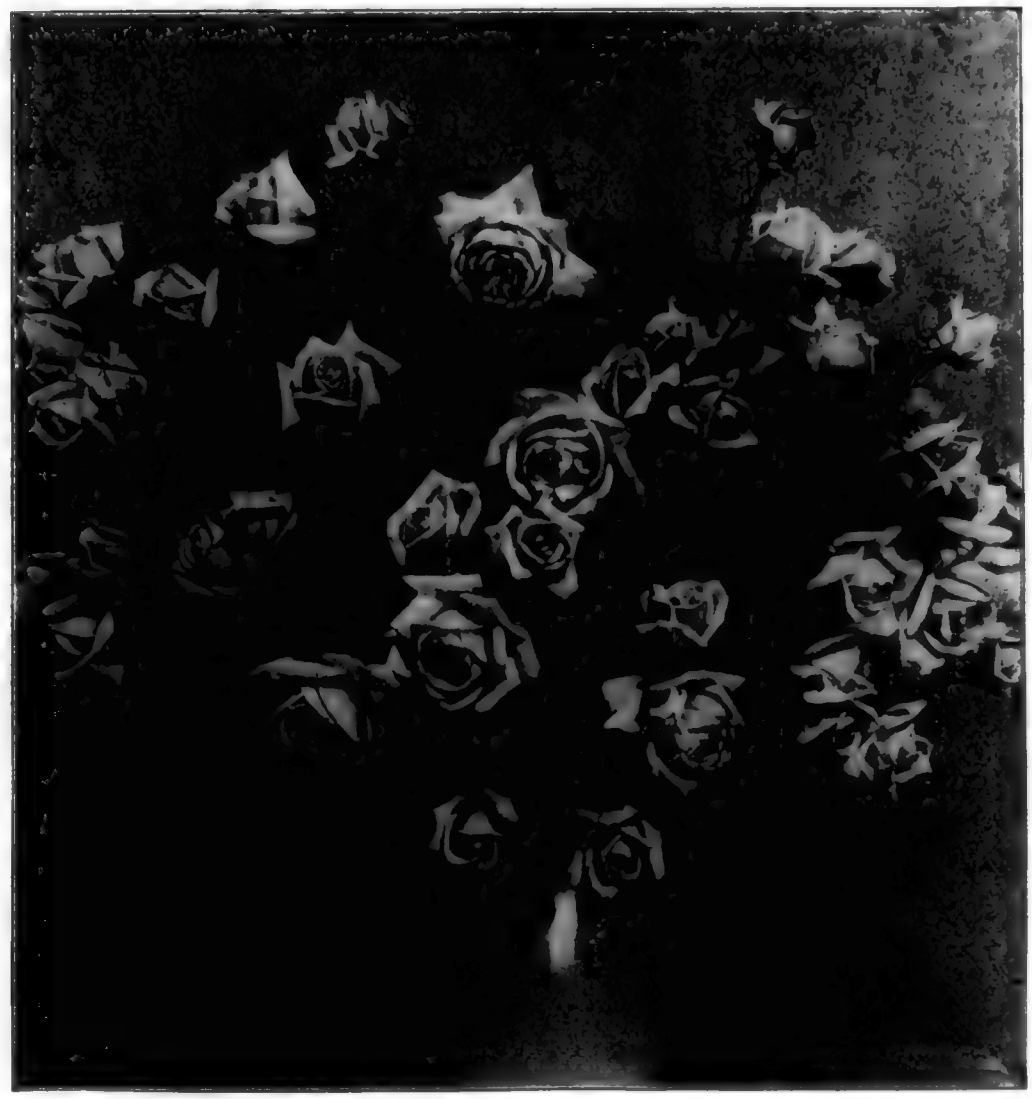
SMALL ROSE HOUSE.

I am about to plant a small house, 18x24, with Bride, Maid, Richmond, and Killarney roses. The center bench is to be 6x18, side benches 3x24. My soil is inclined to be light. I have no old cow manure, but have plenty of two-year-old horse manure, and sheep and chicken manure; also fine bone meal. What would you advise me to do? How many plants will it take to plant the house?

The quality of soil can be improved by an admixture of clay, say in the proportion of one to four. In the absence of cow manure well-decomposed horse manure is the best substitute. Sheep manure can also be used, but this would be of more service if used in the mulch during winter, or when the plants require additional feeding. Chicken manure, being strong and of a very caustic nature, had better be left out. Bone meal can safely be added to the compost at planting time, one 3-inch potful being sufficient at that stage to every bushel of compost.

The quantity of plants required to fill the center bench, if planted one foot apart with a clear margin from the side boards, would be exactly 108. For side benches, giving them the same area, seventy-two plants to each bench would be required; total, 252.

This arrangement of the benches, however, is sad waste of planting room, giving far too much space to walks. Have two benches twenty-seven inches wide next the walls and two center beds each four feet six inches wide. You will then have three walks each eighteen inches wide. This is dividing the house in a practical manner, and by planting at the same distance apart, will give a clear gain of seventy plants—no small gain in a house of these dimensions.



In order to get full advantage of the room on side benches, the plants should be placed in diagonal lines, staggered, as it is called. In a house of this size walks of a width of one foot six inches are ample for all working purposes.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

Representatives of Dutch bulb firms are everywhere in England just now, the first of May having brought a large number to our shores. It is very surprising how so many contrive to get sufficient orders to make the thing pay. I doubt whether some of them take enough orders to pay their expenses. One nursery firm told me that last year they had 150 calls from them, and just now he is interviewing them, or, rather, dismissing them, at the rate of five or six per day. Prices of all tulip bulbs have been advanced, in some cases more than 100 per cent over last year. Scarlet Duc sells at 36 shillings, Keizerskroon at 45 shillings, and La Reine at 24 shillings. These are absolutely prohibitive prices for the market forcer to make any profit in the existing state of the market, and it is difficult to see why prices are up to the extent they are. Certainly growers in Holland cleaned out their stocks last year extraordinarily well. Frost has considerably reduced the crop in Holland for the coming year, but still it is surprising, considering the bad state of trade in England, that such prices should be quoted.

Speaking further of tulips, that fine variety, Keizerskroon, is being used very largely in England for some really grand bedding effects, and it is probably the finest bedding tulip we have. I saw the other day, in the west of England, this variety used in conjunction with Yellow Prince and red polyanthus and an exceptionally fine effect was produced. Being struck with the exceptionally tall growth of Keizerskroon and dwarf growth of Yellow Prince, I made inquiries and found that extra large bulbs of the former were used, and second-size bulbs of the latter. They were planted alternately. The Keizerskroon gave the brilliant red and yellow effect some two feet from the ground; the Yellow Prince gave the bright yellow effect some nine inches up the stems of the former, while the polyanthus gave the red ground effect, and the leaves quite covered the ground with green. I also learned that some of the foliage of the tulips had been broken off so as to prevent an overcrowded appearance. The effect on the whole was very pleasing, and well worth copying by private gardeners and park people. J. B.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Vases and Veranda Boxes.

Although it is nearly midsummer, yet such is our climate that it is scarcely safe to put out tender plants. May 19 coleus outdoors received a chill that made them shrivel up. The subject I want to discuss may seem rather late, vases and veranda boxes, but there will be more filled after June 1 than before that date.

For years there has been a good deal of humbug and disappointment connected with the vases that go to our cemeteries, many of them to be exposed to the blazing sun and fierce winds and not always receiving the best of care. I notice there is a good deal of sameness in the vases in our beautiful Forest Lawn, as it is the only kind of decoration allowed in this fine cemetery.

It is not easy to introduce much variety. A white iron vase is filled with Nutt geraniums. This is so prevalent that it has become monotonous. After all, this sameness is better than a tattered and torn vase, with the so-called vines blown to shreds, which we call a mixed vase.

Geraniums for Vases.

First of all you must fill the vase as your customer desires, but many of these good people discreetly may be talked into ordering what you know is best for the place the vase is to go. If it is a decidedly shady situation, the geranium is not the thing, but begonias of the Vernon type and the tuberous section make a fine show. In sunny and exposed situations there is no equal to the zonal geraniums and S. A. Nutt, because of its healthy growth and free flowering qualities is one of the very best varieties; that is why its use is overdone. There are others. Semi-doubles are much the best because heavy showers do not spoil their blooms. Beaute Poitevine, the fine salmon, has every requisite for such a purpose, and so has the fine pink, Francis Perkins. John Doyle, a fine scarlet, is another largely used. Castellane is a grand scarlet, Gloire de France, a beautiful combination of carmine and white, La Favorite, a fine white, which is a very agreeable relief to so much scarlet and crimson. All of the above are fine for vases. A fine pink for pots, Jean Viaud is of little use either as a bedder or for vases. In the former it goes all to foliage without flower and in the vase it starves to death.

If you will analyze the plants in a mixed vase you will find you could not buy the plants at wholesale prices and get your money back, but this is not the case when it is all filled with 4-inch geraniums. You will get at least $2 a dozen for them, none too much for the labor, soil and moss used and the carting.

Vines for Vases.

Now a word about the vines. With a very few exceptions they are very disappointing. They may be pretty and attractive when they leave the greenhouse, but a month later they look like a farmer's whiskers as shown on the "funny" page of the Sunday paper.

There is considerable variety in the plants that are used on the edges of vases. I have more than once mentioned them, but I know of none that will endure the drying winds and more or less neglect, except English ivy and Vinca major. The true ivy will be there all summer, just as you put it in, but the vinca is the more graceful. The variegated form is the favorite with most people and, if associated with pink geraniums, is to be preferred, but with the crimson and scarlet geraniums, the stronger growing green form, which I think is known as Harrisonii, is much better.

Miscellaneous Material.

Many people insist on a center plant of more height than the geraniums, and for this purpose there is one plant preeminent, Dracaena indivisa. It not only lives under these unfavorable conditions, but actually grows and improves.

A few people, who are carried away with the idea that they must have a drooping plant around the edge, will be satisfied with a row of the little, compact Mme. Salleroi or Abutilon Savitzii. It looks well and will always be neat and thriving.

There are a few other plants that can be used alone in a vase, particularly if it is of generous size. Dwarf, free-flowering cannas and Caladium esculentum make an agreeable change, or even a mass of one variety of coleus is pleasing. A single small specimen palm is a great relief to the eye among so much color, but most of your palms are unsuited for the purpose. The phœnix is the best, for it takes a lot of neglect to burn it.

Many people look upon these grounds as melancholy places, but the writer does not, and no one should. A cemetery should be as beautiful as our best parks, and if we could abolish the headstones and iron vases they would be. Make them beautiful gardens, keeping as near to nature as is possible and with as little of the artificial as is consistent with the use.

Veranda Boxes.

Now the veranda box conditions are entirely different. They usually receive faithful care. In many cases there is some shade from the lovely and patient trees and a host of plants that starve to death in a cemetery vase will thrive in a veranda box. We heard last summer a good deal from some trade journals about window boxes in our large cities, and we read from the travels of globe-trotters of some continental European cities where streets would be bare and hideous if it were not for the wealth of flowers cultivated in window boxes and converting the narrow streets into bowers of beauty, or at least of blossom.

This may be all right in a street where the inhabitants can indulge in no other kind of ornamental gardening, but where the residence stands back fifty to 100 feet and there is a beautiful lawn and flowering shrubs surrounding the house, boxes of flowers at every window would look very much out of place. You can overdo the use of flowers, as you can jewelry, perfume or highballs, not to mention the wretched coffin nails called cigarettes.

Buffalo for forty years took the lead in veranda boxes, many people having 100 lineal feet of this style of gardening, and it made many of our residence streets most beautiful. Nearly every plant that is used in flower gardening will do for veranda boxes, dwarf cannas, caladiums, fuchsias, geraniums, coleus, acalypha and, above all, a good sprinkling of the Boston fern. So good is this popular fern for the purpose that last year we filled several long boxes entirely with it, but only in exceptional cases do we recommend filling with one kind of plant.

Drooping Plants Needed.

Now, the chief beauty of veranda boxes is in the drooping plants, which should entirely obscure the face of the box. Here, where watering can be attended to daily, there is a great variety of material to choose from, for they are seldom exposed to sun and wind, as are the vases in bleak sections of cemeteries. The ivy geranium, senecio, lobelia, nasturtium, the money vine, variegated glechoma, vincas and many others are good. We once, years ago, grew two drooping vines that were splendid for this purpose, but indifference or neglect let them die out. The first was Pilogyne suavis and the other was Ipomæa Mortonii. They each made a perfect veil of greenery.

Build Cypress Boxes.

This business has taken a decided drop with us in this city, and largely because the boxes made of pine a dozen years ago have decayed, and the owners do not care to have new ones made. It is not a case of avoiding expense, but the old man grunts when Henrietta says, "Alphonse, our veranda boxes are worn out." He replies, "Oh, let them slide; don't bother about them this year," forgetting that this inexpensive embellishment has made our avenues famous for their beauty. We did not know enough years ago to have these boxes made of cypress; if we had, they still would be with us and we should be reaping the benefit of their endurance.

Bed of Canna Souvenir de Antoine Crozy Edged with Pennisetum Longistylum.

A good size for a box is ten inches wide at the top, nine inches at the bottom and six inches deep, with several augur holes in the bottom to afford a drainage. Have them made in six-foot lengths, so that they can be handled by two men and can be filled at the greenhouse. Such a box, painted dark green, or the same color as the veranda, is worth about 35 cents per lineal foot. The filling may vary according to quality, but a fair price is 75 cents per foot.

I meant to add in connection with cemetery talk that too many people think it essential that their iron vase must be painted white, and this adds to the monotonous glare of scarlet and white. There should be more dark green, drab or stone color. They soil and show much less rust than when white, and it is a pleasant change to the everlasting white now so generally used.

Filling the Vases.

You should not fill these boxes or vases and let them stand in a greenhouse, for they quickly make a forced growth, which suffers greatly when exposed to outside elements. Fill them in your back yard and, after one thorough watering and time allowed to settle and dry, ship them off to their destination.

The last word is—remember that after they make roots they will not have a seventh of the space in which to grow that plants have in a sensibly planted flower bed, and therefore not only should the soil be fresh and good, but in addition to a fourth of animal manure you should add a quart of bone meal to every bushel of soil.

Unreasonable people, and that means the great majority, especially the dear ladies, expect a veranda box to look as full and blooming on the day it arrives as on the first day of August, so it is necessary that you put in the plants twice as thick as they should be and a crowding takes place later, when thinning out must be done. Instruct your patrons on this point if you want a continuance of their patronage.

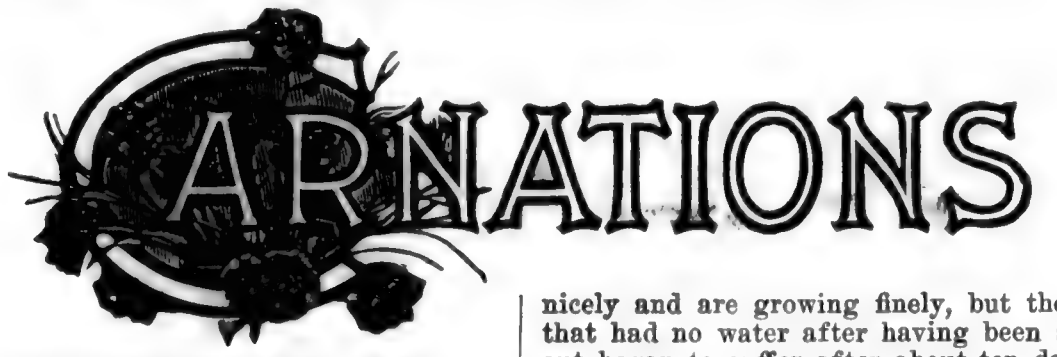
PENNISETUM FOR EDGING.

For the edging of beds of many moderately tall-growing plants there is no better material than the pennisetum. It is now late for growing one's own stock, but all dealers in herbaceous plants will supply the two common varieties at a price which makes them not expensive. The name comes from penna, a feather, and seta, a bristle, and is aptly descriptive, for at a distance the effect is feather-like, while the spike is composed of bearded bristles. P. longistylum is, perhaps, the finest grass commonly grown for its flowers. At Lincoln park, Chicago, each season P. longistylum is used to very good effect as edging for beds of cannas.

The propagation of the pennisetum is very simple. Take up three or four clumps in the fall, trim off the foliage, etc., place in a box and set them under the bench in a house with a temperature of 40 or 45 degrees. In March shake out the soil, tear the clumps to pieces and pot the pieces in a 3-inch or 4-inch pot. They are then placed in a house with a temperature of 60 degrees and an even moisture maintained. They make plants in a short time and are bedded out the latter part of May or early in June.

The plants can also be grown from seed, but the above method makes plants quicker. To start a stock seed could be used. Early sowing is always necessary in order to get a showing before the season is over. The old plants may be taken up and wintered anywhere that frost is not admitted. In the spring some growers divide into pieces for a 3-inch pot, set in flats of soil in a greenhouse to start growth, then pot, later move to a cold frame and they have less need for care and an earlier showing.

THE BUILDING BOOM.



Referring to recent comments on the extent of this year's boom in greenhouse building, A. Dietsch Co., Chicago, through Carl Ickes, supplies some interesting particulars. The increase in their business the present season has been much the greatest in the history of the concern, which was one of the first in the west to take up the supplying of greenhouse material. Years ago Mr. Dietsch did a general milling business in what was then the outskirts of Chicago. He supplied all sorts of lumber milled for all sorts of uses. Nothing was more natural than that, when greenhouse building began north of Chicago, he should be called on for roof material. It was not long before this became the principal department of the business. Mr. Dietsch always has enjoyed the full confidence of the largest growers for the Chicago market and Mr. Ickes says that it is because three or four of them are building big ranges that their business shows such a phenomenal increase this year. He has special reference to Budlong and the Reinbergs, but their largest order, for material for a plant of 110,400 square feet of glass, came from a concern in Ohio.

Up to May 12 the season's orders totaled 166 greenhouses of varying dimensions. Of these all but sixteen houses had been shipped and quite a number were up and planted. Of these 150 houses Mr. Ickes figured that the average width was twenty-one feet two inches and the average length 171 feet three inches. However, of the total, 7,208 lineal feet were of their patent short-roof construction, which considerably reduces the average width. These short-roof houses average 144 feet in length. They find that for wide houses the width of twenty-seven feet is preferred, with bars fourteen feet long for the slope to the south and sixteen feet to the north. Besides these houses structures twenty feet wide seem to be the next in favor, although of course all widths occur. The height of the gutter ranges from six feet six inches to seven feet six inches, although in some cases the gutters are set higher and in others lower. About eighty-five per cent of all the houses run east and west, with the shorter slope to the south. For north and south houses the even span is in the majority.

In regard to ventilation, the majority of florists prefer to hinge the ventilators below, to the header. The wide houses have the ventilators laid on both slopes, especially if they are intended for rose growing, while on narrower houses they mostly are laid on one slope, and, if there is a block of them, alternately on one side for one house and on the other for the next one.

Quite a number of the features of the Dietsch construction are covered by patent and on May 8 another was added, as on that date Mr. Ickes was allowed a patent for a metal strip to be used in connection with greenhouse gutters and plates to prevent breaking of glass.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Cultivating and Watering.

I have always contended that it is folly to water carnations in the field after they once get a fair start, even though the season may be quite dry. Experience has taught us that plants grown rather dry and slowly are in much better shape for transplanting than those that have an abundance of water all through the season. By this I do not mean that the plants can go without rain entirely, but I claim that if cultivated properly the plants will thrive and produce excellent plants with much less rain than most growers imagine, and a very few good, soaking rains will suffice for the outdoor season. The cultivating must be thorough and frequent, however. We cultivate just as soon after each rain as the soil can be worked satisfactorily, and if it does not rain for a week we go over them again. So they are cultivated at least once each week, and in some instances oftener.

Every grower knows the wisdom in keeping the surface of the soil on his benches loosened up, or the value of a mulch of loose material to keep in moisture. Just so in the field. When the hot sun beats down and draws the moisture out of the ground a layer of loose soil will help wonderfully to hold the moisture. No doubt you have noticed how quickly the soil dries out and bakes after a rain if it is not loosened up. That is not the only time the soil will bake, however. You will notice that even if the soil appears dry after the sun beats down on it several days, it forms a crust on top, perhaps on account of the dew, and in time it will bake just as it does after a rain. The soil should never be allowed to get into such a condition, as it is very injurious to the plants, often burning the foliage, and several good, soaking rains are required to put the soil into proper condition again. Frequent cultivating will prevent all this, the more frequent the better.

This spring we have found it necessary to lay a water pipe out to the carnation field and do some watering. On May 18 we had our first rain in over two weeks, and the ground was getting very dry in places. Those plants that were set out before the previous rain took hold nicely and are growing finely, but those that had no water after having been set out began to suffer after about ten days of drouth. A good watering from the hose of course did them a world of good, but the rain was of much greater value.

In a case of this kind, of course, it would be foolish to sit by and let the plants dry up. A watering, whether it is in the shape of rain or from the hose, is necessary to settle the soil around the roots, just as it is when you plant on your benches or in pots. We do not expect to water these plants any more, however.

When you water be sure it is heavy enough to go through the dry soil. A light watering will do very little good, as the sun will soon draw it out of the soil, and it will have to be repeated frequently to do any good at all. A thorough soaking and then cultivation as soon as the ground is fit is the proper way. In that way it will do almost as much good as a rain.

A good rain, however, beats all the watering you can do. Not because rain water is any better than any other, but because when it rains, the atmosphere becomes moisture-laden and the moisture is not drawn from the soil as quickly as it is when the atmosphere is dry and the sun is beating down. A half-inch of rain is better than an inch of water from the hose on a hot day. So do not resort to watering except to get your plants started or very extreme cases of drouth, but keep the cultivator going, and depend on it to keep your soil in good condition.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

[The Culture of Water Lilies and Aquatic Plants, by Peter Henderson & Co.]

The latest of the many special publications of Peter Henderson & Co. is a revised edition of "The Culture of Water Lilies and Aquatic Plants." It is a handsomely printed pamphlet of forty-four pages and contains excellent chapters on the several phases of water gardening, including instructions for the making of water gardens and the selection of stock for such purposes. There are a number of pages devoted to descriptive lists of varieties and also a chapter on raising water lilies from seed. The book is freely and handsomely illustrated. The commercial side is represented only by a couple of pages of index and price list at the back.

THE MAGNOLIA.

The first flowers of spring are always in demand, and every florist who handles flowering trees and shrubs has many calls for those earliest to bloom. Of these none is more attractive than Magnolia Yulan, usually known as Magnolia conspicua. It is among the first to flower, its large, white blooms expanding before other subjects have shown bud and, in fact, before its own leaves have started.

Wilhelm Miller, in the Gardening Magazine, writes: "Imagine a symmetrical tree 20x20 feet evenly laden throughout with thousands of these white chalices that turn to stars just before the flowers drop their petals and make a snow bank on the lawn. Nothing purer or sweeter can be imagined, but it is a little cold for the time of year. The first flowers of spring are pallid. Who can make red blood in the marble cheek of this flower?"

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken in April at Garfield park, Chicago. The ever-increasing number of florists who handle hardy flowering stock at a profit will find a plant of this magnolia on their home grounds the means of bringing them a large number of orders for it.

FLOWERING TREES AND SHRUBS.

[A paper read before the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, Madison, N. J., on May 9, 1906, by Arthur Herrington.]

The floral story of the year, as we read it in successive chapters contributed by the flowering trees and shrubs, is one of rich and fascinating beauty. "Age can not wither nor custom stale" this infinite variety of beautiful life which contributes so much to the joy of living, especially just at this time, when vegetation awakes from its long winter sleep and bursts into glowing masses of brilliant bloom.

Almost every country has its characteristic features of vegetation, but the floral feature that most impresses me in American gardens is the lavish profuseness with which our flowering trees and shrubs enwreath themselves in blossom every year. You must have remarked and noticed it, and appreciated the enhanced beauty of many things that we have known all our lives, but only in latter years under American associations.

Let me cite but one instance—that of the glowing yellow Forsythia suspensa. It has been a familiar shrub to me since boyhood days and there comes back to me recollections of benumbed fingers training and tying the shoots to garden walls on cold winter days, and then the subsequent flowering; but what was the result and what the display in comparison with that of the same shrub grown here without special care.

Forsythia in Flower.

As I write these notes I look out of the window, and two miles away I can easily distinguish a mass of forsythia in flower upon a hillside, and what is there to compare with it?—and at so early a date when even green leaves exist only in tender, budding embryos. For equal effect in color I can only recall one thing—a mass of yellow broom, or of furze, as they grow on dry slopes in England, but these are not hardy here. What the forsythia so fittingly exemplifies is further and frequently expressed by other shrubs that succeed it in times of blooming.

The importance of these things should not be lost to us, because they are common, cheap, easily-grown, hardy shrubs. This precious heritage of bloom, with which we are so richly endowed, should be an incentive to effort to give its fullest expression in every possible way; for, I am sure, given area and scope, we may, with hardy flowering trees and shrubs alone, make gardens and parks of surprising beauty equaled by few, and excelled by none in any country.

Modern Gardens.

Why should we spend time and money in endeavoring to produce at the best, weak imitations of so-called Italian gardens, under conditions and environments to which they are not fitted? These ancient and overpraised formal gardens belong to a past age and generation, where art supplanted nature because the rich storehouse of nature was unknown to the men of those times. Travel and research have brought to us from all parts of the globe, and latter day hybridization has further amplified, a wealth of material that does not harmonize with garden formalism, but does permit the creation of a succession of pictures, changing with the days and weeks, for a long continued period. Let the garden unfold the story of the year and be a living floral calendar; so that if, perchance, we could be unmindful of, or forget, the actual period, we may read it in the floral pictures as they appear.

We will now pass in brief review the hosts of flowering trees and shrubs that our gardens should possess, at least in such part as they are adapted therefor.

One of the earliest harbingers of spring among the shrubs is the little Lonicera fragrantissima, its flowers individually small and insignificant, so much so that generally the first intimation we have of its flowering is when we catch a whiff of its fragrant breath upon the air. It makes a large bush and early flowering and delicate fragrance are its particular attributes.

Varieties of Forsythia.

The forsythias come next, and no words of praise can ever exaggerate the beauty of these. Individually or in a mass, in any soil, aspect or situation, they give us beauty of the highest type. The oldest and best-known variety is Fortunei. Although the catalogues make mention of F. intermedia and F. suspensa, the difference in these is but slight. Forsythia viridissima, however, has more marked distinction in habit of growth, size of leaf, color of bark, and also is about a week later in time of flowering.

Simultaneously with the foregoing, magnolias burst suddenly into bloom, and what an array of beauty they can give us! The entire family in scope and importance justifies an essay on it alone. First comes the graceful M. stellata, also known as M. Halleana, and how free it always blooms from an infant bush, three feet or less in height upwards, bearing myriads of fragile, snow-white flowers, often sadly buffeted by cold spring storms, yet we could ill dispense with its short-lived display. Another magnolia that resembles it in some degree, but is rather shy-blooming, yet, withal, one to have in any collection, is M. Kobus, or Thurberi.

Next comes the Yulan (M. conspicua), throwing its great white cups open to the spring sun; and a few days after it, the gem of the whole family—M. Soulangeana. This is of hybrid origin, the Yulan one of its parents, M. obovata the other. It shows characteristics of both plants, flowers abundantly when young and in a shrubby state, and still more aoundantly when it ultimately reaches the dimensions of a good-sized tree.

Magnolia Youlan at Garfield Park, Chicago.

The Best Magnolia.

To him who is so unfortunate that he can have only one magnolia, this is the one he should plant. M. speciosa is another hybrid with some strong resemblance to the preceding kind, differing chiefly in its free-branched symmetry of growth, having flowers not quite so large, and it flowers a few days later, while stray flowers prolong its blooming till foliage is well developed. M. Lennei is a striking beauty and, unlike all the others, its great, cup-shaped flowers are a rich, claret color externally, the flowers heavy and listing, and their period of duration and production considerably prolonged.

Then in the later weeks come other great magnolias that attain to tree form, but time does not permit of enlarging upon these. The snowy mespilus and Amelanchier Botryapium are also gems of early spring days that enwreath themselves in garlands of fleecy white bloom. The season advances and the Judas tree next commands attention by the strong tone of color it adds to the ever-changing scene. Cercis Canadensis we call it by name, but how shall we fittingly express in words its exceeding beauty and lavish profusion—twigs, thick branches, aye, and often the main trunk itself, covered with clusters of purple bloom! Cercis Japonica, a Japanese relative, is also distinct and showy, having large flowers; but in our latitude, winter often kills it, so it is rarely seen to advantage.

Spiraeas.

Next in the procession come the spiræas; the first of this great family, of which there are at least two dozen species, is the double-flowered plum-leaved Spiræa prunifolia. It ranks as one of our very best flowering shrubs, so profuse and lasting is its bloom. S. Thunbergii blooms at the same time, has tiny flowers, but in such myriads that a mass of it viewed from a distance suggests a snowbank that has not yet disappeared in spite of the spring sun. S. Reevesiana, single and double, is a good species, while a little later in its own time of blooming. S. Van Houttei is easily the most graceful and most attractive flowering shrub of its time. Others follow in succession on through the months of June and July.

Another great family that, by close relationship, suggests itself for associated planting, contains the almond, peach, plum, cherry, apple and the Japanese quince. Think of the possibilities of these alone for making a garden picture of incomparable beauty! Space prohibits enlarging upon at least a hundred varieties included in this great group. Unfortunately, in latter days we are to be denied much of their beauty unless by persistent spraying we shall eventually get the upper hand to the extent of entirely exterminating the devastating San Jose scale. Bear this fact in mind in your planting: all these ornamental types of that great natural order that gives us our orchard fruits, are susceptible to attack and quick extermination by the aforementioned pest.

Fortunately, most of the other families of blooming shrubs are immune, otherwise the outlook for tree and shrub life in parks and gardens would be a dreary one.

The Later Blooms.

As May declines and June arrives, new hosts come trooping on the scene. Think of the dogwood and try to express the joy and admiration it excites in you. Then there is lilac time, always a well-remembered period of the year, even in the old days when we had only the few natural species. Now, thanks to the hybridizers' skill, we have varieties galore of a quality undreamed of not so many years ago, in single and double flowers, larger individually, gigantic in the cluster, and the range of color a phenomenal one from white through tender pinks and exquisite blues to deep, dark, purplish red.

In graceful, delicate contrast to great masses of lilac, we have the snowdrop tree (Halesia tetraptera and H. diptera), with myriads of white bells depending from their far-flung branches. Philadelphus and deutzia are two more important families and if we want relief from so much of snowy whiteness as seen in these, we turn to the weigelas in variety of hue from pink to crimson. The viburnums, too, impress their importance on us, and the wild roses we must have in their season, such species as rugosa, lucida, setigera, multiflora and Wichuriana.

The mention of our rhododendrons, kalmias and azaleas conjures up visions of greatest beauty, provided we have the conditions that suit them. Failing such it is far better to ignore them, for adaptability of material to existing conditions is always the best course to pursue. Enough has been said to prove the amazing variety of flowering trees and shrubs.

Care and Attention.

A few words in conclusion may be said as to care and attention. In all gardening practice there is nothing that gives so large a return at a minimum of cost at all comparable with flowering shrubs. They can all be easily and cheaply procured and planted with assurance of future satisfaction. The autumn months are the best for planting with few exceptions, one of the most noteworthy being the magnolias, which, owing to peculiar conditions of roots, should always be planted in spring.

The only actual important factor in subsequent treatment is the judicious use of the pruning-knife, and, judging from what one daily sees in many places, this matter is not properly understood. Indiscriminate winter pruning often results in cutting away one-half or more of the flowering wood. Some pruning is necessary for many of the subjects enumerated, but no hard and fast rule can be laid down. Generally speaking, however, there should be less winter and more summer pruning. No shrubs that flower in spring upon the wood of the previous season's growth (and these are the majority) should be winter-pruned. The opposite is equally true. Any shrubs that flower upon the current season's growth may be winter pruned. As for example, the althæas, or tree mallows, and the hydrangeas.

The bulk of the flowering shrubs, however, should be pruned immediately after flowering, such pruning to be the proper thinning and cutting away of the shoots that have flowered. This practice encourages a strong new growth, insures good flowering wood for another year, and preserves that all-essential individuality of form and varied habit of growth that marks the different species and aids effective disposition of them in any general planting scheme.

OBITUARY.

Frank B. Smith.

Frank B. Smith died at his home in Roselawn, Danville, Ill., on May 13, of Bright's disease.

Several months ago he suffered a severe illness, but became much improved in health and able to attend to business. On May 11 he became ill while directing work in the field and was assisted to the house. After that his condition grew worse rapidly. He was unconscious Saturday and Sunday and the death summons came Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Deceased was the son of the late Joseph Smith, a veteran miller. He was born in New York fifty-nine years ago and came west with his parents when a child. He was educated at Stockwell, Ind. He then came to Myersville, where he and his father conducted a mill for a number of years. In 1875 he removed to Danville and for a number of years owned a half-interest in the old mill on Logan avenue. This he sold and purchased a farm. He engaged in farming and gardening, then built greenhouses and since 1885 had been a florist. He was also well known as a chicken fancier. Most of his time the past two years was devoted to the raising of fine chickens, the flower business being looked after by his sons, Joseph J. and Herbert E., who will continue the business under the name of Frank B. Smith's Sons.

Deceased had been a member of Kimber Methodist church for years and was a member of the K. of P. and the Court of Honor. Mr. Smith is survived by his wife and four children, Raymond D., Joseph J., Herbert E., and Mrs. John Lee.

George H. Rowden.

George H. Rowden, of Wallingford, Conn., died May 18 at the age of 66. He had been in poor health for some time, but was considered to be improving. Last Friday, however, he was heard to fall to the floor, and was dead soon after the arrival of the physician.

Mr. Rowden was born in England. He spent a large part of his life as a landscape gardener, and was employed by Edward Miller, Sr., of Meriden, in that capacity for twelve years. He was in the florist business for twenty-five years, and conducted a store in Wallingford at the time of his death.

Deceased was an Odd Fellow and a member of the Royal Arcanum. He leaves a widow, three daughters and a son, William, who was associated with him in the business.

William J. Schray.

William Jacob Schray, who died in St. Louis on Tuesday, May 15, as reported in the Review of last week, was born March 7, 1834, in Würtemberg, Germany. He served as an apprentice in the business of gardener in Stuttgart, Germany, city of Munich and other parts of Bavaria until 1852. When he came to St. Louis, in 1855, he became landscape gardener to the late Henry Shaw, who founded the Missouri Botanic Garden, in which capacity he served two years. In 1857 he established himself in the florist business, which grew to one of the largest in the city. He was numbered among the pioneer German-American residents in the city and widely known among his fellow countrymen and justly esteemed by all classes. He served one year as park commissioner and aided in beautifying the city, as well as in the ornamentation of private grounds and stocking private conservatories. The funeral took place Friday afternoon, May 18, from his late residence, and was largely attended, fifty members of the St. Louis Florists' Club being present to pay their last respects to a fellow member. The floral designs were many and beautiful. Mr. Schray was married forty-nine years and leaves a wife and two sons, Emil and Julius. A host of friends in the trade mourn his loss. His two sons will continue the business at the old stand. J. J. B.

Anthony Cook.

"Early to bed, early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." It did all these for Anthony Cook, who lived the simple life to the age of 90 years. He died May 13, at his home for half a century, 1124 West Mulberry street, Baltimore.

Born January 6, 1817, in Derkheimer, near Hartz-on-the-Rhine, Germany, and the son of a florist to a royal family, Mr. Cook ran away from home to escape a condition unbearable to this lover of flowers—service in the army. He arrived in New York when about 21 years old. Thence he went to Philadelphia and worked for a year as an assistant gardener. He then located in Baltimore. His first step was to rent an acre on Lexington street near Carrollton avenue, which at that time was a thinly settled section. Beginning in a modest way, he carried his first crops to Lexington market in a wheelbarrow. Later he was able to buy a horse and wagon, and in the course of time he bought his land. The building of houses then encroached upon this acre, and, receiving a good offer for his property, he moved into what he considered the country, and bought the property on Mulberry street, which took up most of the block between Carrollton and Arlington avenues. Here he has remained and made a fortune and at the same time an honored name. His long life he often attributed to his regular habits and domesticity. It was his invariable habit to rise at 5 a. m., break his fast at 6, lunch at noon and dine again at 6 p. m. At 7:30 he was in bed.

Mr. Cook often claimed to have brought the first zonal geraniums to this country, and he also always insisted that the rose which we now all know as American Beauty originated on his place, finding its way thence to the Bancroft garden and later to Field's. It is certain that Mr. Cook raised years ago thousands of seedling roses. Many of these went out in such ways that he lost track of them, but some he named and introduced to the trade. Best known of these is the tea rose Cornelia Cook, raised in 1855 and named for a daughter. The family was at that time known as Koch, not having as yet adopted the English form of the name.

Mr. Cook is survived by two children, Charles Cook and Cornelia Cook. Eight grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren also survive him. The son has for some years conducted the business.

COLORS FOR FRONT.

Knowing you receive scores of queer inquiries, I will add one to the list, which I think Gertrude Blair can handle with ease. I am about to place a new large front window in my store; twelve feet long; door at the north. Am under a private dwelling, occupying the ground floor. I wish to paint the front of the building, shutters included, two stories above the store. What would be the most striking colors of paint to use? I wish to keep all the woodwork of the store, window, door, etc., white. What colors should be used? S. T. R.

The most "striking" color is not, perhaps, the one which is in best taste. The general opinion is that the handsomest store front in New York is that at the Rosary, which is entirely covered, except for the glass, with birch-bark. If a loud color is wanted, paint it red or yellow, with the white trimmings. A harmonious but softer combination would be olive green with white. A good house painter would be better able to offer advice. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

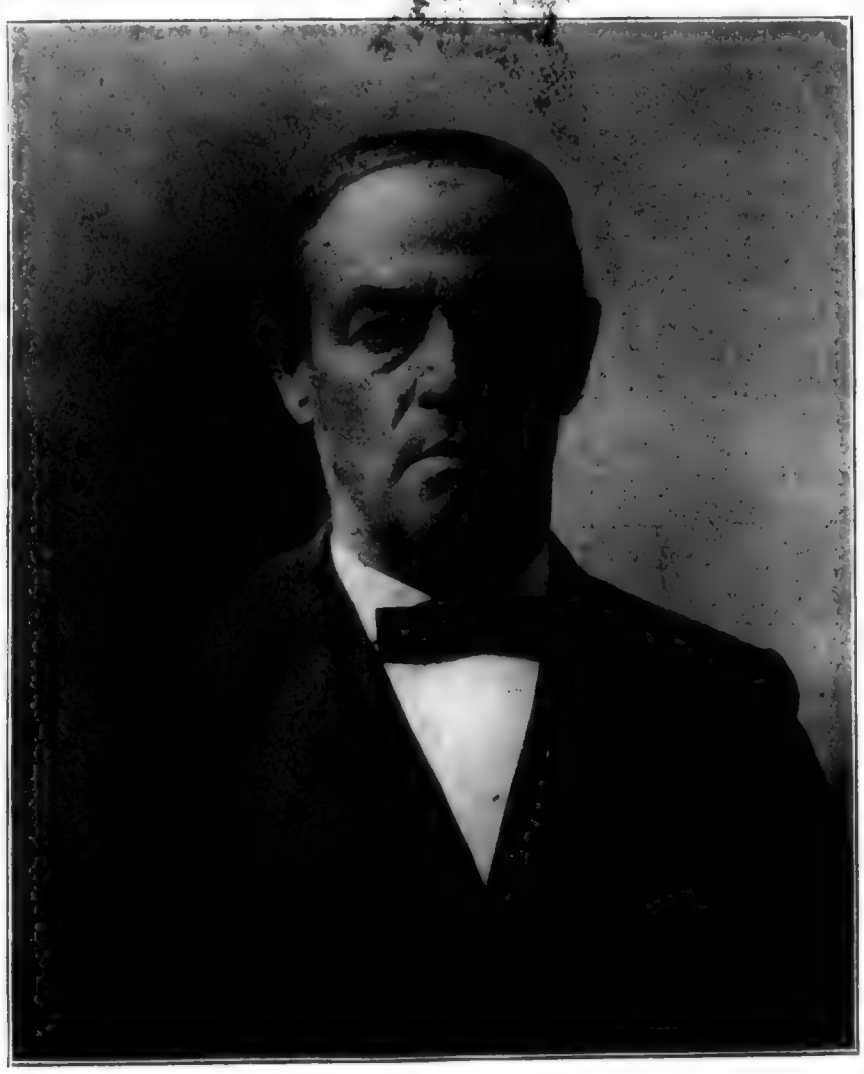
Greenhouse Heating.



A HEATING PROBLEM.

I have a greenhouse 20x48, east and west, on low ground. I wish to build on the east end, on a higher level, an addition 20x24. Twenty-five feet east of the new greenhouse is a two-story dwelling. I have a Kroeschell No. 1 boiler located in the west end of the line. Will it be practicable to heat the three buildings with this system, the pipes being on different levels? What size flows and returns must I use for the greenhouses, and what size for the dwelling? How can I protect the underground pipes between dwelling and greenhouse, and also those under the dwelling, the ground freezing to a depth of three or four feet? Can I use manifolds for hot water in the returns in the greenhouses? How much incline should the flows and returns have, and where should the air cocks, and valves for regulating temperature be placed? What size should the expansion tank be, and where should it be located? M. J. B.

While I have never piped a house with a step of this character in it with hot water, I see no reason why it cannot be successfully accomplished by carrying the riser under the ridge to the far end of the new house, making a step in it by the use of 45's where the difference in level occurs. At the far end of the house, break it up to supply three built manifolds under the three benches; at the step simply step each return down either with L's or 45's and carry them to near the main return before combining them in a manifold.

The main flow through the houses should be 2½-inch, the distributing pipes from it to manifolds 2-inch and the returns 1¼-inch. There should be eighteen returns to maintain a temperature of 70 degrees, six in each of the three manifolds under the benches. If the dwelling is to have four radiators of 100 square feet each, a 2-inch pipe from boiler to first floor radiators will be sufficient, and 1¼-inch pipes from first to second floor. The return should be the same size. The difference in level should make no difference, provided the expansion tank is located twelve or fifteen feet higher than the most elevated radiator in the system. Each radiator should be provided with an air valve, and an air vent should also be placed at the highest point in the flow pipe supplying the greenhouse system. The pipe to the expansion tank might be connected to the return leading from the house system to the boiler, and be located in the attic of the house; but an overflow pipe must be provided to carry off expansion or any overflow in filling the system. HEATING WITH A FLUE.

Could I heat twenty cold frames 6x18 by running flues the entire length of the beds and about two feet in from the ends, with a stack at the far end? I want a temperature of from 45 to 50 degrees, to grow vegetables. C. F. B.

A hotbed for growing vegetable plants can be constructed so as to be successfully heated with hot air from a flue instead of by fermenting manure. Instead of making the bed six feet wide it would be better to make it twelve feet wide. A bed twelve feet wide and fifty feet long can be successfully heated by a furnace connecting with a flue. Such beds are extensively used for starting sweet potatoes and are constructed somewhat as follows:

Choose, if possible, a gently-sloping area with exposure to south and east. Arrange the bed so as to get as much sun as possible. If the ground rises three to three and a half feet in fifty feet, make the floor of the bed level. At the end where the floor is raised three feet or more, build a brick furnace long enough to burn cord wood without sawing it, if this is to be the fuel. Make the walls of the furnace eight or twelve inches thick, cover with bricks supported by tee-irons or by a metal plate, and then add a coating of sand at least two inches thick.

From the end of the furnace carry a terra cotta chimney about twenty feet and allow it to discharge into the space under the floor of the hotbed.

At the far end of the bed from the furnace, which should be about ten or twelve inches off the ground, erect a board chimney ten or twelve feet high and about 8x8 inches square. Arrange a damper, or lid, over top of the chimney to regulate the draft. Provide the furnace with a grate and a good door and arrange the brickwork about the front so as to prevent escaping flames from setting the frame on fire. Make the sides of the space beneath the floor of the hotbed tight, so as to confine all the heat and smoke of the furnace in the area beneath the bed and force it to escape through the chimney. A ridge pole can be provided through the center of the bed and guides for the sash from it to the sides of the frames. Four inches of soil should be sufficient if 8-inch or 10-inch side boards are used. L. C. C.

STEAM OR HOT WATER.

I am building six new houses on a hillside. They are 22x200. They average ten feet to ridge, and have 3½-foot side walls. The boiler pit is at the southeast corner of the range. The farthermost point from the boiler is 350 feet. The houses each have a fall of ten feet from west to east, and are in three groups, two in a group—with a 10-foot space between each. I have some 2-inch pipe and an abundance of 1-inch pipe which I would like to utilize. I want to arrange so as to use either hot water or steam. What should be the size of the openings in the boiler for flow and return? The pipes will be on the center and side posts of the houses, as we will use solid beds. We wish to maintain a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees with outside temperature at 15 degrees above zero. C. W. C.

To heat six houses each 22x200 to a temperature of 50 degrees with hot water will require 1,350 square feet of radiation for each house, or a total of 8,100 square feet. To do the same thing with low-pressure steam will require 1,050 square feet for each house, or a total of 6,300. On a shifting system the minimum, or steam, basis can be used as a basis for piping the houses. Two boilers with capacity for about 7,000 feet of radiation each, with 4-inch openings for flow pipes and 2-inch or 3-inch openings for returns will be satisfactory if the main riser is six inches. The main flow pipe for each house should be 3½-inch, and the returns should not be smaller than 1¼-inch; 1½-inch and 2-inch would be better for hot water, although the 1¼-inch will be best suited for steam.

In such a system it will be unwise to rely upon hot water except in early fall and late spring. For this reason it will undoubtedly be best to arrange the piping for steam and use 1¼-inch and 1½-inch pipe for all returns except the main, which should be at least a 3-inch pipe. Each house can be piped by carrying a 3½-inch riser from the main flow to the distant end of the house and there dividing it into three 2-inch branches to feed manifolds which shall in turn supply ten 1¼-inch returns. L. C. C.

UNDERGROUND CONDUITS.

Florists have often deplored the loss of heat resulting from the inefficiency of the old systems of underground steam and hot water transmission. It is not uncommon in mid-winter to see the ground over steam pipes free from snow and even showing green with grass, while there is a depth of several inches of snow on the surrounding surface.

There is now being placed upon the market a sectional tile pipe conduit, which meets a long-felt want in providing a conduit for pipes running underground, which should thoroughly insulate and protect the pipes, and which can be installed for a reasonable cost. This conduit consists of tile pipe made in top and bottom sections; this division being made by cutting half through the shell of the pipe before it is baked, and then breaking afterwards, so that the joint is very much like that made in replacing pieces of a broken plate, the use of neat hydraulic cement making it possible to put these sections together when desired, making practically a perfect-looking piece again. As the top and bottom sections are numbered to correspond, the same sections can always be mated, and thus a perfect joint is secured.

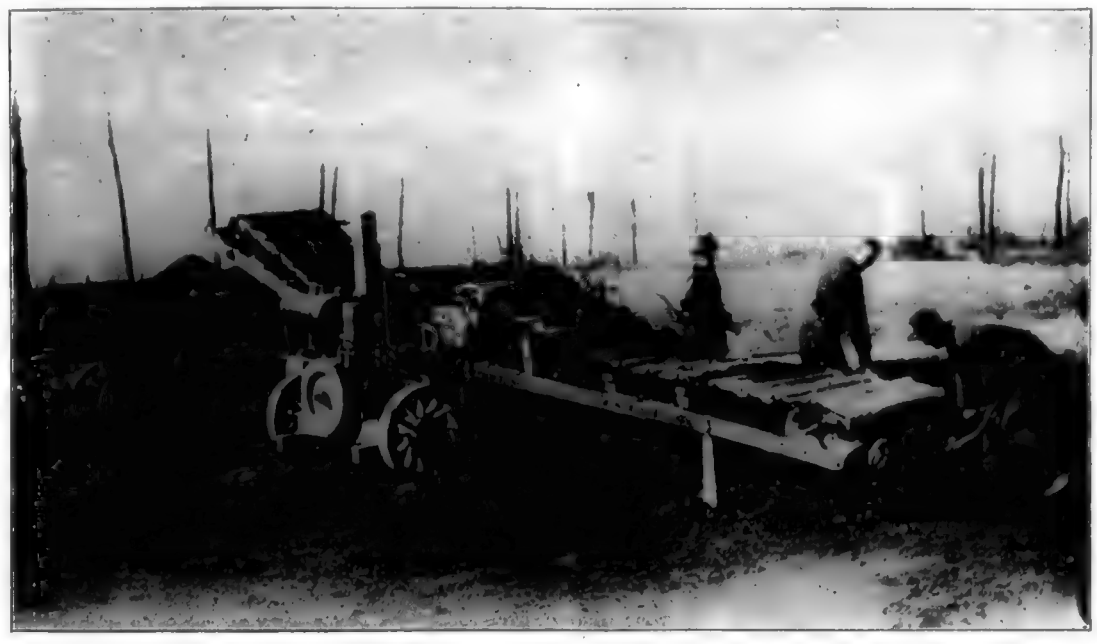
The support of the enclosed pipes is accomplished by supporting tee-sections, which are placed in the line of conduit from twelve to eighteen feet apart, depending upon the size of pipes enclosed. This supporting tee-section is placed firmly on a bed of concrete, which is carried up into the supporting tee-section, the concrete holding the metal roll frame carrying the rods and rolls upon which the pipes rest. Thus the entire weight of the pipes and their contents is entirely independent of the conduit itself, and it is so firm as to permit of any required weight and movement of the pipes without any injury to the conduit.

The conduit with supporting tees and roll frames is laid section by section until a line is completed, and then the pipes are put in place and tested, after which the insulation may be applied. This insulation may be of either the sectional pipe covering form, or what is more used and recommended is the "asbesto-sponge" conduit filling, with which the entire remaining space in the conduit about the pipes is filled.

It is customary to place under this conduit an underdrain to remove the surplus water, which would otherwise lie against the conduit and absorb the heat.

Certain features of this conduit are especially meritorious. The simplicity of the system is due to its few parts. The pipes may be installed more easily in this conduit than in other forms of conduit, and the insulation may be applied more easily, while the pipes can be reached for the purpose of repairing, if desired, as easily as any other form of conduit, except possibly the large tunnels, which are usually prohibitive on account of the cost.



The conduit is water, fire and acid proof; the conduit itself being indestructible, and no opening of the joints is caused by movement or weight of the pipes on account of the form of support provided.

Careful tests have been made to determine the loss of heat in transmitting steam underground in this form of conduit. The most recent test, which was made by Geo. H. Barrus, expert and consulting engineer, of Boston, has shown that the loss of heat was less than that usually found in pipes installed in buildings with the best commercial grades of sectional pipe covering, which would seem the most satisfactory in view of the fact that the pipes installed underground are placed in a more difficult position, because of the amount of water in the ground, and the lower temperature of the ground.

The details as to this new method of conserving heat are from data supplied by the H. W. Johns-Manville Co., who have done much for the economy of florists' fuel and who have published a neat illustrated booklet on the system here described.

Budlong's Gasoline Soil Pulverizer.

BUDLONG'S SOIL CRUSHER.

To the large growers for the Chicago market the question of a supply of soil is of importance second only to the coal supply, and entailing almost an equal amount of work. When a grower has anywhere from 100,000 to 1,000,000 square feet of bench surface and must bring his soil from a considerable distance, it means hard work and expensive work.

Most of the big growers north of Chicago go a considerable distance for their soil, and when they get it it is not always in the mechanical condition they would like. To remedy this defect A. H. Budlong, who manages the growing end of the J. A. Budlong business, has built the machine shown in the accompanying illustration. It is mounted on a low wagon, so that it may be moved from place to place. The apparatus is set up at the source of soil supply, instead of at the greenhouse, as is the usual custom. The soil from the field is thrown upon the first conveyer, which carries it in a never-ending stream up to the crusher and pulverizer, which rests on the wagon. Here it passes downward through the rollers and is put into the right mechanical shape. Falling upon the second conveyer, it is elevated and drawn into the waiting wagon without further handling by shovel. Mr. Budlong operates his soil crusher with gasoline engine power, also mounted on the wagon, and finds in it a very great saving over other methods of working his compost, to say nothing of accomplishing the desired result with the expedition essential where a large amount of material must be handled in a short time.

FORCING LETTUCE.

More failures in growing lettuce under glass can be traced to unsuitable soil than any other one cause. A good soil for lettuce should be a rich, mellow turfy loam and of a somewhat sandy character. Head lettuce requires a lighter soil than the loose or leafy varieties. All heavy clay soils should be avoided. A good compost for lettuce is composed of three parts of well-rotted sod mixed with one part of thoroughly rotted cow or stable manure and enough sand to make it gritty.

As to beds, lettuce can best be grown in solid beds because the moisture can be maintained more uniformly at the roots, also the temperature of the bed is always cool. Where benches only are available we must make the best of it. To grow the first crop, or that which comes into maturity about Thanksgiving, will take from eight to ten weeks. The crop that comes in about midwinter requires two to four weeks longer. If more houses than one are to be planted, various sowings must be made accordingly to keep up a steady supply. Make a sowing every ten days or two weeks.

The most profitable variety to grow will depend entirely on the market available. It is difficult to give advice as to the best varieties, as conditions vary widely in different sections of the country. If head lettuce is required I think Boston Market still holds its own. If loose or leafy lettuce is wanted, Grand manifolds under the three benches; at the step simply step each return down either with L's or 45's and carry them to near the main return before combining them in a manifold.

The main flow through the houses should be 2½ inch, the distributing pipes from it to manifolds 2 inch and the returns 1¼ inch. There should be eighteen returns to maintain a temperature of 70 degrees, six in each of the three manifolds under the benches. If the dwelling is to have four radiators of 100 square feet each, a 2-inch pipe from boiler to first floor radiators will be sufficient, and 1¼ inch pipes from first to second floor. The return should be the same size. The difference in level should make no difference. A vent of the expansion tank is eleven or fifteen feet higher than the most elevated radiator of the system. Each radiator should be provided with an air valve, and an air vent should also be placed at the highest point in the flow pipe supplying the greenhouse system. The pipe to the expansion tank might be connected to the return leading from the house system to the boiler, and be located in the attic of the house; but an overflow pipe must be provided to carry off expansion or any overflow in filling the system. FORCING LETTUCE.

More failures in growing lettuce under glass can be traced to unsuitable soil than any other one cause. A good soil for lettuce should be a rich, mellow turfy loam and of a somewhat sandy character. Head lettuce requires a lighter soil than the loose or leafy varieties. All heavy clay soils should be avoided. A good compost for lettuce is composed of three parts of well rotted sod mixed with one part of thoroughly rotted cow or stable manure and enough sand to make it gritty.

As to beds, lettuce can best be grown in solid beds because the moisture can be maintained more uniformly at the roots, also the temperature of the bed is always cool. Where benches only are available we must make the best of it. To grow the first crop, or that which comes into maturity about Thanksgiving, will take from eight to ten weeks. The crop that comes in about midwinter requires two to four weeks longer. If more houses than one are to be planted, various sowings must be made accordingly to keep up a steady supply. Make a sowing every ten days or two weeks.

The most profitable variety to grow will depend entirely on the market available. It is difficult to give advice as to the best varieties, as conditions vary widely in different sections of the country. If head lettuce is required I think Boston Market still holds its own. If loose or leafy lettuce is wanted, Grand Rapids seems to be in line. The demand is best and prices highest in January, February and March, so it is well to have the heaviest crop mature at that time, but growers must be guided by their market demand.

To be of the best quality lettuce must be grown rapidly, hence nitrogen is needful. This element can be supplied in the form of nitrate of soda; one-half ounce to a gallon of water, to be watered in, will give good results. The temperature of the house should be kept as steady as possible, at from 40 to 45 degrees at night with a rise to 60 or 65 degrees during the day with sunshine. Air should be admitted on all favorable occasions and the atmosphere should never be allowed to become close and stagnant. Most failures in lettuce forcing are due to bad ventilation.

Unwholesome soil, insects and fungus enemies should be watched very closely. Green fly is very troublesome and if it once gets a good foothold it is not easy to subdue. If the house is kept too warm it generally makes its appearance. Nicotine extract affords a good remedy. It should always be kept on hand.

Look out for the lettuce rot, or Botrytis vulgaris. It is generally found to exist if the house is kept too close and wet. Give plenty of air and raise the temperature a little.

Another trouble is mildew, but it can be kept in check with sulphur fumes. It is caused by sudden changes in the temperature and by growing the plants too soft. If the soil is stirred frequently and there is reasonable care in watering and in maintaining a uniform temperature there will seldom be any trouble with mildew. Leaf burn is another fungus that lettuce is heir to. It attacks the edges of the inner leaves, quickly disfiguring the heads. It occurs after a spell of cloudy weather. There are three things that suggest success. The first is to see that the soil is in a suitable condition; second, to control all atmospheric changes as much as possible, and third, to grow them on without any check.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Trade during the last week has been very good, and the only thing that we can say there is an oversupply of is roses. Great quantities of pink and white roses have been in the market since Easter, and the demand does not appear at all equal to the supply. J. H. Dunlop and the Toronto Floral Co. have been supplying some magnificent Beauties. Carnations have not been equal to the demand, and this helped to work off some of the oversupply of roses. However, at present writing carnations seem to be increasing, and with the advent of hot weather the rose supply will decrease. We expect that when the quantities of good roses are wanted for June weddings the supply will be away off. Sweet peas are in good supply. The supply of calla lilies and Harrisii lilies, of which there has been such an overabundance since Easter, is gradually decreasing, and we expect in another week that we will see but a few of them around.

The annual spring meet of the Ontario Jockey Club is making quite a stir in social circles. The Governor-General and party are attending, and numerous luncheons are being given in his honor. This, we expect, will use up a good quantity of flowers and help to clean up the market of at least the better qualities of cut bloom.

Various Notes.

This locality was visited last week by a severe hail storm, so severe that H. Waters, East Toronto, has over 1,000 feet of glass broken. Other greenhouses in the locality had a number of panes broken, but nothing like the extent of Mr. Waters.

We expect to hear of one of our craftsmen here applying for a Carnegie medal. C. Turp, while out cruising in his gasoline launch, was instrumental in saving from drowning a man who had capsized a sailboat. The man was in a very exhausted condition, but Mr. Turp had the necessary stimulant to revive him.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The combination of August and April weather has proved disastrous for some of the cut flowers, Brides and Bridesmaids being particularly affected by the torrid days, and refusing to be comforted even by the cool nights that followed. The general market conditions are fair for the last half of May. Stock is coming into town in great quantities; much of it is marketed at low prices. The additions to the list are peonies, locally grown, now coming in; centaurea, to be seen both at the Leo Niessen Co.'s and at S. S. Pennock's, and cornflower, a specialty with the former. There seems a fair demand for both Easter and calla lilies, with supply rather short. Outdoor valley is here in great quantities, the price being about $1 per hundred. Opinions differ as to the effect of this stock on the better grade of indoor valley. Interest centers in carnations, which have held up fairly well during the warm weather, and are now improving with those growers whose houses are well ventilated. Prospects are fair for a good supply next week. Edw. Reid is receiving some very fine Ethel Trotter, a sure sign of the approach of summer, as this variety requires a certain amount of heat to attain its true form. The prospects for peonies are excellent.

Girard College.

May 20 is Founder's day at Girard College. This year May 20 fell on Sunday, so the great reunion of college alumni was held on Saturday, much to the disapprobation of the college professors, who had hoped that it might be on Monday, as Saturday is a holiday anyhow. Floriculturally speaking, the interest in Founder's day centers in the decoration of the tomb of Stephen Girard by Edwin Lonsdale. Maidenhair fern, fuchsias and kentias formed a rich and graceful combination.

The arrangement of the beds in front of the main entrance was fully described in this column last season. The crotons are not yet in position, one bed which will be used for them later being filled with Myosotis Eliza Fanrobert, edged with a yellow pansy, Golden Gem, I think. This was especially pleasing. The effect of geraniums alternating with pansy and forget-me-not beds is a blending, as it were, of summer and spring.

A feature of the boys' tables on Founder's day was a decoration of Calceolaria rugosa, Mr. Lonsdale having grown sixty-four perfect specimens of this beautiful flowering plant, or just enough to give one to each table. These were arranged with a view to a general effect, creating the impression in the spectator's mind of a much larger number of plants than were actually in the room.

R. B. Herr, of Ripton, near Lancaster, has sent a set of fifty-four named varieties and seedlings of Rex begonias to the college greenhouses for experiment. These plants are beautifully marked little specimens, reflecting great credit on Mr. Herr's cultural skill. Mr. Lonsdale has always been a warm admirer of the Rex begonia, and in his hands we may look for some interesting results.

Various Notes.

Charles E. Meehan, who has secured a controlling interest in the stock of the Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market, has sent out a circular letter to the other stockholders, offering to buy their shares at par, $15 paid. This is probably twice what the stock was worth two years ago. Its present value is due largely to Mr. Meehan's untiring energy in pushing the interests of the market.

Fred Ehret will move his flower store on Fairmount avenue, above Broad street, next door on or about June 1.

John F. Andre, Doylestown, Pa., will grow one house of Killarney rose the coming season.

Edw. Towill, of Roslyn, has decided to plant a quantity of Killarney next year.

J. Stephenson, of Oak Lane, has made a success of his Liberty roses the past season. The ground shoots are exceptionally fine.

Godfrey Aschmann is making a specialty of Ipomæa noctiflora, the moon vine, which he distributes throughout the country.

Mrs. Sarah I. Smith, of Secane, is sending very fine Enchantress carnations to the Flower Market.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have a new line of grass heads, which Mr. Berkowitz aptly describes as "sour grapes," the name being called forth by the expression on the countenance of the individual described. Green toothpicks and wire are another specialty here in the line of innovations.

The suburban florists are doing an active business in small vegetable plants, tomatoes especially. John Holt, of North Wales, and H. W. Collins, of Doylestown, report a lively demand for these staples.

M. Rice & Co. have their window-boxes in position, attractively filled with arecas, ferns, variegated periwinkle, and ivy. Mr. Eschner considers these boxes highly educational, and believes that every florist should use them in front of his store, where possible.

The Leo Niessen Co. has received a new stock of dagger ferns.

M. Rice and Mrs. Rice will sail for home on June 7, on the wonderful new steamer Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, which is described as 700 feet long, having eight decks, and every modern improvement, including a swimming pool.

Samuel S. Pennock has placed a row of window-boxes along the front of his new addition at 1610 Ludlow street. These boxes are beautifully filled with hydrangeas, crotons, Pandanus Veitchii, and other plants and vines.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. is arranging improvements for next season. They plan removing their ice-box to the rear of the salesroom and bringing the office from the second to the first floor. Both these changes will facilitate their work.

C. & G. L. Pennock, of Lansdowne, will grow Killarney.

The Flower Market will be strong on peonies for Memorial day. Wm. K. Harris and Alfred Burton will have good crops.

Joseph Heacock, of Wyncote, will, it is said, grow Killarney.

John A. Shellem says he will have 20,000 peonies. His stock is distributed by the Leo Niessen Co. and by Wm. E. McKissick.

Samuel S. Pennock will be strong on peonies.

The Battles photographs published last week gave great pleasure to REVIEW readers, who were quick to grasp the idea contained in them.

Thaddeus N. Yates & Co. are having a lively run on bedding plants. From present indications their large stock of geraniums, cannas, coleus, etc., will be marketed before Decoration day.

Answers to Correspondents.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia, to Phil, in care of any of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always acompany inquiry, but will not be published.

48.—Will the Killarney rose be largely planted for cut flowers near Philadelphia?

From present indications there will be a good supply.

On Filbert street:

There is a sign
Upon a wall;
It's mighty fine,
Exceeding tall.
You'll know there must Be no "others,"
For it reads just
"Berger Brothers."

PHIL.

Peony Night.

The next regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia will be held Tuesday evening, June 5, when there will be an exhibition of peonies. Everybody is invited to send flowers for this event. All intending exhibitors will please forward flowers, express charges prepaid, in care of David Rust, Horticultural hall, Broad street, above Spruce, Philadelphia, Pa.

EDWIN LONSDALE, Sec'y.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

Quiet business is the report for the past week. The bedding season seems to be over. A few stray customers come in once in a while but purchases are light.

We have been having unsettled weather for some time and field work has been retarded. Cut-worms have thrived during the cool wet season, and have destroyed quantities of garden stuff and, in some instances, nothing was exempt.

Most of the greenhouses have sold out everything of a salable nature, and things are being put in shape for fall stock. Carnations in the field are looking fine, some growers, too timid, neglected to plant early, and, the rainy season coming on, they were unable to get into the field. Result—plants about ten inches high in 2½-inch pots, no breaks, and trouble ahead for the grower. I have noticed that carnations quickly go to pieces here, by reason of the heat, and it requires some fine work to hold the plants cool enough to get a crop for commencement.

Cut flowers have taken a drop in price; in fact, all kinds of plants are cheaper, but as yet very little stock is wasted. Enough orders are coming in to dispose of all surplus.

Mums are looking good, and will soon be planted. Stock for summer cutting is coming on in good shape, and the variety will be much larger than formerly. Not enough attention has been given heretofore to experimenting with a variety of plants, in order to break the monotony of sameness. But this year, I think the majority of the craft are growing a few of all kinds, with the idea in view of having more to select from.

I have been told that the hot winds in July and August wither plants, but I think that proposition can be overcome by judicious mulching, with sufficient care in watering, so that plants looked upon now with suspicion will be eagerly taken up and successfully cultivated. New methods are not looked upon with favor, you must "show" the folks here that other than the common plants can be grown before you can find a purchaser. But the people are learning fast and when confidence can be restored in their minds there will be no trouble to sell the goods.

NARCISSUS.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business is moving along much in a summer rut. The hot weather we have been having has taken most of the life out of it. The demand has little life, and we consider it rather lucky that the supply is not heavy; otherwise, there would be a bad glut. As it is, the majority of the stock received sells fairly well and at prices that are not so bad. Of course, there is a lot of poor stock that has to go at bargain prices, but there usually are takers.

Roses are showing the effects of the hot weather. The buds are small. American Beauties are coming in in pretty fair shape and they sell well, but at low prices. Carnations are holding out well. Peonies are beginning to arrive in goodly quantities and they find a ready market. The larger and finer varieties will begin to come this week. Sweet peas are selling strongly. Valley also has a good call.

Green goods continue pretty scarce, especially good smilax and adiantum. The common fern supply is pretty good.

Florists' Society.

The following members of the Cincinnati Florists' Society were placed in nomination for office for the ensuing year: For president, Wm. Murphy and Henry Schwarz; for vice-president, Ben George and George Murphy; for secretary, C. J. Ohmer and Gus Adrian; for treasurer, D. Rusconi and J. Chas. Murphy; and for director, R. Witterstaetter and Frank Dellar. The election will be held at the next meeting, Saturday, June 9, at 8 p. m. This will be the first time that the members have voted direct for their officers. Before, they voted for five directors, who in turn elected their own officers. Under the new method, the men elected will constitute the board of directors. The change was made to put more enthusiasm into the elections.

The rapidly approaching S. A. F. convention at Dayton is now being talked of on all sides. At the last meeting of the Florists' Society it was decided to send out a call to all florists of this city and vicinity to meet with the society at its club rooms, June 9, and discuss plans to attend the national meeting in a body. It is hoped that at least 100 persons will go from here, and if such is the case, they will go in a special train. At said meeting committees will be appointed to do some tall hustling and you can expect to find Cincinnati at the convention with both feet.

Various Notes.

H. M. Altick ran down from Dayton for a day. He reported that everything is shaping itself in fine style, and that all the Dayton boys are working tooth and nail.

John Dellar, returning from the market late last Saturday night, was knocked off of the wagon seat by a street-car. He was picked up badly hurt, and was taken to the hospital, where he is doing nicely now.

Samuel Batson, of Kalamazoo, Mich., is shipping some finely-grown ten-week stocks to this market. Grown the way he grows them, they make a beautiful cut flower and sell very well.

Burglars entered the store of Charles Young, 1420 Market street, May 16, stealing $12 from the cash register, and some roses from the ice box.

Fred Lautenschlager, representing Kroeschell Bros. Co., of Chicago, is in town. He reports the sale of several large boilers to Henry Varnan, Dreman and Borden streets. Mr. Varnan has just erected a range of 24,000 feet of glass, which will be devoted to vegetable growing.

Visitors were Mr. Gregg and Mr. Winter, of Charleston, W. Va.; also C. P. Dieterich, of Maysville, Ky.

C. J. OHMER.

AN EARLY BORDER OF BULBS.

In establishments where large numbers of bulbs are annually forced their disposal after having served a turn indoors is often a real problem, backgrounds of shrubberies, wild gardens, grass, and even the rubbish heap sometimes sharing in the spoil. Instead of thus disposing of the surplus, gardeners might well follow the example of a veteran under whom I once served. His plan was to make narrow borders, eighteen inches to two feet wide, under all the warm fruit walls, i. e., those having a south, west, or east exposure, well manure them, and plant them thickly with bulbs from the forcing houses. From such borders we cut bushels of early flowers in spring, and greatly relieved the tale exacted from the houses when flowers there for cutting were none too plentiful.—Gardeners' Magazine.

SHELDON, ILL.—Alfred Runnion is building a new house 20x110 for carnations, which are short of the demand with him. He must buy 2,000 for Memorial day.

ORANGE, N. J.—At the next meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, June 1, Harry O. May, of Summit, will deliver an address upon his favorite topic, "Roses and Rose Growing."

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The stock and all assets of the Chas. A. Shaeffer Floral Co. were sold at auction Saturday, May 19, by E. R. Durham, U. S. Marshal, acting on the order of T. T. Crittenden, referee in bankruptcy.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Outdoor Exhibition at Dayton.

Growers and introducers of novelties in cannas, asters, geraniums, petunias, roses and other tender or hardy garden material should not underestimate the value of the opportunity afforded in the plans as formulated by the executive board of the S. A. F. for displaying and introducing to the public such meritorious new things as they may have to offer.

The county fair follows directly after the close of the S. A. F. convention and the large local attendance should and doubtless will bring good business to the exhibitors. One prominent grower who has taken a big space states that the proposition promises better than the planting exhibit at the World's Fair as a business getter. The catalogue mail trade houses cannot afford to overlook this opportunity.

Planting is now going on under the supervision of skilled gardeners, and all exhibits will have the best of care and full protection throughout the summer. The charge for space is merely nominal. For rates and assignments address H. M. Altick, Dayton, O., or Wm. J. Stewart, secretary, 11 Hamilton place, Boston, Mass.

To my way of thinking, by all odds the best paper.—H. L. Clapp, Ripon, Wis.

Topeka, Kan.—The new greenhouse at the Osawattomie asylum will be erected by the Greenhouse Co., of Jersey City, N. J., at a cost of $2,250.

Special Notice

As Decoration Day, May 30, falls on Wednesday, the day the REVIEW goes to press, next week's edition will be printed one day earlier than usual.

Advertisers and correspondents must have "copy" in our hands not later than the first mail Tuesday morning, May 29, to be in time.

SOUTHERN FLORISTS ORGANIZE.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 22.—The Society of Southern Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists was organized here today, enrolling forty-two members, representing practically all the southern states. R. C. Berckmans, of Augusta, Ga., was elected president; C. W. Eichling, of New Orleans, first vice-president; C. O. Hunt, of Chattanooga, second vice-president; Dr. J. F. Wilson, of Poulan, Ga., secretary; Jos. Steckler, of New Orleans, treasurer. The next convention will be held at New Orleans at the call of the official board.

WASHINGTON.

State of Trade.

All growers of outdoor stock in this vicinity are now confronted with grave conditions. There has been no rain worthy of mention for a month. The carnations had not all been planted in the fields; it would have been better, probably, if they had all remained in reach of the hose, as "dust and ashes" about expresses the condition of the fields. It is only by vigorous watering that peonies, so far as the writer has observed, can be made to bloom. If rain does not come soon the crops of the market gardener will be ruined, and the same will be true of the farmers. Under glass, there has been intense heat, and watering has become a burden. On Sunday and Monday there was a slight relief—cooler weather, but no rain.

All this is depressing the market. Saturday, usually the best day of the week, was so hot that few buyers ventured out. In addition, it is the cause of many departures for the summer resorts, a month earlier than usual. However, those who have to stay are making the best of the situation. The Masonic May Festival opened on Monday in Convention hall, with elaborate decorations. A number of the senators are still giving dinners, which call for good decorations.

Masonic Festival.

Several of the leading florists are actively identified with the Masonic May Festival, which opened in Convention hall, May 21, and continues for five days. The decorations are handsome and interesting. One end of the hall represents the arctic regions, the other the tropics; while between are representatives of other climes.

The flower booth is in charge of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Gude, assisted by a charming array of femininity. The booth is well stocked with American Beauty roses and other seasonable blooms, which are selling at much higher prices than in the stores. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gude are prominent members of the fraternity, and pre-eminently past masters in selling flowers. Scotty.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Commencements, weddings, receptions, funerals, etc., are keeping the retailers busy these days. Some also are rushed with outside work. Carnations are more in evidence than the previous week, but there are not enough to meet the demand. They range in price from $1.50 to $3 per hundred. Brides and Maids are quite plentiful, but the stock is nothing to brag about. They bring from $4 to $8 per hundred. Fine Kaiserins are obtainable at $5 to $6 per hundred. Fairly good snapdragon sells at $3 per hundred. Sweet peas bring from 50 cents to 75 cents per hundred. Lilies are plentiful, as also are smilax and other greens. At this writing peonies have not put in their appearance.

Club Meeting.

Owing to its being an unusually warm evening, the attendance at the Detroit Florists' Club's last meeting was very light. Considerable interest was shown in the coming convention at Dayton. As a large number of Detroiters mean to attend, it was thought advisable to charter a private car.

The club's next meeting, June 6, will be in the form of a smoker. A discussion on "Decoration Day" has also been assigned for the evening.

Asparagus plumosus Crawshawii, shown by James Crawshaw, of Providence, R. I., received honorable mention.

Various Notes.

Harry Pickworth, gardener to Oren Scotten, will leave about June 1 for a few months' sojourn in Europe.

A very unique idea was carried out by Albert Pochelon last week, in the shape of an ordinary hod filled with an assortment of vegetables, and carnations to add color, the whole making an immense bouquet. It was presented to Fred Nash at the Temple theater.

Wm. Dilger was slightly injured by coming into close proximity with an automobile. H. S.

EASTON, PA.

A. L. Raub & Co. were overtaxed with funeral work last Monday. They supplied four wagon-loads in the one day. One piece was composed of 500 American Beauty roses and 3,000 lilies of the valley. All the work was designed and made by Paul Kaffke. It was the finest lot of work seen here in many years.

Arthur Kleinhans has bought one of the 40x300 hothouses which H. P. Kleinhans owned at one time, and is building an addition 10x300.

John Stone, of Bethlehem township, is contemplating building a greenhouse 18x120.

Paul Kaffke, manager of the A. L. Raub & Co.'s plant, recently was tendered a surprise party by some of his Masonic friends.

Hamburg, Pa.—Stephen Sousley reports a fine season. He built a greenhouse on Franklin street about a year ago and finds himself with more business than he can handle, so that new glass will be added before fall.

The Great Central Market.

The oldest men in the market can recall no week of such unwieldy oversupply as depressed the market from May 14 to May 19. In the thirty years that some men look back there is no week when the glut has been so utterly unmanageable. Never in the history of the market has there been so much waste and never have average returns to the growers been so low. If there was any item of which there was not an oversupply, the fact was unobserved. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week the temperature ran to 90 degrees in the shade. The normal mean temperature for the middle of May is 58 degrees. Is it necessary to say anything further?

Not only were all flowers brought into the market with a rush, the receipts being three or four times what they normally are, but the heat took the quality out of everything. All stock came soft and without keeping quality, which added to the burdens of the wholesalers. The select goods brought fair prices because there were so few of them. The bulk of the stock, after the legitimate local and shipping demand was supplied, was jobbed off at any price the Greeks chose to offer. Some of the sales, stated in figures, seem ridiculous enough, but it was a case where any sale was a good sale because something was left every night to go in the dump the next morning. It is impossible to overstate last week's glut and the consequent fall in values.

A fall in temperature on Saturday to 10 degrees below the normal did not bring the expected revival. Of course it operated to reduce receipts, but it seems that such headway had been gathered that the cuts are still coming on, and the weather man says more high temperatures are in sight; indeed, by Tuesday it was already hot. There still are some good Beauties, but most of the buds are small and require much peeling, which they can ill afford, to get down to natural color. Chatenay holds its quality better, and red roses are good.

To find first-class Brides and Maids one must be early on the market. Tea roses suffered to a greater extent than anything else during last week's torridity, and Kaiserin, which has not been in demand heretofore, sprang into high favor. A little cool weather would put quality back into the rose crops, but it is feared there will be few, if any, good roses for Decoration day. A number of wholesalers are advising buyers to push peonies instead of roses. The mildew on roses is something "fierce." Many good growers were caught.

Carnations sold for a nickel a bunch last week and are in only a little better shape now. Receipts continue large and quality has deteriorated to a marked degree. Only the best sell at anything like a fair price.

This week the glut of peonies is perplexing the wholesalers. Local Old Red arrived Monday. Hundreds of growers are making shipments from down the state and have no knowledge of how the peony should be handled. This class of stock is bringing $1 to $3 per hundred, according to variety, and is injuring the sale of the better goods, which, in consequence, are going into cold storage. There are varying reports as to the peony crop. Some growers say much of their stock was ruined by the unseasonable and changeable weather. There are, however, at present more peonies than the market can use.

Outdoor lily of the valley is abundant. There are a few cape jasmine in the market, but it begins to be accepted that the supply for Decoration day will be short. Pansies are in large supply. A few gladioli are seen, including The Bride. The outdoor tulips have about passed. Sweet peas are largely used, but the receipts are so heavy that they must be of high quality to bring a profitable price. A cent a bunch for short-stemmed Blanche Ferry was a good price last week. Lilies are also a problem. Bridal Wreath spiræa is in. Lilac is about over.

Green goods are in larger supply and selling fairly well. A number of nice orders for smilax and asparagus are on file for June.

All the wholesalers report large orders for Decoration day. There certainly will be a heavy demand, as prices are moderate. Supply is likely to be not so heavy as at present, but there nevertheless will be enough to go around.

Sleuth to be a Grower.

Herman F. Schuettler, assistant chief of police and credited with being the handsomest man on the force, has erected a range of seven greenhouses at 754 Bosworth avenue and is preparing to put up as many more. N. P. Miller is superintending the construction of the plant, but a grower from Peter Reinberg's staff has been engaged. Mr. Reinberg supplied the carnation plants with which half the glass will be stocked, roses occupying the balance of the space.

West Madison Street.

A traveling man from New York called Madison street the Broadway of the west side and he found prosperous flower stores scattered pretty evenly along its four and a half miles to Garfield park, but, strangely enough, no more of them than there were ten years ago.

As one goes out from the city the first flower store is that of H. F. Halle. A large room is well fitted up and there is a commodious conservatory at the rear, where a large stock of palms in decorating sizes is carried. Mr. Halle suffered a period of ill health two or three years ago, but again is entirely well and doing a nice business.

At the old Schiller place George Asmus has an up-to-date store and if there is any funeral work doing on the great west side, a share of it is sure to be found in his place. A good business has been done all winter but it has been quiet the past fortnight.

Where Colorado avenue has its root in Madison the store of Mrs. E. Anderson presents an attractive front. Years ago this stand was conducted as a branch by C. Frauenfelder, who sold the property and business to Mrs. Anderson. She put up a new building about a year ago and is doing well.

westward way is H. N. Bruns, at the sign of the valley pip. Mr. Bruns is known all over the country as western headquarters for cold storage valley, the shipment and forcing of which is a strong specialty with him, but he also does a nice retail trade. Just now outdoor work is keeping him exceptionally busy.

A few blocks further out is C. Frauenfelder, who has one of the best businesses in town. He has been at the same stand since the locality was little more than a prairie and has an established trade of large proportions. So thoroughly has he the confidence of his people that in ordering funeral work, of which he makes a great deal, most of them leave the selection of material to him, and every retailer knows how valuable that privilege is; it enables him to keep the waste down to a minimum.

Last, but not least, is the Garfield Park Flower Co. A general retail trade is done, but this is distinctly a plant-growing establishment and Frank Oechslin says that for the past fortnight they have been almost too busy to give a civil answer to anyone who bothered them with questions. They are hard workers and have earned their big business. There is a big stock of spring stuff, but Mr. Oechslin says it looks as though they will run short on many items before the end of the season. A nice batch of hydrangeas will be ready for Decoration day.

Various Notes.

Prior to his departure for California, President Hauswirth, of the Florists' Club, appointed the committee which is to consider the matter of a spring rose show in conjunction with that of the American Rose Society. The committee consists of F. F. Benthey, C. L. Washburn, N. J. Wietor, August Poehlmann, Peter Reinberg, John Degnan and John P. Risch.

The Retail Florists' Association proposes to drive the sidewalk men out of business. There is an ordinance requiring that sidewalks be kept free of booths and show cases. On May 17 a delegation, headed by A. Lange, called on Mayor Dunne, accompanied by a representative of Huttman, Butters & Carr, who are attorneys for the retailers. The mayor referred the matter to the assistant corporation counsel, Maclay Hoyne, who recommended that the commissioner of public works order the removal of the show cases from the sidewalks.

Henry C. Dunn and John A. Huebner, former employees of the Central Floral Co., are doing a nice business at 72 Randolph street. The firm name is Dunn & Huebner.

John J. Gormley is now associated with John Canger on State street. He took hold May 19. The firm is Canger & Gormley.

Andrew McAdams has been suffering for a week with carbuncle on the back of his neck.

Robert Newcomb, formerly of Des Moines, is now with the Central Floral Co.

P. H. Broadbeck, at Evanston, is equipping his houses with a tile bench of his own invention.

E. C. Amling calls attention to the fact that never did quality help a grower more than in last week's glut. When stock is a drug buyers will accept nothing but the best, and the more careful growers make much the best averages.

Paul Beyer was up from South Bend on Monday, buying stock. He was formerly with retail florists here.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting Kaiserins with stems four and five feet long.

E. H. Hitchcock, of Glenwood, Mich., has been in town this week, making contracts for ferns for storage next season.

H. R. Hughes, West Van Buren street, has a window of the grass-growing figures which attracts a great deal of attention. He has issued a neatly printed circular to tell his trade about them.

N. J. Wietor says that the call for chrysanthemum cuttings this season has been something far beyond the ordinary. They find it difficult to hold stock for their own requirements.

George Reinberg expects to get into his new quarters during the present week.

Zech & Mann are handling their annual crop of red gladioli. They sell well.

John Turner, at Morgan Park, has an annual crop of Gladiolus The Bride, which he sends to Kennicott Bros. Co. for Decoration day. The first of it came slightly earlier than usual this year because of the hot weather. Used with red peonies the retailers make some fine effects.

Weiland & Risch point with pride to the fact that Killarney is holding its own in spite of the hot weather, while most roses have deteriorated very greatly.

Percy Jones comments on the fact that Kaiserin is now in demand. He has had a supply for months, but no one wanted them, as Bride was very good up to last week.

Vaughan & Sperry report that their supply of poet's narcissi suffered extinction in the hot weather.

J. A. Budlong is drying off Beauties and replanting in the new houses to get the room for grafted Brides and Maids.

White, pink and yellow antirrhinum of specially good quality are seen at Poehlmann's.

F. F. Benthey says the weather at New Castle is even warmer than here. L. Coatsworth is still there, putting the finishing touches on the new houses.

John Sinner says it's good weather only for fishing, and he is impatiently awaiting June.

Will Kyle, vice-president of the J. B. Deamud Co., says he will be the last man to kick at the volume of business.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

These be "record days" in the cut flower market. The heat has been abnormal, 90 degrees in the shade on Saturday, with several days of excessive temperature. The result is a flood of stock, especially roses, and quality retrograding, crops coming in ahead of their legitimate time looking pale and premature and sales of necessity far below published quotations. Buyers are the independent ones these days and dictate values. Still the market cleans up at some price and better business and better figures are confidently expected in the month of June.

The surplus of roses on Saturday was closed out at unheard of sacrifices. One wholesaler sold 7,000 for $3. Carnations dropped to $2 a thousand. Such stock, of course, was accumulations and had to go to the bargain hunter or the barrel, but it indicates something of the condition the wholesalers have to meet and make the best of. Very few of the growers complain who come to the city to seek the why and wherefore, for they realize how useless it is to kick against the inevitable. The first of the present week shows little, if any, improvement.

There is no shortage of anything, and lilac, peonies, and the usual outdoor summer blooms, are now abundant, especially valley, and sweet peas and stocks are shown in uncountable profusion. May will probably go on record as the least profitable spring month the wholesalers ever experienced.

The extreme heat of the last of the week has again been followed by severe cold and frost. Much damage is reported up the state, especially at Utica and vicinity. Here in New York overcoats were a necessity on Monday evening.

Quite a number of the craft find the daily equine exhibitions in the vicinity a healthful and profitable change from the regular cares of the day. These exhibits are made in the open air and are very popular and occasionally inexpensive.

A Visit to Childs'.

No more interesting time of the year than now, when all nature is bursting into bud, blossom and song, can be chosen for a visit to Floral Park, where, under the guidance of Adolph Jaenicke, the superintendent of the greenhouse department, John Lewis Childs' beautiful place is seen. This is a center of specialties. From this center are disseminated yearly 40,000 gloxinias, and an equal number of tuberous begonias. Seedling geraniums without limit as to quantity are named after states: the best white, Pennsylvania; the best orange, New York; the best scarlet, Ohio, and so on. Other specialties are Begonia Rex seedlings; the new rose pink cactus, German Empress; fancy caladiums, of which 10,000 are propagated yearly; a large collection of variegated foliage plants; hothouse grapes in pots, eighteen months old in fruit; the scarlet daisy, the South African Gerbera Jamesonii, now blooming in the open garden and perfectly hardy; fifty varieties of lilacs in twenty colors; 10,000 cyclamens in ten varieties; calla lilies in fifteen varieties—yellow, white and pink; a collection of rare palms, and the Phoenix Roebelenii, from Hindu-China, of which Mr. Childs has 150,000 seedlings and plants in all sizes, the most popular palm introduction of the new century.

Mr. Jaenicke has been with Mr. Childs for ten years and before coming to this country was with Haage & Schmidt for seven years at Erfurt, Germany. His ability as an expert plantsman is everywhere conceded. Floral Park has become a favorite suburb of New York and property is fast rising in value. There is no more charming suburban section near the metropolis.

Various Notes.

Madison furnished an unfortunate fire in the burning of the house and greenhouses of John Roper last week. Mr. Roper narrowly escaped with his life.

W. G. Badgley, of Chatham, N. Y., the rose grower, has leased the Ryan greenhouses in that town, a plant double the size of his own, and will devote the houses to Bride, Maid and Kate Moulton. His stock is handled by A. J. Guttman, who returned Saturday morning from his month's trip abroad. It is reported that another of the Twenty-eighth street wholesalers will make a trip to the Orient this summer and one will visit shortly at Mt. Clemens, Mich. Most of these holidays will be postponed until after the club's outing, July 2, tickets for which are selling rapidly.

Max Limprecht is still very ill at his home in Jersey. His store on West Thirtieth street, last week destroyed by fire, is to be rebuilt and modernized so when complete the Limprecht Co. will be in line with the best of the supply centers in New York.

A. J. Fellouris moves to his new place at 52 West Twenty-eighth street this week. A. M. Henshaw, the new wholesaler, will also have his headquarters at this address and opened last Saturday with encouraging patronage. The younger generation of wholesalers is much in evidence and rumor has several more booked for similar enterprises in September. It is a great city and there is always room for good men at the top. Mr. Henshaw has been for some time with A. L. Young & Co.

On Saturday evening the largest steamship in the world, and the most luxurious of floating palaces, arrived at New York, the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria. It seems impossible ever to construct anything more perfect and wonderful in its line. On the topmost deck is a great palm garden enclosed in glass. A round glass cupola in the ceiling floods it with light. The walls are covered with vines. A landscape of castles and fountains forms an effective background. There is a florists' shop, too, perfect in its appointments, where orders for each day of the voyage may be left and a supply of fresh flowers is always available. Suites cost from $3,000 down. That's nothing. Many a florist will make his honeymoon trip on the big boat if the days of prosperity continue. Several wholesalers and sons of wholesalers are dreaming about it now.

Dear Sir:—Since using your ice case in our retail flower department we have saved 30 per cent in the consumption of ice. Our saving in flowers we cannot accurately determine, but should estimate conservatively 25 per cent. Not only this, flowers keep with us as they never did before, and retain their salable appearance longer. Your box is certainly a boon to the florist and we predict a wonderful sale on them, especially to the florists, when their qualifications become known.

week, in discussing the San Jose scale, declared their inability to combat it effectually and announce that in time the complete destruction of all the fruit trees in that section of the country is inevitable.

J. K. Allen received his first shipment of peonies from the south on Saturday, May 12, and has been disposing of an average of 2,000 daily. The stock is now in all the wholesalers' boxes and some of it is of superb quality.

The New York Cut Flower Co. closes at 3 p. m. June 1 up to September 15. Very many of the leading wholesalers will join in this humanitarian movement.

May 15 Gustav C. Schroeder lost his daughter, 4 years of age, and the sympathy of the trade is extended.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed, of Reed & Keller, will sail June 12 for Europe on an extensive business and pleasure trip. Mr. Reed has been in the florists' supply business for thirty-five years. Twenty-five years ago Reed & Keller occupied half of the third floor at 120 West Twenty-seventh street. Now they have seven floors, over 6,000 square feet, and every branch of the supply house is amply furnished with the necessary room. Their additional space is now filled and a big stock of everything, glass, baskets, wire work, etc. They manufacture their own stock in many lines and have a large force constantly employed. Their wicker birdcages and triple potholders are among their latest novelties. Mr. Basedon, the oldest sheaf maker in America, is in charge of that department.

J. M. Keller and family, of Bay Ridge, N. Y., are traveling in Europe. The J. M. Keller Co. (Max O. Jordan and John Appel) is very busy rebuilding and preparing for the extensive local trade. Splendid stock of Dracæna terminalis, P. Veitchii, cypripediums, gardenias, palms and ferns are especially attractive and splendidly grown. Mr. Appel says, all things considered, the Boston is still the money making fern. He has stock of all the new and popular varieties. The kentia importations this year are large, but in the last shipment the rats made sad havoc and much fine stock was ruined.

During the past three weeks Young & Nugent have had ten weddings, some notable ones at Sherry's, also at Hoboken and other Jersey cities. Mr. Nugent contemplates an outing on the great lakes this summer.

A. J. Guttman gained fifteen pounds on his European trip of thirty days. He visited Paris and London and received many courtesies from brother florists. The flowers of Victory, which he took to London, kept perfectly, gracing the table during the entire voyage. Those taken in a box, some three dozen, were exhibited at the meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society and were greatly admired. Mr. and Mrs. Guttman and family are now visiting at their country home in Summit, N. J.

A. Warendorff's windows are beautiful with peonies and ferns.

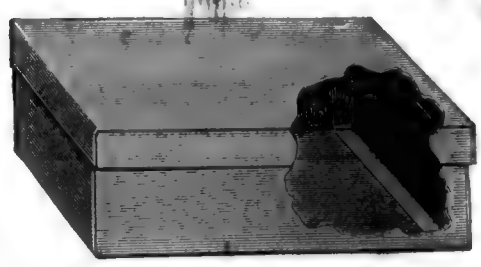
J. H. Small & Sons have some grand specimens of Whitmani in their display this week and orchids again are so abundant they are in every retail window.

The late summer has been a money saver to the big department stores that handle roses. Had it not been for the long drawn out spell of cool weather making planting still possible, half a million roses would have been a complete loss.

J. Austin Shaw.

BOSTON.

The Market.



For several days the past week extreme dullness prevailed and stock was hard to move at any price. With the thermometer at 90 degrees in the shade, this was not surprising. Conditions are now somewhat improved, thanks in chief part to the near approach of Memorial day and consequent holding back of supplies. The demand for May 30 promises to be phenomenal, and every flower obtainable will be utilized. There promises to be a good supply of roses and only a moderate number of carnations. A large part of the latter will be kept at home by growers to fill local demands. A good supply of Spiræa Japonica, stocks, feverfew, candytuft and other seasonable flowers will be obtainable.

Roses have moved sluggishly the past week, many being cleaned below $1 per hundred. The quality is remarkably good except in the case of Brides and Maids. The demand for Liberty is decidedly better than for Beauty. Carnations are gradually hardening as the week advances. From $1 to $2 have been the ruling rates. There are still a few double violets coming in. Bulbous stock is not very plentiful, some late varieties of tulips and Narcissus poeticus being the last of the Dutch varieties seen. Some very nice Spanish iris and excellent gladioli are seen. A good supply of outdoor valley is arriving, selling at $1 to $2 per hundred. Temporarily there is small demand for the forced article. Lilac is very abundant and seems to be in good demand. Cool weather will be needed to hold it in condition for Me-

Club Meeting.

E. O. Orpet's talk at the last club meeting, briefly referred to in our last notes, was largely reminiscent of his bothy experiences under Stevens, of Trentham, and other English and Irish places, and young men of the present day would scarcely care to pass through similar ordeals. Both the lecturer and F. E. Palmer would appear to have been especially unfortunate in the class of bothies which fell to their lot, but while Mr. Palmer considered them unfit for any young man of the present day, Mr. Orpet held a contrary opinion, and said if one of his own sons had a predilection for gardening he would send him to England for a year to two for a starter. Mr. Cameron quoted F. W. Burbridge as to how a gardener ought to be made, and Mr. Westwood dilated on the superior excellence of Scotch over English bothies. Our own experiences of bothy life were very different from those expressed by Mr. Orpet and are among our most pleasant memories, although time would not allow us to express them.

J. T. Butterworth's white Cattleya Mossiæ worthily received a report of superior merit. We doubt if a better plant of it is to be had in America. A plant of C. Mossiæ in an 8-inch pot, carrying forty flowers, was an excellent sample of good culture, from the same grower. He had other equally good specimens at home. R. T. McGorum's giant White Perfection candytuft showed extra good culture. Blue Hill Nurseries, among other perennials, had Aruncus asilboides Keiffei, with very finely divided foliage, accorded a report of merit.

It was voted to donate a special prize for the coming meeting of the American Peony Society, as well as to entertain visiting members at a dinner. The new members elected raised the club membership to 327. An attractive program is being prepared for the June meeting. There will be no meetings in July and August.

Arnold Arboretum.

The Arnold Arboretum has been the Mecca for flower lovers of late, and we do not think it ever looked more attractive. The display of malus, pyrus and prunus has been especially fine, but most of these are now over. Bechtel's double-flowering American crab, with its beautiful, delicate pink flowers, being a notable exception. The shrubby loniceras are very beautiful, L. Ruprechtiana, Tartarica, Morrowi, candida and bella albida being especially good. Cornus florida, which for several years has had most of its flower buds killed, is this season white with bloom.

The lilacs are, we think, better flowered than ever in the collection of something like 150 varieties. It is hard to confine the selection to a few sorts, but the following are very fine: Macrostachya, beautiful blush white; Marie LeGraye, still the best single white; Frau Bertha Dammann, fine single white; Philemon and Souv. de Ludwig Spath, splendid dark reds; President Grevy, blue with immense panicles, very striking; Furst Lichtenstein, rosy lilac, the best of its shade; Michael Buchner, double pale lilac, extra good; Alphonse Lavolee, double, bright blue violet shade, very striking. Mme. Lemoine, Mme. Abel Chatenay and Comte de Kerchove are splendid newer double whites. Mme. Casimer Perier, double, creamy white, is also excellent. There are dozens of other almost equally fine varieties all in magnificent bloom. The other species, such as Persica, Chinensis, pubescens, etc., are all very fine.

Jackson Dawson has planted out several thousand cratægus during the present season and continues to raise additional forms, which will soon number into the thousands. Some of those planted last year are blooming finely. The results of winter killing, so painfully noticeable in 1904 and 1905, are almost entirely absent this season. The rhododendrons and azaleas just opening promise to be unusually fine and the kalmias are equally promising.

Various Notes.

Welch Bros. are making their usual extensive preparations for Memorial day and will handle an immense quantity of flowers.

Thomas Pegler, salesman for O. L. Dorr and S. J. Goddard at the Park street market, May 14 had the misfortune to fall on Tremont street and break a bone in his left ankle, and will need crutches for a few weeks.

Galvin had an attractive window of orchids the past week, which included Dendrobium thyrsiflorum, Cattleya Mossiæ, C. Skinneri and C. gigas.

Peonies are very promising at present and a grand display will be forthcoming for the meeting of the American Peony Society. The officinalis varieties look as though they would be in season for Memorial day.

H. F. DeGraaf, the bulb specialist, was a visitor the past week.

Oscar L. Dorr, as usual, is last in the market with double violets. Thomas Pegler has been receiving 10,000 to 12,000 daily from him at the Park street market.

J. S. Manter continues to handle especially fine Chatenay roses for Exeter Rose Conservatories.

N. F. McCarthy has just completed a section of a new rose house at Montrose Greenhouses, 54x300. It will eventually be increased to 1,000 feet in length.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business among the retailers did not show much improvement the past week. The first part of the week was fairly busy, but after that it again lapsed into summer dullness.

There is an abundance of cut stock, the bulk of the stock being of extremely poor quality. The really first-class stock sells well and always is in demand.

In American Beauties there is a great demand for long, while shorts overstocked the market. The same may be said of other roses. Some good La Detroit and Chatenay are in.

The carnation consignments are large and good stock is seen. Prices again are down to $1 per hundred for good stock. Extra fancy goes a notch higher. The best varieties now are Enchantress, Robert Craig, Nelson Fisher and Boston Market.

Sweet peas are not so plentiful. The dry spell will shorten the usual large crop this season. Outdoor stock is suffering for the want of rain. Peonies and cape jasmine are selling well.

Replanting has begun and this will put a stop to the great quantities of roses coming in.

Plant dealers report a big week.

Various Notes.

August Eggert, on the east side, is building a large rose house for Richmond and Bridesmaid.

The Ellison Floral Co. has given up the down-town branch in the Simmons Hardware Co. store. It will by fall be in the new store a few doors west of Taylor avenue on Olive street.

George Windler, whose place is on Delore avenue, has been very sick the past week. His many friends in the trade hope to see him soon in good health.

Burglars broke [illegible] Young & Sons' store last week [illegible] were evidently looking for money, as nothing was missing, the cash being all in the bank.

George Waldbart put in a busy week with funeral work, a number of large designs and several casket covers.

The Florists' Club sent a beautiful wreath to the funeral of Wm. Schray, and the club was represented by fifty members. The wreath was made by Carl Beyer.

It is rumored that a company is being formed to build and operate twelve new houses each 500 feet long, at Meramec Highlands, and grow carnations and roses for this market.

Robert Thompson, who has been building most of the greenhouses around the city, has been very busy of late and has taken a number of contracts for work this summer.

Revision day on Friday, for the June election, kept a number of the local florists busy at the polls, among them being Robert Beyer, Theo. Miller, Chas. Juengel, A. Meyer and J. J. Beneke.

The Riessen Floral Co. on Broadway, had orders for a number of large floral designs the past week.

Frank Weber, of H. Weber & Sons, says we never had such a dry spell as this spring and that the loss will be great among the local nurserymen. This year the complaint is general throughout the country. The big rain of Friday night was a welcome visitor, but not prolonged enough to do much good.

Max Rotter, George Angermueller, Rude Windt and Charles Schoenle make a great quartette when out together.

The florist bowlers won three games the past week from the strong Telience team. The total score in the three games was 2,501. Ellison was high, with an average of 180; Beneke, 179; Kuehn, 178; Schriefer, 156, and Lohrenz, 140.

J. J. B.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The past week of hot weather has been a sad one for all growers of cut flowers, the roses being very small and off color, with the exception of Kaiserin, which is coming into the Cleveland Cut Flower Co. in fine condition. Carnations in many cases were asleep before night, and it kept the wholesale houses busy getting good stock for shipping orders. Quoted prices remain about the same as last week, but a large majority of the stock went to the street merchants, at job-lot prices.

Various Notes.

C. W. Griffin is having all he can do to fill the orders coming to him for the Sabin adjustable plant stand, of which he is the manufacturer.

Mr. Bartelles, formerly with the Gasser Co., has rented the Essex greenhouses in Dover, and will grow for the Cleveland market.

C.

WEST GROVE, PA.

West Grove is to have another greenhouse plant. Green Bros. will erect three houses 14x96, also a mushroom house. They will grow mums and carnations.

Roney Bros. will add two new houses, size 22x90, for carnations. This move was found necessary to accommodate their increased plant trade in forcing tomatoes, carnations, geraniums, coleus, etc. Two houses of their own strain of Lorillard tomato, just ripening, are a sight to see.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw W. S., Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., O. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annua meeting will be held at Toledo, O., June 26-28, 1906

SAVOY leaf spinach is reported scarce.

SEED corn, both sweet and field, seems to be in oversupply.

VISITED CHICAGO:—Geo. C. Thomson, Boston; S. Y. Haines, Minneapolis.

THE San Francisco seedsmen rapidly are getting in shape for business.

RADISH for seed crops in the Michigan district is being planted and conditions are favorable. The usual acreage will be seeded.

REPORTS from Canada state that the spring has been backward and the pea crops are far behind, with the outlook for a good stand not encouraging.

GEO. C. THOMSON, formerly with R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston, evidently decided that Philadelphia would be too strenuous a town for him; he did not assume the management of H. F. Michell's, as contemplated.

IN considering the protest of T. W. Wood & Sons against the assessment of duty at Richmond, Va., the board of general appraisers followed the ruling relating to vetch seed published in full in the REVIEW of May 3.

THE Chas. H. Lilly Co., Seattle, whose San Francisco branch was destroyed, has established temporary headquarters at Oakland, with stock from the stores at Portland and Seattle. They lost everything at San Francisco.

FROM Wisconsin come very favorable reports as to conditions in the pea fields. The majority of the farmers have a good stand and the early start that was obtained in many of the fields augurs well for the future good of these crops.

THE vine seed and corn growers of the west are making strong efforts to get closed upon the coming year's contracts to supply the trade. Reports from the seat of war are that they are all in the best possible shape to take care of the business.

DRY weather is causing considerable complaint from the planters. The seedsman has to reply to those who complain in a statesmanlike manner. It is thought by many that the seedsman is as good a diplomat as the diplomats are seedsmen.

THE country merchants who handle seeds are feeling better than they did a month ago. The travelers report that now it is easier to get them interested in a supply of seeds for the coming year's trade. Spring trade was slow in opening with them and it looked as though a considerable quantity of the standard varieties of seeds would be carried over by them. The fact that this class of seed buyers are now in the optimistic class is a big help to the trade.

EMERSON SEEKS RELEASE.

Frank T. Emerson, of Fremont, Neb., has applied for discharge in bankruptcy in the U. S. District Court at Omaha, Neb. The amount of liabilities scheduled approximates $140,000. Mr. Emerson has been compelled to take these proceedings owing to the judgments obtained against him as a partner of Phil Stimmel, who failed in business in January, 1893.

Mr. Stimmel at that time conducted a general line seed business individually and in connection with same a seed-growing business in which specialty Mr.

Emerson was a partner and of which he was the general manager. To satisfy an indebtedness contracted by Mr. Stimmel personally in connection with his own individual business the Omaha National Bank attached and sold at sheriff's sale the entire stock of seeds, including those belonging to the partnership of Stimmel & Emerson. This action was bitterly opposed by Mr. Emerson at the time and resulted in a damage suit against the bank for the benefit of the creditors, which at the expiration of a ten years' litigation was decided in favor of the bank and against Mr. Emerson and the other creditors he represented.

After the judgments referred to had been rendered against Mr. Emerson as a partner of Mr. Stimmel it was decided by the Supreme Court of Nebraska that Mr. Emerson was not a partner of Mr. Stimmel's and not liable for the debts of the company, but this decision came too late to have the judgments against him set aside.

Under such existing conditions Mr. Emerson naturally seeks relief from a burden that was none of his own creating, but which had been judicially thrust upon him while fighting for the rights of himself and other creditors in the case.

DEATH OF GEORGE W. CROSIER.

George W. Crosier, well known in the field seeds department of the trade, died suddenly at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Orton Moulton, at Batavia, N. Y., on May 13. Mr. Crosier resided in Buffalo and went to Batavia on Saturday with his wife and was feeling unusually well on Saturday night. In the night he was seized with heart failure and died before medical aid could be called.

George W. Crosier was born in Buffalo, 1839, and had always made Buffalo his home. He was the last of the original members of the Irving Kester Seed Co., with which he had been connected during his entire business life. The company is a considerable institution in its line. They handle the field bean business to a certain extent but do not touch the garden seed end. Mr. Crosier was a veteran of the Civil War, having served in the navy of the United States. He is survived by his wife and three children, William Crosier, of Buffalo, George S. Crosier, of Newark, N. J., and Mrs. Moulton. Mr. Crosier was a member of Bidwell-Wilkeson Post, G. A. R., Lake Erie Commandery, K. T., DeMolay Lodge, F. and A. M., the Exempt Volunteer Firemen and was a charter member of Ismailia Temple.

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

The weather the last few days has been all against the English seed growers, 14 degrees of frost occurring in the west of England. The eastern counties have also suffered severely, many inches of snow having fallen in some places. Truly, the lot of the British seed growers is not a happy one in seasons like these.

Reports are, although they may be somewhat premature, that nearly all stocks of seeds are well cleared in flower, vegetable and agricultural lines, peas and beans being a very heavy exception. Flower seeds have gone particularly well, which goes to show the country is in a better spending condition. It is only in prosperous times that flower seeds get cleaned up thoroughly. There may be a considerable surplus of turnips, sweeds, and perhaps sprouts throughout Europe, but one or two seasons like the present growing crops promise to be, will draw heavily on any surplus and a clean-out will be welcome.

There is increased complaint of the prevalence of dodder in clover, etc. This would soon be stamped out if the same measures were adopted in this country as were in France in 1904. In that and preceding years, clover and lucerne cultivation was so severely hampered that the Government Agricultural Department required farmers to destroy the dodder wherever it appeared on their land, by uprooting the whole crop and burying, and afterwards sowing with some plant on which dodder is unable to exist—such as oats, etc., if the dodder had already advanced to a propagating stage the crop

NOTES FROM HOLLAND.

Notwithstanding the continued cold winds during the month of April, vegetation in the bulb fields has shown but comparatively little of its effects. The cold and dry weather of the first two weeks had retarded the hyacinths so much that the Easter holidays showed the bulk of them at their best, and delighted the eyes of the many thousands of visitors during these days.

Tulip fields were in full blaze soon afterwards, but, unfortunately, the very severe night frosts that we experienced, combined with a few days of soaking rain, caused many of the tulip blooms to last only a short time, and nearly all of the double tulips had to be picked before they were quite out, as the frost and wet had already caused the inside of the flower buds to decay.

At present it looks as if the May-flowering tulips are going to make a fine show by the middle of May or before, but of course much depends upon the weather, as these tulips require dry and warm weather to show their grand flowers in their full beauty.

The usual green auction sales in the bulb fields are now in full swing, and tulips are bringing high prices, especially in the standard varieties of self colors. Of hyacinths and narcissi very little has been offered for sale, and prices are about the same as last year. Shipments of cut blooms this season have been very light from this country, as the prices for them ranged very low.

The present outlook of crops is not unfavorable, although the blight in the foliage of the tulips has already made its appearance, and may do considerable damage, as now is the time that the bulbs make their principal growth.—Horticultural Trade Journal.

SEED IMPORTS.

The records of the New York customs house show receipts of seeds at that port last week as follows, including all classes:

Kind.	Bgs.	Value.	Kind.	Bgs.	Value.

CENTAUREAS.

Two very fine forms of annual centaureas, or sweet sultan, are the varieties appropriately named The Bride and The Bridegroom. The first named is white, and the latter a beautiful shade of mauve. The flowers are very fine in size and shape, and immediately attract attention when seen either growing or as cut blooms. There is a "miffyness" about the plants, as with all the sweet sultan type, that does not commend them as pot plants, but they are well worthy of the protection of a cold frame for bringing on an earlier batch for cutting purposes, and before those sown outside can be had in flower.

While centaureas resent anything in the way of coddling when growing, yet the seed germinates much quicker, and in a more satisfactory manner, when raised in a little warmth, but when the seed has come through the soil the plants must be quickly hardened off, or they soon become weak and unsatisfactory. An early batch of plants may be raised for outside planting by sowing two or three seeds in 3-inch pots and planted out without disturbance at the roots, as these annuals do not bear individual transplanting. Should the weather be showery when the flowers are opening a garden light should be placed over them, as the blooms should only be cut when dry, or their beauty is not seen. These two varieties have been introduced by Messrs. Jarman, of Chard.—Gardeners' Magazine.

GESNERAS.

There are numerous species and varieties of these herbaceous, tuberous-rooted plants. Some are remarkable for their handsome foliage, others for both foliage and flowers. Gesnera fulgens, with its deep red flowers and large ovate foliage clothed with red hairs, is a very attractive plant. Grow in a brisk heat with plenty of light and abundance of moisture in the atmosphere. Use a compost of two parts fibrous peat, one of leaf-soil and sand; provide good drainage, and place the bulbs just under the surface of the compost. Give water sparingly until growth appears, when more moisture will be needed, but overhead syringing should be avoided. To increase the stock, cuttings of young shoots, or matured leaves with the stalk inserted in the sandy soil, will root freely.—Gardeners' Magazine.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Business the past week was fair. Considerable activity is shown by the growers, with bedding stock. The prospects for Decoration day trade are good, as a large number of plant orders have already been booked, particularly from outside towns. Prices on cut flowers are fair, although some of the dealers have reduced their prices on roses from $1.50 to $1 per dozen. Carnations are very good, but somewhat small. Prices on them vary considerably, selling for 50 cents, 75 cents or $1 per dozen.

There is considerable miscellaneous stock on the market, including sweet peas, pansies, peonies, and some very choice Pink Ramblers. Baby Rambler plants, being extensively advertised by the catalogue houses, are in big demand. Some dealers have experienced trouble in getting enough to fill orders. The demand from the country is very heavy. Two-year-old stock sells the best, and as it is advertised as an ever-blooming rose, customers in country towns buy them readily. Funeral work has been the main business the past week with the dealers, the demand for loose cut flowers being somewhat light.

St. Paul.

The Swanson Floral Co. has had a very handsome window display the past week, consisting of several huge fancy baskets of Pink Ramblers. They have also displayed some of the finest tulips seen in this section. Gus Colberg, of that concern, says business is good, and predicts a heavy trade for Decoration day and also for graduation exercises, which occur the first part of June.

L. L. May & Co. have a large display of bedding plants in front of their store, which sell fairly well. They have had considerable retail nursery trade in the past weeks. They also report a good trade in funeral work, the demand for cut flowers being light.

Axel Johnson, until recently foreman for Holm & Olson, has discontinued the florists' business. He left the fore part of this week for Idaho, where he will engage in fruit-raising.

Chas. F. Vogt says trade is good. He has a number of orders for planting, and it keeps him pretty busy. He says the retail cut flower business is quiet.

Minneapolis.

Wm. Donaldson & Co. continue to handle large quantities of stock and are greatly pleased at the manner in which the business is keeping up.

The cemetery associations are selling considerable plant stock to dealers. Geraniums that the legitimate grower should sell for 12 cents and 15 cents each, can be purchased from the associations for 6 cents and 8 cents each. The department stores have special sales on them, also on other bedding stock.

NEW CASTLE, IND.

New Castle is essentially a rose-growing town. Effort is put forth, to a certain extent, in other lines of floriculture, but the main object of the florists here is rose-growing. Some interesting statistics have been compiled in regard to the industry:

In all there are five separate rose-growing institutions in New Castle. The greenhouses aggregate seventy-two, and almost fourteen acres of ground are under glass. If these seventy-two glass-covered houses were set end to end they would extend three and one-half miles in length and thirty feet in width. The total glass area is 605,000 square feet, or almost fourteen acres. These figures include the additions which are being built at three of the plants, which will be completed and growing American Beauties on or about July 1.

These places give employment to a large number of men the year around and the money which comes to New Castle as a result of the retail and wholesale business each year is reckoned in six large figures. The additional greenhouses being built are ten in number, making sixty-two which are now complete.

The following tabulated statement shows the number of houses and the square feet of glass covering the five different plants, as they will be by July 1:

	Houses.	Sq. ft. glass
South Park Floral Co.	35	265,000
Weiland & Olinger	16	150,000
Benthey-Coatsworth Co.	10	100,000
Wm. Dittmann	7	75,000
L. A. Jennings	4	15,000

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There has been but little change in the past week. There are about half a dozen stores in operation, and temporary quarters are much sought after by various members of the trade who were completely burned out. The price asked for stores on Fillmore street, which has suddenly become the center of business in this town, almost puts a bar on the florists. Sites in the immediate neighborhood on cross streets will, I think, become within the next few weeks the center of the retail trade in our line. However, as yet there is nothing permanent. There is absolutely no business except a little funeral work, and as for flowers, they are at present in the height of bloom, and can be had at any price the retailer chooses to offer.

Decoration day orders for the interior are coming in daily, and some of the growers will in this way find the first outlet they have had for any portion of their stock since the fire. With them conditions are as bad as it is possible to imagine. Wagon loads of flowers daily going to waste, with absolutely no demand and no prospects of any for the near future. I think it is safe to say, from the observations I have made within the past two weeks, that fully one-half of the stock under glass is being entirely neglected and will be allowed to die.

With the growers of outdoor stock, such as peas, asters and mums, much the same course will be taken. A great deal of this class of goods is grown and marketed by Chinese and Japanese, and the immense amount of labor necessary to handle the two latter articles for the next few months, until they are salable, has discouraged many of these growers, and they have quit for the season. It is possible that there may be a fair demand in the late summer months, and in that case it will be better for those who persevere, as good prices are bound to prevail if the public will purchase.

Over in Oakland, where the population increased from 100,000 to 175,000 in forty-eight hours, conditions are better, although the almost total absence of functions of any sort except funerals has demoralized the demand for everything except white stock. There has been considerable talk among the retailers that a few of them would locate in that town, but at this writing there has been no increase in the number of stores there. Everyone is waiting patiently—and impatiently—for something to happen, they do not know what; and until the trend of trade takes a decided stand and the confines of the business portion receive a decided outline, little will be done. As the matter stands at present, all the large retail stores in the various lines of trade are locating temporarily several miles from the district in which they formerly were stationed, and in a short time I expect to see some of the more enterprising florists located in their wake.

Various Notes.

D. H. Lenox, of Los Angeles, is in town on a week's visit.

The California Floral Society will make no effort to give an exhibition until fall.

The Society Hortensia had its usual bi-monthly meeting on Saturday evening last in Gier's hall, Oakland.

There are many gardeners at present out of employment. The closing down of some of the houses by the big growers is responsible for this.

Not less than half a dozen of the leading aster and chrysanthemum growers in the neighborhood of San Mateo will allow their patches of young plants to dry out. They argue that there will not be demand for more than one-half of the stock grown, and as it costs considerable to handle the plants at this time, they will call "quits."

A. Mann, Jr., was the first among the burned-out florists to get into the harness again. He is rapidly stocking up with a good assortment of florists' supplies.

Oakland and vicinity is at present the center of activity with the basket men. The town is overrun with this branch of the fraternity, much to the annoyance of the local dealers.

John M. Holland, for many years manager of Gill's Floral Depot, Oakland, is on a two weeks' vacation in the northern part of the state.

From present indications there will be a good demand throughout the interior for flowers on Decoration day. A prominent firm, recently burned out, will ship over 100 boxes to Nevada and Utah.

Frank Pelicano has opened a store on Post street, near Devisadero.

Joseph Goldstone, late of Sixth street, near Mission, is now located at 1534 Devisadero street. G.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June 13-15, 1906.

F. M. Ewer, of Faribault, plans to establish a nursery at Park Rapids, Minn.

E. A. Lorbeer has been in the nursery business near Gary, Fla., for twenty-two years and says business is steadily increasing.

The receipts of trees and plants through the New York custom house last week had invoice values of $20,786.

It is reported that D. R. Vivion, of Columbus, Mo., plans to establish a nursery in Torrance county, New Mexico.

The old Washington Park race track property, Chicago, is to be platted, making fourteen city squares. It means a good order for street trees.

On the program of the Texas State Horticultural Society, for its meeting at College Station, July 10 to 12, are found the names of F. T. Ramsey, of Austin, and T. V. Munson, of Denison.

H. M. Simpson & Sons, Vincennes, Ind., say they are sure that one-year-old cherry trees are better than two-year-old for the planter. They say that, whereas a few years ago they never sold a cherry tree under two years, they now have worked up a large business in one-year-old stock.

Secretary A. H. Fewkes, of the American Peony Society, announces that the annual meeting and exhibition for 1906 will be held in Boston, Friday and Saturday, June 15 and 16, in connection with the peony exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. A liberal schedule of prizes is being prepared.

THE SEASON'S TRADE.

Now that the arrival of warm weather has brought an end to activities in the selling and of practically all departments of the nursery trade, a review of the season's business affords cause for felicitation. The wholesale nurserymen cleaned up in probably better shape than in any year since the trade has reached its present large proportions. Little is left, except plum. Of this one item there was considerable surplus. The season was late in opening, which gave grounds for apprehension, but a longer planting season than usual has been afforded in most localities, especially in New England, and the retailers have had an exceptionally good business.

A noticeable feature has been the increase in the call for ornamentals. Many nurserymen who have devoted themselves exclusively to fruit trees are now turning toward the ornamental department as affording the best opportunity for the extension of the business. In other words, it looks as though there are enough fruit trees for the demand, but not enough ornamentals, and the call for trees and shrubs is only in its beginning. In practically all but the newest localities the call for ornamentals is already heavy and sure to increase.

But the greater attention given to ornamentals has not caused the fruit tree department to be neglected. Greater quantities of stock than ever were produced last year and increased plantings indicate still larger supplies for 1907. The prospect for a first-class fruit crop encourages nurserymen to believe that next season will be even better than this. The general prosperity of the country insures a demand in the ornamental department and also is a guarantee of satisfactory collections.

One of the many European nurserymen who have been in this country the past few weeks says that it is quite apparent that the nurserymen of the United States are able to sell much more than they are growing. The quantities of stock imported each season are rapidly on the increase.

THE DALLAS CONVENTION.

Believing that it will be the most convenient for the largest number of our members, the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroad has been chosen as the official route from St. Louis to Dallas, Texas, for the meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen; and that the trip may be as pleasant as possible the following schedule has been arranged: Leave St. Louis, Monday, June 11, about 8:30 p. m. At Parsons, Kansas, Tuesday morning, we will be joined by members from the west who meet in Kansas City, leaving there about 11 p. m. Monday. Dinner will be served at South McAlister, I. T., where we hope to be joined by the southern members who go via Memphis, and we will be due to arrive in Dallas about 6 o'clock in the evening.

A special car will leave Rochester, N. Y., about 10 p. m. June 10, which will run via the New York Central, Lake Shore and Big Four through Buffalo, Cleveland and Indianapolis to St. Louis.

Southern members could doubtless add to the pleasure of their trip by arranging to meet in Nashville, Tenn., and go in a party via Memphis, joining the St. Louis train at South McAlister, I. T.

It is hoped that all will arrange to use the above schedule so that we may all be together and have a good visit the entire trip. If we have 100 or more out of St. Louis there will be a special train which will be run through to Dallas on fast time, stopping only for meals and for members to join our party.

On account of the short time allowed on tickets sold under the certificate plan it has been thought best not to try to use them this year, but members can use mileage to St. Louis, or where there are ten or more in a company they can buy party tickets at mileage rates to St. Louis, Memphis, Kansas City, etc. At St. Louis, Memphis and Kansas City round trip tickets will be furnished on the basis of $20 to Dallas or Houston and we would advise all members to buy the $20 Houston ticket, which will be good for thirty days, and those not wanting to go to Houston can have their tickets validated at Dallas for return. We expect to have a delightful trip of three days to Houston, Galveston and San Antonio, the Houston trip costing nothing extra on these tickets, the San Antonio trip only $3 and the Galveston trip only $1 extra. On the return trip from Dallas we will have the opportunity of changing our route so as to pass through Oklahoma City and Kansas City, stopping at these points as well as other places for any side trips we may want to make within the thirty-day limit.

Those who wish to secure berths from St. Louis to Dallas should notify me at once how many berths are wanted and send $4 per berth for Pullman and $2 per berth for tourist cars and I will have same reserved. The regular rate for berths from St. Louis to Dallas is $5 for Pullman and $2.50 for tourist cars, but we hope by having applications in early and making up car-loads to be able to charter the cars so as to make a saving of $1 or more per berth on the Pullman and 50 cents or more on the tourist cars, and of course applications will be filed as received and this saving can only be made to those who get in early with applications and secure berths in the full cars.

If there are any who want further information, write me and I will be glad to give the fullest possible particulars.

DENVER.

The Market.

The past week found very little change in the cut flower business. Some of the retailers complained of slow business, but the larger shops say it compares favorably with the same time last year. The greenhouse men are very busy with bedding and the sale of plants.

Stock is plentiful. Roses are fine and coming in large numbers, with quality up to the standard, while prices remain about the same. American Beauties are also very much in evidence and prices are somewhat lower, the best grade being retailed for $6 per dozen, while some short-stemmed ones can be bought for $2.

Carnations are good and the price is maintained a great deal better than on roses. The indications are that there will not be any too many for Decoration day. Spring flowers are coming in large numbers. Sweet peas, peonies, irises, poet's narcissi and an assortment of other seasonable flowers are seen.

Sweet peas are arriving in large quantities and are of fine quality. It will not be long until the price will go down, they now bringing 40 cents and 50 cents per hundred. Lilac is good, both in white and purple, and sells well, although prices are not quotable. Cape jasmine has arrived, but as yet has found no ready sale.

The indications are that Memorial day will be observed very extensively in Colorado, and already the different stores have booked many orders for out-of-town customers.

Various Notes.

The Park Floral Co. had considerable work the past week for the funeral of R. K. Sheldon, the popular club man. One of the most attractive pieces was an immense blanket of white roses, valley and adiantum.

The fishing season opens June 1, and a number of the florists have their rods and supplies ready to cast the first line.

W. H. Grimes, the florist and nurseryman of the north side, was elected alderman of the Fifteenth ward at the last city election, May 15, by the large majority of four votes. Al. Mauff was elected in the Eleventh ward.

E. S. K.

Maquoketa, Ia.—J. Odgers, proprietor of the Maquoketa Greenhouse, says trade has nearly doubled the past year. It is the only greenhouse in the town.

BUFFALO.

Current Comment.

A chilly week shortened up flowers, but Sol's familiar face is again beaming on us and that marvelous power and author of all animated nature, which has developed a single cell of microscopical size to the wonderful being called man, has again made flowers plentiful, especially roses.

Most of the carnations are planted out, and on that particular locality in which we are interested we sighed for a shower to fall from the clouds on our thirsty little carnations, and it came copiously and gave us the best possible start for next winter's success. It came without prayers, for the rain falls on saint and sinner alike.

There are rumors that one of our large department stores, one that is famous for its novel enterprises, will hold a chrysanthemum show this fall. The prizes offered will be large enough to induce the specialists of the country to exhibit. It will be under the most able management, and if it ripens into a certainty the premium list will soon be disseminated.

We are informed that the greenhouses of Joseph H. Rebstock, on Elmwood avenue, about 20,000 feet of glass, were purchased by S. A. Anderson. The latter is a most enterprising young man and deserves to succeed. No lycopodium or selaginella grows on his anatomy.

We are all glad to hear that our fine Forest Lawn cemetery is to have a splendid new entrance from Delaware avenue. For years this was the principal entrance, but it was not in keeping with such grounds. The gate and building will be grand architecturally, the approaches to it wide and spacious and the business offices, hitherto not favorably situated, will be removed to the new entrance. This will be very gratifying to George Troup, the able superintendent, for, fine position as he has, there is little more ground to improve in the 300 acres, and he sighs like the great king of Macedonia for more worlds to conquer or more rugged land to tame and embellish.

Henry Fishell, a Corfu florist, has passed through a terrible attack of pneumonia. His friends were long in despair, but he is out again, much reduced in weight, but able to enjoy a beefsteak and cigar. He is at present picking a fine lot of sweet peas, not of the winter-flowering varieties, but the standard sorts, like Emily Henderson, Countess of Radnor, etc. W. S.

Some People have taken our advice as published in these columns recently and are buying My Maryland for trial. We reiterate here—if it succeeds with you as it does with us, it will prove the best white carnation you ever grew. Despite the variety's apparent failure in several places, we strongly advise all growers to give it a trial. We have been frank about its faults as developed in other places. We doubt if these will develop in many places.

Jessica we believe, will succeed generally and will prove to be the best red and white variegated ever disseminated. Few varieties show as strong constitution as this one does and it is a wonderful producer. Extra fine stock of both varieties ready now. R. C., $2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. NEW ORLEANS.

Although some preparations already are made among the florists for our flower show next fall, no final arrangements will be made before the committee confers with the ladies of the New Orleans Floral Association. Mrs. W. J. Behan is the president and we all want to be assured of her co-operation.

The first meeting of the Southern Interstate Florists' Association was held May 21 at Chattanooga. C. W. Eichling was appointed chairman of the New Orleans delegation. At least twenty-five of our members have already signed the agreement to membership, the initial fee being $1.

As the time is coming for rest, we are thinking of our outing, which will take place some time in July; and, acting on that subject, J. St. Mard, acting as president pro tem, appointed a committee of three, C. R. Panther, Harry Ellwood and Otto Abele, to find the most suitable place for a little recreation.

Jos. Schindler & Co. report seed business dull at this time. Floral work also is not much in demand. A few good orders are on hand for next month's weddings.

G. M. Wichers is well satisfied with the season, having disposed of a good quantity of aquatic plants and different kinds of ferns. He has been renting a few acres of ground a short distance from the city for nursery purposes.

Last Saturday E. Valdejo and wife left on the Louisiana for Havre. They will tour the continent till cold weather brings them back to our sunny state.

Dry weather for more than a month has been interfering with the planting of chrysanthemums and brought business to a very low ebb. In fact, the market is reduced to very little. We will have to do the best we can for the next few months.

H. A. Despommier, who for some time was assistant gardener to the Illinois Central railroad stations along the line, has accepted a position as head gardener at Athletic park, this city. He is assisted by his son and a gang of workmen. They lately have been planting a large number of bedding plants furnished by J. A. Newsham. M. M. L.

WE ARE HEADQUARTERS FOR

PRINCESS VIOLET STOCK

THE Princess of Wales is still the leader of all single Violets. There is no other variety on the market that can compare with it as a commercial violet, because it blooms from September 15 to May 1, every bloom is marketable. It has color, it has length of stem, it has fragrance. It sells when any other variety single or double can not be given away. The people want it. So great is my confidence in this Violet that the following Autumn I will devote 80,000 feet of glass to the growing of this variety.

I have about 200,000 nice young divisions now ready to ship at the following prices: $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate. Lots of 5000, $14.00 per 1000. Lots of 10,000, $13.00 per 1000.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

We have just come through a week that has given us a taste of summer business. There was a great deal of comment along this line from all the retailers, as the sudden dropping off of trade came in the nature of a shock. However, they expect to do better this week, and no doubt the Knights Templar conclave will help some.

Among the wholesale houses, roses, sweet peas and white carnations came in in an avalanche, and could be bought at the buyer's own price, as they were only too glad to get them out of sight. Beauties were as bad as anything else, so, taken as a whole, one must call it an unsatisfactory week.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams' force is very busy with the Templar decorations.

While the cut flower dealers are complaining, the plantsmen are getting in their work. The hot weather rushed them to the limit, and stock is going out as fast as it can be packed. Nearly all say they will be cleaned up by Decoration day.

John Bader's large force is working night and day getting out bedding and porch plants.

Ben Elliott could not keep out of the business. He is helping John Bader through his rush.

J. W. Glenn, of Kittanning, this summer will put up a greenhouse for decorative stock in the rear of his store.

M. Blaha, of Aspinwall, has a fine stock of geraniums, which are bringing him $10 per hundred wholesale, and he does not have to seek buyers.

Hoo-Hoo.

Please discontinue my advertisement of ferns; I have sold my entire stock. The Review does the work, all right.—Mrs. A. Duebendorfer, Elwood, Ind.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Market.

May 6 to 9 we had a very cold spell, which put an end to anything like the business we all expected this month. It certainly was a hard freeze, as low as 25 degrees above zero being recorded in places. All planted tender stock, such as tomato plants and moonvines, was killed; buyers are still very shy, as it was certainly a set-back to be remembered. Cut flowers have sold very well indeed the past two weeks, and funeral work has been especially active. The seedsmen are nearing the end of what has been a better season than the average; orders have on the whole averaged larger than for some seasons. Bedding plants are having a good run; especially are geraniums in demand, and of these almost every order is for S. A. Nutt. We need rain badly.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held its monthly meeting May 15, with President Stephens in the chair. Outside of the officers very few were present, as everybody is working. Regular business was transacted. The report of the committee on seeds for the school children showed a surplus of $50 after all bills were paid. The next meeting will be Tuesday evening, June 5.

Thomas Meehan & Sons, of Philadelphia, have been doing some large landscape contracts in Columbus this spring. Many evergreens have been used. Leonard Morse has had charge of the work.

The city of Columbus is to engage a park expert; $5,000 has been appropriated for the purpose. The man engaged must outline a scheme for the beautification of our park system.

The Livingston Seed Co. has been having a sale of General Jacqueminot roses that has been very successful. The plants were large and strong, and at 25 cents each or five for $1, went fast.

Graff Bros. have, at 35 cents a dozen, sold immense quantities of carnations lately.

Among recent visitors have been Jacs. Smits, of Naarden, Holland, and P. M. Koster, of Boskoop, Holland; also Frank T. Worman, of Troy, Ohio.

ZERO.

EVANSTON, ILL.—John Weiland recently purchased sixty feet on Sherman avenue, directly north of the city hall. He will tear down the old frame building now occupying the ground, and erect a two or three-story building, with store rooms below and flats above. He will occupy one of the stores and will have a greenhouse in the rear.

It is fine, like flour, no waste, and odorless. Just the thing for the lawn, garden, plants and shrubbery, and, in fact, any soil you put it on will give you good results. INSECTICIDES.

Haslam's Insect Powder, an infallible insecticide. Destroys insects injurious to house and garden plants, shrubs, trees, vines, potatoes, melons, cabbage, currants and vegetables, and fruits of all kinds.
This preparation, though poisonous to insects, does not injure the foliage. It is used either by dusting or in water by spraying. Also destroys lice on fowls, cattle and dogs. Kills green fly on roses and other flowers, insects on quinces and pears. Insects that fly like flea beetles and rose bugs are more difficult to contend against than are caterpillars or slugs. Look often and dust or sprinkle when necessary.
Put up in 1-lb. boxes at 25c; 5 boxes for $1.00. Special prices in bulk.
Haslam Chemical Co., 118 Cliff St., Scranton, Pa.

Sprinkle it freely about stables, kennels, cow sheds, pig sties, poultry houses, rabbit hutches, farm-yards, market places, factories, urinals, ash bins, etc. For disinfecting walls, ceilings, cattle trucks, and slaughter-houses, make the powder into a wash or milk by admixture with water and apply it in that form.
This is the purest and has the most strength of any lime made. Sure death to vermin and insects and superior to chloride of lime. No odor. Put up in bulk at 10c per lb.

NEW NITROGENOUS FERTILIZER.

As the outcome of the desire to utilize some part of the abundant supplies of the free nitrogen of the air in the production of garden and farm crops, German scientists have devised a means by which a percentage can be fixed in such manner as to admit of it being used for the enrichment of the soil. This fertilizer, which is known as lime-nitrogen, and is being manufactured in considerable quantities, has created considerable interest in Germany, and numerous experiments have been carried out for the purpose of testing its value. In the manufacture of the fertilizer the nitrogen is obtained from the atmosphere by passing air through vertical retorts or cylinders containing copper shavings and heated to a temperature of about 100 degrees Centigrade. In the passage of the air the oxygen is taken up by the copper, and the nitrogen is then conveyed in pipes to a retort heated by an electric furnace and filled with calcium carbide. The nitrogen, on reaching the retort, is absorbed by the carbide, and calcium cyanide or lime-nitrogen is formed. This contains nineteen per cent of nitrogen.

Experiments have been made at several stations, and the results obtained from the use of lime-nitrogen as a fertilizing agent were about equal to those from nitrate of soda. The fact that the nitrogen of the air has been fixed is a matter of considerable importance, and we shall watch further developments with much interest.—Gardeners' Magazine.

Current Comment.

Since the cool weather we experienced a week ago, causing all planting to stop, a warmer spell is again holding sway. The plant trade revived with the temperature during the past week, and will be rushing from now on till Decoration day. All the florists' establishments are well supplied with a good assortment of bedding stock, and can take care of all orders.

Baur & Smith have done a larger shipping trade this season than in any former year. The small towns are using plants in quantity, and no doubt the trade will grow as years go on.

Martin Nelson has a seedling geranium that is a "hummer." It is a cross between Jean Viaud and Ricard, and in color is a brighter Ricard. The growth of the plant is stocky, making it an ideal bedder. Mr. Nelson is working up a fine stock of it.

The present dry spell is hard on outside stuff and many have to lay water pipes to their lots to save carnations and asters. The Indianapolis Plant and Flower Co. laid several hundred feet of pipe to reach their carnation patch.

John Bertermann is as brown as a berry, and looking well, due to leading a strenuous life on his farm east of the city. John is just commencing when a great many men would leave off.

I am glad to report the convalescence of Mrs. A. F. J. Baur, who was at the Deaconess hospital for treatment. She was able to return home last week, and is rapidly regaining her strength.

Wm. Billingsly, a disciple of Isaak Walton, is out occasionally these days, trying his luck on the banks of the river.

MILWAUKEE.

Last week stock came in at a lively gait, and on account of warm weather much of it was in bad shape for shipping. Prices took a tumble, especially on the poorer grades.

Street venders were very much in evidence. The writer noted one on a busy corner selling carnations at 10 cents per bunch of two dozen. Returns on these must be gratifying to the one who grew them. Several stores on our main streets displayed large signs, "Roses and carnations, 10 cents per dozen," and usually displayed fancy stock conspicuously as a bait to induce customers to come in; but they didn't get what they expected. The Greeks are the main aggressors in these cheap offerings.

The warm spell also forced outdoor stock into flower too early to be of much use for Decoration day. Tulips and lilacs are now in full bloom. Valley is just coming in and indications point to a good supply for Memorial day. Sweet peas are moving fairly, with the supply about equal to the demand. Roses dropped a peg in quality, but the supply is heavy.

Green goods are becoming scarce. Ferns are shortening up, and smilax and asparagus are bringing good prices. Bedding stock is now moving rapidly, but there is no probability of any shortage. Nearly all the grocers are handling bedding plants now, and are selling stock below wholesale quotations.

The Florists' Club gave a May party last Saturday night, which was fairly well attended. INCOG.

THE TEST OF QUALITY

Cypress is conceded by all authorities to be the best wood for greenhouse construction and quite a little has been said about the "right kind of cypress." What way have you of knowing the "right kind of cypress?" Can you tell by looking at a cypress plank just where the sap lies and what kind it is?

One way to be sure that you get the "right kind" of cypress, is to place your order with a firm that makes a test of every piece before shipping and employs an extert to detect cypress defects. Send for "Why Use Cypress" and "The Mummy's Case."

Why Don't You Get Ready

Fire travels 3 times length of boiler. We keep the heat in the boiler and not up the chimney.

for fall before fall gets ready for you? You know exactly what you need done to your plant factory, better now than you will then. By that time a lot of things will slip your mind, so by all means, overhaul the boiler and piping now. Last fall every one wanted their boiler shipped about the same day—Now, we can't promise that sort of thing. We simply took care of orders the best possible—and there were some who felt they were held up too long—and they were, but you can't blame us simply because florists want "Burnham" Boilers.

But we do blame you when you blame us for things you are to blame for—and one of those things is putting off till then what you should do now.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Growing Carnations Indoors.

If you grow any of your carnations indoors through the summer, you should look after them closely right along. There are several good ways of handling them, and the method to follow will depend on the nature of your business. If you grow only a few benches this way, and you do not need the room for other plants, when you have planted your young stock in the field you can use the vacant benches to plant on. We prefer to plant the latter part of May, if possible. The weather is not so hot at that time, and the young plants take hold readily. It saves a shifting and the plants are more easily cared for on the benches than in pots.

If, however, you need all your bench room until June or July, then the young plants must be shifted into 4-inch pots and should be plunged outdoors if possible and kept watered sufficiently to keep them growing. Care should be taken to plant them before they become too pot-bound. They should be just right for a shift when you plant them. Some of the best Lawson we have ever seen were handled this way.

The soil should be the same as is stacked up for planting later on, and the bench should be prepared the same way. We put a layer of cow manure at the bottom, about an inch thick, and on this fill in about three inches of soil. We do not mix bone with this soil, preferring to put on a dressing later, when the plants have begun active growth.

When setting the plants have a small depression around each one, so you can water each plant separately for a few days. Give a good watering around each plant to settle the soil, and after that water sparingly until the plants get under way, but do not let them suffer at any time. A light spraying to dampen the surface of the soil, two or three times daily on warm days, will help them considerably, but do not spray late in the afternoon. They should be dry at night.

Keep up this treatment until the weeds are large enough to pull, when the soil should be broken up and leveled off. By that time the plants will have a good start and will be in shape to have the whole bed watered and a mulch of loose material applied to prevent drying out. Spraying should be reduced to once each day, in the forenoon, and water may be applied liberally at the roots to promote a strong growth.

Give all the air possible at all times during the day and leave the ventilators up as high as you dare at night. No shade should be applied at any time, under this method, as it will cause a soft growth, and of all things that is what you want to avoid. The growth should be short-jointed and sturdy, as near like that produced in the field as is possible. If your plants by August 1 are as strong and have as many shoots as those in the field, then you can feel that you are having excellent success.

When selecting your plants, of course you choose the best ones for indoor planting and put the others out in the field to bench later on if desired. There are several reasons for this. An inferior plant will recover better with a favorable season outdoors than it will inside, and in the end will prove more satisfactory. Then, again, you want to plant all good plants inside because you want them all to thrive and you don't want to replant a lot of them and have an uneven lot of stock.

A. F. J. BAUR.

HARVEYS' RETURNS.

The new trussed houses now in course of construction by the Lord & Burnham Co., for Alban Harvey & Sons, of Brandywine Summit, Pa., are the first of this kind to be built in the Chester county carnation belt. Harvey & Sons started in business four years ago, as growers of carnations and mushrooms. The quality of their stock has attracted favorable attention and they are under the necessity of adding new glass. The new houses will be planted with 6,000 plants each of Mrs. Lawson, Enchantress and Lady Bountiful. They also will grow 6,000 Queen. The Belle, Flamingo, Mrs. Patten, Cardinal, Craig and White Perfection will be planted in smaller quantities.

The illustration is from a photograph taken at their place last October. The house shown was planted August 23, 1905.

The following figures kindly furnished by the Messrs. Harvey, were compiled for their guidance next season. They show the number of blooms cut per square foot for each variety, also the money returns per square foot for each sort, and will be of much interest to the trade.

Average number of blooms per square foot of bench space for each variety:

Variety.	Oct.	Nov.	Dec.	Jan.	Feb.	Mar.	Apr.	7 mo.
Marian	2.8	2.2	2.2	3.2	2.6	3	2 3	17.8
Queen	1.8	2.8	2.9	3.7	3.8	3.5	3.7	22.2

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

There is a regular glut of roses in the English markets; probably never before have so many been on sale in such fine condition. It may be of interest to note that all these magnificent blooms are grown in pots under glass. The largest rose growing center in the United Kingdom probably is Hampton-on-Thames, where it is no uncommon thing for a grower to have dozens of houses of rose stock in full swing at one time. They are also extensively grown at Enfield, Cheshunt and Waltham Cross. Beckwith & Sons, of the Cheshunt district, are perhaps the largest market rose growers in England. A selection of varieties grown may be of interest to compare with those grown in the States, the following being principal varieties: Liberty, Gen. Jacqueminot, Catherine Mermet, Safrano, Kaiserin, Mrs. Laing, etc. Very high feeding is generally practiced, animal liquid manure being more suitable than artificials in any shape; in fact, the whole crop appears to depend upon feeding, the soil in which they are potted being comparatively poor. The object is to make a foundation of good hard plant before bringing under the influence of heat, then rapidly forcing the bloom, and the more feeding the plant can take while under glass the more highly and richly colored will be the bloom.

Retarded lily of the valley now consist principally of second rate spikes. As I predicted, the effect of last season's poor crop of first quality crowns is now making itself apparent. The selected grades of spikes are very scarce and dear, while second and third quality is a glut. It is a mistake in any year, whether crops are heavy or light, to put into the icehouse anything but very finest quality crowns. The process of retarding in all cases reduces the quality of spike.

It may interest sweet pea growers to know the secretary of the National Sweet Pea Society is now Charles H. Curtis, whose address is Adalaide road, Brentford, Middlesex, Mr. Wright having resigned for personal reasons, after giving efficient service. B. J.

COMMERCIAL GROWING.

Young Stock.

The bedding plant trade is in full blast just now, and to that large class of florists who run chrysanthemums in conjunction with this crop I would say, don't forget your mum stock. If you have not yet enough stock in the sand, attend to it right away and put in what cuttings you may need.

Not a few claim that it is cheaper to buy stock than to devote time and space to carrying over old stools. As to that, every one knows his own business best, but orders for stock seem particularly heavy this year, and I would advise prospective buyers to see about their stock without delay, as June planting is late enough for early and midseason kinds.

If you have a batch of plants that need to be planted, it is better to pinch them back and either pot them on, or put thinly into flats, than to have them sitting around, getting dried out every hour and becoming of small value by the time they are needed for planting. The tops of plants so treated can be used as cuttings and put in the sand. They will do all right for 6-inch pots, or if they are late varieties, like Nonin, Chadwick or Swinburne, such cuttings will make plants in good time for July planting for late flowers.

Watering and Spraying.

The hot days are once more with us, and the chief trouble now is to keep the plants watered. Dry winds, small pots and a rapid growth combine to make the mum a very thirsty plant these days, and if stock is allowed to dry out a few times the black fly comes, and comes to stay. Why flies should appear so quickly on neglected plants is hard to understand, but it is a condition and not a theory and can only be combated with tobacco dust, and plenty of it. In addition to the fly, when the plants get hard and woody at the base from lack of water, they never make the satisfactory growth they should make, and the largest measure of success is given to the man who never neglects his stock for one single day.

There is in many quarters an idea that to spray a house with the hot sun shining full on it means scalding and burning of the plants. This idea is entirely erroneous, as any one can see who tries it for himself. Evaporation is so rapid that not the least harm will result, but, on the contrary, a whole lot of good. A vigorous spray all over the house several times a day lowers the temperature many degrees and makes life more endurable for the chrysanthemum, to which the intense heat of a modern greenhouse is a very unnatural condition.

One of the chief secrets of fine foliage is judicious and persistent spraying. A sprayer that throws a stream in an upward direction to get underneath the leaves is a necessity in a mum house during the summer months.

Pot Plants.

If you are figuring on growing quite a few pot plants this year, a good way to handle them is to plant them closely on a bench and grow them there for two or three months. So grown, they take less time in watering and will not need nearly so much care as they would if in pots. If a bench is not available, they may be planted outdoors on a rich plot of soil, handy to the water supply. The only trouble with outdoor culture is that in many sections the chinch bug and other bugs are so numerous and so busy that the grower gets little for his trouble after they get theirs.

By pot plants in this case I am referring to plants that are grown with six or more flowers on a plant, not the single-stemmed plants I referred to in my last notes.

Early planted houses are now making a nice start, and if the soil is kept stirred up once a week at least, it keeps the weeds down with a minimum of labor. On hot days spray the foliage, walls and paths several times a day.

TRIMMING GOLDEN GLOW.

Will you be so kind as to tell me, in your next number, what time to trim Rudbeckia Golden Glow so that it will not grow so tall and still not interfere with its blooming? I wish to use it as a hedge. B. P.

This well-known and popular perennial is naturally a rampant grower, and one which spreads very rapidly. If taken up at once, divided and replanted, it will still bloom quite freely, but will not grow to the objectionable height referred to. This is really the only way to reduce its height and still allow it to flower satisfactorily. Starving it at the roots is not desirable, as the flowers produced under such conditions would not be creditable. Fall is the best time to do the transplanting, any time during the months of September and October being suitable. Better do this, dividing annually at that season, to shorten the stature of the plants. W. N. C.

VALLEY FOR STORAGE.

In my letter of February, published in the Review, I gave a detailed article to American lily of the valley growers on cold storage lily of the valley, pointing out that the results which a retarded valley crown gives are subject to its selection, and especially advised American growers to take the Berlin early-forcing valley pips for cold storage purposes.

This letter has induced Mr. Hansen, valley grower at the Harry Dale Estate, Brampton, Ont., to give a controversial statement, and to call my notes misleading.

Mr. Hansen wishes me to distinguish between cold storage lily of the valley and retarded cold storage valley. I do not think it necessary that the lilies of the valley on arrival in your country be placed immediately in cold storage if you want them for forcing from the beginning of January until March. This use is surely a matter of comfort, and prevents loss of time. A careful storage outside, in the sand, would undoubtedly be better for those which you do not wish to use until spring.

In my recent letter I spoke only of retarded cold storage lily of the valley, and the gentlemen who wrote the letters which induced me to speak of cold storage valley also spoke of valley grown late in summer and harvest.

I also said that lily of the valley with fibrous, bunchy roots would give as good results as retarded cold storage pips, but drew attention of the growers to the fact that this result depended upon the state of maturity of such stock at the harvest time.

After a dry, warm summer, these so-called Berlin crowns, grown on light, sandy soil, which usually keeps dry, will, of course, mature very early, and give excellent results when grown for Christmas use but will not at all be fit for retarded cold storage purposes.

After a dull, wet summer, which does not allow them to ripen in October, so that artificial means must be used to make them fit for early Christmas forcing, they will slowly ripen in cold storage and give good results when forced during summer and autumn.

To show you this difference, I took, on April '11, photographs of some single flowers and two boxes out of one of my greenhouses. The first illustration shows some single spikes, roots very fibrous, pips of an average first quality early forcing Berlin valley, say of the type Berolina.

Being grown too late in the season, the foliage has quite overgrown the flowers, and is curled. The flower stalks are short, weak, and have partly become deformed. On the whole, the result is a poor one, but, nevertheless, you must admit that the roots and the size of the pip are of a fair appearance, so that a better result should have come out. The fault was that this pip was grown too late in the season.

The other pips, with the less fibrous and stubby roots, are of the type Polaris, especially fit for retarded cold storage purposes, and for late forcing in March and April. These are grown on heavy, loamy soils, and put under the same treatment in the greenhouse. The flower stalks stay straight upright, the bells are well and uniformly set apart, the foliage is shorter in proportion; in short, these flowers are just right for market use.

Now compare the boxes from which these two sorts of flowers were taken, and you can observe for yourself the difference better than I could ever explain it in words, and you will understand why I never would advise you to use early-forcing valley for retarding purposes.

It must be clear to every grower that a valley pip producing such abundant foliage does not produce as strong flowers as a pip which produces less foliage.

Referring to the illustrations, the boxes in question contain pips of second quality, as I am almost exclusively forcing only second quality crowns, which are assorted from the harvest as unfit for export.

The illustrations on pages 82 and 83 will give an idea of the valley-forcing department in my establishment. Both photographs were taken just before Christmas, and the one house shows retarded cold storage valleys, while the other shows freshly harvested autumn crowns in flower. E. Neubert.

SOUTHERN FLORISTS' SOCIETY.

Organized at Chattanooga, Tenn.

As briefly reported in last week's Review, the Society of Southern Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists was organized in the rooms of the chamber of commerce at Chattanooga, Tenn., May 22. The society is a child of the Society of American Florists, is founded on the same principles as that association, and has as its object the betterment of the trade of the south.

Those present at the initial meeting were Robert C. Beckmans, of Augusta, Ga.; C. W. Eichling, of New Orleans; J. F. Wilson, of Poulan, Ga.; Robert S. Walker, of Chattanooga; W. F. Hoeger, of Hill City; Fred Grindler, of Chattanooga; Mrs. J. W. Crouch, Chattanooga, and C. E. Hunt, St. Elmo. These were made charter members of the society with the following, whose applications were presented by Mr. Eichling:

Charles R. Painter, P. A. Shopin, J. St. Mard, J. W. Werner, Paul Abele, J. A. Newsham, Otto Abele, A. Alost, M. M. de Lapouyade, H. A. Despommier, F. L. Chopin, Jacob Rausch, John Dobbs, Thomas Betz, H. L. Ilivell, Henry Kratz, Harry Papworth, George D. Mann, Ed Baker, Frank B. Faessel, Charles Eble, J. H. Menard, Claude L. Ory, Joseph A. Schindler, A. H. Schalck, F. Rieth, Fred Ziegler, Richard Eichling, U. J. Virgin, Joseph Steckler, and Richard P. Steckler, all of New Orleans; B. M. Wichers, Gretna, La., and Chas. Alff, Austin, Tex.

C. W. Eichling was elected temporary chairman and Dr. J. F. Wilson acted as temporary secretary. After the purpose of the projected organization and the many benefits likely to result from it had been explained, the delegates voted to form a permanent organization, adopting the name of Society of the Southern Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists. Officers were elected as follows: President, R. C. Berckmans; vice-president, C. W. Eichling; second vice-president, C. E. Hunt; secretary, J. F. Wilson; treasurer, Joseph Steckler. Mr. Eichling was proposed for the presidency, but he declined in favor of Mr. Berckmans, thus giving the new organization "a president who is widely and favorably known and who enjoys the confidence of every one who has the pleasure of knowing him."

The election over, the morning session adjourned at noon with instructions to the committee on constitution and by-laws to report at 5 p. m.

As it is one of the principles of the new society to co-operate with other existing horticultural societies, and with the Society of American Florists in particular, the constitution and by-laws of the latter were taken as a guide and were adopted in such condensed form as to make them serviceable for the new society. Among the eliminations are the appointment of a botanist, entomologist and a vegetable pathologist, also the registration of new varieties of plants. This work was left entirely to the Society of American Florists in order to facilitate these important branches and avoid mistakes. Annual conventions combined with exhibitions, reading and discussions of papers of interest to southern florists are to be held, time and place to be determined at each annual meeting.

When the meeting had reached this point there developed a strong competition for the first annual convention. The Chattanooga members, backed up by their energetic secretary of the chamber of commerce, put up a good fight. C. W. Eichling, of New Orleans, brought out so many points in favor of his home city, together with the fact that New Orleans has furnished the bulk of the list of members, that he finally carried off the victory, promising the members an interesting meeting and a jolly good time in the old Crescent City.

The annual dues were fixed at $1, there being no initiation fee. The charter roll will be left open yet awhile, so as to permit all florists to join the society at this nominal rate.

The meeting adjourned at 6:30 p. m. with mutual congratulations and the promise to work for the welfare of the new society.

ANTS.

Will you please inform me how I can get rid of ants outdoors? C. J. E.

Ants are very troublesome garden pests, and when present in large numbers are about the hardest thing I know of to eradicate. Several plans are adopted. Bailey, in the "Horticulturists' Rule Book," recommends bisulphide of carbon. This is poured into holes six inches deep and a foot apart, the holes being immediately filled up.

An old method of trapping them is to use bones from which the meat has just been cut. Laid near to where the ants are, these will soon be covered with the busy little fellows. The best means of killing is to immerse in boiling water. After the bones have dried off, they again may be placed as before, where the ants are working; and with a little attention to the dipping of the bones as they are covered, large quantities are soon caught and destroyed.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Saving Tulip Bulbs.

There are many of our thrifty customers who think they can save the old tulip bulbs and replant in the fall and expect as fine a show as the first year. The way the tulips are treated it cannot be done. If the bulbs were undisturbed until the Fourth of July, they then would have the month of June to mature and ripen the young bulb that is to flower next spring. As it is, the tulips have only just dropped their petals when our customers want the beds replenished with geraniums, cannas or some other summer bedding plant, so the bulbs are ruthlessly dug up, just when they are making the growth of bulb for another year. If you attempt to save the bulbs for another year, leave the tops entire. Cut nothing away, and store them where they will be dry, but in the shade.

An amateur in our city, who has a large garden of splendid late tulips, was asked if he disturbed his tulips often. He replied that he only dug them once in three years, and if the ground is good I think that is good advice, and they then should be dug only in September, when the bulb is perfectly dormant.

Late Tulips Profitable.

A bed of late tulips would pay any florist who has the ground to spare. The early varieties that force so well make a gorgeous show in the month of May, but are over and gone before Memorial day. The late varieties, like the Parrot and Gesneriana, are in their prime at that important floral day. Most of the late tulips are very inexpensive, and it would not cost much to plant half an acre. All the labor would be to keep the ground free of weeds and give a good dressing of manure every fall, and every third or fourth year lift, divide and replant.

Planting a Bed.

Yearly I have something to say about how to plant a flower bed, say of zonal geraniums, cannas or any other flowering plants. Most of the flower beds we are asked to plant are rounded up. This may be all right for appearance, but it certainly is not healthy for the plants, for a shower, or even a heavy rain, has little chance to penetrate the soil, but washes off to the edges. Even with a hose you have to water a long time to get the moisture where it will do good.

Make liberal holes and set the plants in position, putting in only soil enough around the balls to keep the plants in position. When all are planted get the hose and fill copiously each hole the plants are sitting in. Not only will you be thoroughly watering the roots, but the adjacent soil will be soaked, from which the roots can absorb moisture for a long time.

After the water has soaked away it takes only a few seconds to fill the holes with dry soil. This can be done quickly with a rake and the dry soil acts as a mulch and does not bake, as it would if you watered on the surface. If simply put into the ground, and two weeks of dry weather set in, the roots roast and perish, leaves turn yellow, and it's a poor start. This method takes a little more time, but what is that compared to the welfare of the plants the whole summer?

Hose vs. Hoe.

There is much harm done in the garden by the senseless use of the hose. Seldom do the zonal geraniums need any artificial watering. The finest I have ever seen never had a drop but what fell from the clouds, except that first thorough watering Plants with large foliage, like cannas and caladiums, will take lots of water. Some small plants, like pansies and verbenas, must be watered in dry times, and dahlias enjoy a soaking occasionally, but this promiscuous sprinkling every evening, just sufficient to bake the surface, is not only useless, but an actual injury. If you can thoroughly soak a flower bed once a week, in the absence of rain, and then be sure to hoe the next day, you have done some good, but if you can't find time to hoe, then don't water. Hoeing, or keeping the surface loose and porous, is of far more importance than watering.

Plant Plenty Mums.

In a week's time you will be over the rush and have an opportunity to attend to some important work at home. Getting the chrysanthemums on the bench will be one of the first jobs. There is another scribe who tells you most ably all about the mums, and I only want to say, plant lots of the good market varieties. Chrysanthemums would be very unprofitable if they occupied the benches until Christmas, but they don't. They are out of the way before you want the space for lilies, azaleas and much other stock.

Lily of the Valley at the Establishment of E. Neubert, Wandsbaek, Germany.

We had thousands of flowers go to waste last fall because they did not sell, but of Ivory and Appleton, Nagoya and Alice Byron we ran short. I don't want to say anything against the beautiful novelties, for it is most fascinating to see them develop, but costly experience has taught us that you only want a few of the exhibition varieties and thousands of those mentioned, also Maud Dean, Mrs. Weeks, Golden Wedding, Major Bonnaffon, etc. Australia has raised wonderful chrysanthemums, but it seems to me that America is still to the front with the best commercial varieties, and please remember to have at least half of all your crop white. The demand for white last fall was very marked, for funeral bunches. They were in great demand, and for this the Ivory type of flower is unequaled. It is the right size and the right form. While some varieties should be on the bench by the middle of May, there is time for many until the first of July.

Azaleas Outdoors.

The azaleas that were unsold at Easter, if given a warm house and plenty of syringing, will have a young growth and should now be plunged outdoors in the full sun. Put them in a frame of boards. Even if the boards are only six inches high, it holds the plunging material in place, and the tidy appearance is worth something to you. For a plunging material refuse hops is unequaled, and when fall comes the hops are a most valuable ingredient for potting soil, especially for the nephrolepis ferns. If you don't have that, then stable litter will do.

Choose a place for your frames where water will not stand after heavy rains, or the copious watering and syringing that the azaleas need daily. Let the plunging material be up to the rims of the pots, or drying out will occur too often. Don't plunge the azaleas too closely together, for they grow a good deal during summer. There should be daylight between each plant, for you want to get at them with the hose to keep down mealy bug, thrip and red spider.

I will say here that the best flowered plants we have for Easter are the plants we have carried over summer. Strange, but they are not suited for Christmas forcing, but at Easter they are grand, and there are some varieties, such as Bernard Andre and Bernard Andre alba, that are unsatisfactory the first winter after importing, but are grand the second winter. Now, the greatest danger to these azaleas is neglect of watering. In July and August once a day is often not sufficient. They need water every evening and maybe again the next noon.

There was a time when I delighted to get into rubber boots and water my frames in the cool of the evening, but since I joined the union I am not allowed to work after 5:30 p. m. When a man will take as keen delight in refreshing his thirsty plants as he did in going to a circus when a lad, he is pretty near a gardener, and if he has not some serious failings he will make good.

By the first part of July these azaleas will have grown and will need more room, and while moving them put an inch of cow manure, rather fresh, on the surface of the soil in the pots. You will see a noticeable deepening of the color of the foliage and it will also be a mulch to prevent drying out. There is nothing more to do all summer except that some strong growths will start from some varieties. Where this occurs they can be pinched back. Remove the plants to a cool house before any danger of frost.

Other Stock.

The Acacia armata and metrosideros, which you shortened back after Easter, can be treated the same as azaleas and will do well plunged in frames.

Plant out bouvardia now, about fifteen inches apart. Choose a light, sandy soil that has been manured. You must not lose any roots when lifting in September, which you will do if the soil is heavy, and also plant out Stevia serrata two feet apart in a light soil. We never have too much of it.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

FOXBORO, MASS.—A. F. Belcher states that he is going out of business.

SEDALIA, MO.—C. A. Pfeiffer, who has 12,000 feet of glass, reports a good trade on cut flowers all winter and spring.

FISCHER'S PURITY FREESIA.

Last year Rudolph Fischer, Great Neck, L. I., offered under the name of Purity a new and particularly free-flowering freesia, evidently developed by long selection from the commercial Freesia refracta, so extensively grown by florists for winter bloom. Corms were procured in August, says the Rural New Yorker, and potted up about the end of the month, placing three each in 6-inch pots of rich but very light compost. The pots were kept outside, exposed to the weather until frost threatened, receiving no care further than weeding and regular watering. Sprouts appeared in November after housing under glass in an average temperature of 60 degrees, and the plants grew so vigorously that at blooming time in January they were over twenty inches high, with many branching flower scapes. The three plants in the best pot opened 218 perfect blooms, and none fell below 195 blooms to the pot. Some of the best branches had eleven fine blooms, though the average freesia does not often bear more than five or six to a branch or axis. The individual flowers were large, well-rounded and of a very good white color, with scarcely a trace of the common and objectionable yellow in the throat. The fragrance was pleasing, but much fainter than in most florists' freesias. The strong growth and extreme abundance of bloom make this a very desirable variety, though it is scarcely as pure in coloring, nor as richly fragrant, as best strains of the usual type. The originator says that Purity may be grown to cut stems two feet long. The effect of the long sprays of graceful blooms is very pleasing. There is little doubt concerning the value of this fine new freesia for greenhouse use.

WATSONIA ARDERNEI ALBA.

Speaking of Watsonia Ardernei alba an English firm says: "It is very strongly recommended to practical high-class florists for wreath and bouquet work; the choicest flower for best work; the purest white flower in cultivation; as easily grown as a gladiolus, lasts fresh for a long time after cutting; bulbs planted in the open now will blossom from early July to late September. Bulbs potted can be had in flower for a very long period; a perfect gem for florists, quite superseding the single white azalea for cut flower work; requires very little attention and is very easily flowered, yet commands the very highest market prices, and the demand for cut spikes is always greater than the supply. Another very important point is that the bulbs grow and increase well. The beautiful snow-white flower, purer than the purest, strongly appeals to large 'cut' growers, and the American, Belgian, Dutch, south of France and Channel Island growers should give this very valuable acquisition a liberal and careful trial. All our clients who bought a few bulbs to try last year have ordered a larger stock this season. All provincial florists who cut for orders as required, should undoubtedly have a supply."

CARRYING STOCK OVER.

During the last few weeks I have received several inquiries as to the best method of carrying stock over a second season, and as the time is approaching when preparations should be commenced if this method of culture is to be adopted, a few timely hints may be of some interest.

This method of culture is becoming more popular every year, and from the success attained by many of the most prominent growers during the past few seasons there is little doubt but that it will become more popular still, as we master the intricacies of this method. During the early spring I had the pleasure of visiting some of the larger establishments where this method was in vogue. Some of the stock was even in its fourth year, and the results obtained were grand. Some houses of Liberty in their fourth year were the finest of that variety I have ever seen, and these in solid benches, too. The Brides and Maids which were subjected to this method certainly produced some wonderfully handsome blooms, with stems three and one-half feet long, strong, stiff and erect, with foliage that could not be surpassed.

To derive the full benefit from this method of culture, preparations should be commenced in June or early in July, so that the plants may not have their growing season curtailed. This is frequently delayed till late in the fall or until the young stock commences to give a crop, leaving no time for the stock to get into cropping condition before the dark weather commences. This, metaphorically speaking, gives this method of culture a black eye, as it requires from three weeks to a month, according to the weather between the time of giving them a rest and starting them up again.

By gradually reducing the supply of water to the roots, they will begin to ripen both wood and foliage, and stop making new wood. While this is being done, the houses must be thoroughly ventilated both night and day, and the temperature kept as near 56 degrees at night as the season will permit. The syringe must also be kept going as frequently as before, because allowing the foliage to become a prey to red spider does not in any way help the ripening process, and has a very weakening effect on the plant, by abruptly checking root action. Yet, how often do we see a house during this stage entirely neglected in this respect!

The soil in the bench must not be allowed to become so dry as to cause the young wood to wilt or to cause the plants to shed their leaves. If the plants are on table benches and the weather is warm and bright, the ripening process may be completed in three weeks. If in solid benches it will require from a week to ten days longer, even in the brightest kind of weather. Ribes.

CONVENTION PREPARATIONS.

The accompanying illustration shows the pavilion at the fair grounds at Dayton, O., where the S. A. F. trade exhibit will be staged August 21 to 24. The building is octagonal, two stories in height, with four entrances to the lower floor and two stairways to the upper floor. Horace M. Frank, superintendent of the trade display, reports considerable space already spoken for. The charge is 25 cents per square foot for all space less than twelve feet; more than twelve and less than fifty feet, 21 cents; more than fifty and less than 100 feet, 19 cents; 100 feet or more, 18 cents; no entry to be accepted for less than $2. The rules provide:

Exhibitors showing novelties or improved devices which they wish to have examined by the judges for such special notice or award as they may be deemed worthy of, shall make an itemized entry thereof with the superintendent in advance.

The president shall appoint, not less than one month in advance of the convention, three judges who shall receive for their services such remuneration as the executive board may determine. They shall examine specially entered exhibits and make detailed report thereon promptly to the secretary on the afternoon of the first day of the convention.

For exhibits deemed worthy thereof diplomas of three grades may be given, as follows: Certificate of merit, honorable mention, highly commended.

No distinction as "first," "second," "best," or "largest," or other mention indicating comparisons with other exhibits shall be made, and diplomas of equal value may be awarded to several exhibits in the same class.

This year the trade exhibition is to remain open while the convention is in session and there is to be a large additional display planted outdoors.

AMERICAN TULIPS.

It is only a question of time when America will produce a considerable proportion of the bulbs now imported from Holland for forcing and outdoor planting. It has been fully demonstrated that good bulbs can be grown in the county of Whatcom, in the state of Washington, where the work of Georgs Gibbs and several other growers has been attended by signal success. It only remains for the commercial features of the industry to be developed and established upon a profitable basis.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of macrospeila tulips from bulbs grown by Mr. Gibbs and flowered on his grounds this season. He reports phenomenal increase in tulip bulbs planted and not moved for three years. Not only do tulips thrive under the soil and climatic conditions in Whatcom county, but hyacinths, narcissi, crocus, candidums and many other things give quick results in bulbs of a quality not excelled elsewhere. Mr. Gibbs is the pioneer bulb grower of western America. He has been at it fourteen years and has a splendid location, less than a mile from the Clearbrook railroad station. He several times has sent exhibits of Pavilion at Fair Grounds, Dayton, where S. A. F. Trade Exhibit will be Held.

American bulbs to the S. A. F. convention, and these have afterward been tested by experienced growers. To the Omaha convention in 1898 Mr. Gibbs sent a collection of his products, when he had been at the work only six years, to which the judges, E. G. Hill, Robert Craig and Wm. Scott, awarded a silver medal with the following comment:

"The exhibits include three varieties of narcissus, two of iris, one of Roman hyacinth, six of Dutch hyacinth, two of crocus, four of tulips, and Lilium candidum. The bulbs are all of very fine quality, being solid, heavy, and well ripened and in size comparing favorably with first-class Holland-grown stock. The Lilium candidum deserves special mention, as the bulbs are the largest and finest ever seen by your committee. The whole exhibit is extremely interesting and valuable as indicating the possibilities of bulb culture in some sections of our country."

Speaking of this same exhibit at the Asheville convention Mr. Scott said in part: "The amount he grows on a small area is simply enormous. I assure you, gentlemen, that you hardly would have recognized the bulbs he sent as hyacinths. I weighed one and found it to weigh two and a half times as much as an ordinary hyacinth would weigh. But the extraordinary thing was the Lilium candidum; it was really prodigious; and we could see by the matured and cut-off stems that it did have four large spikes."

Greenhouse Heating.

VACUUM SYSTEM OF HEATING.

[A synopsis of a paper by Frank A. Simonds, Grand Rapids, Mich., read before the Detroit Florists' Club, March 21, 1906.]

Heating by Hot Water.

In deciding the question of heat for greenhouse work there are four different systems that may be considered. But of these only two are in general use, steam and hot water. The latter is used either under natural or forced circulation, and gives very satisfactory results, even with gravity circulation, although necessitating, as a general thing, sinking the heater below the ground level, which, aside from the expense, has disadvantages in not being as convenient as if it were on the common level. This gravity circulation is also very slow. Another point that is often ignored in such a system, and usually to avoid first cost in installing, is in running the mains too small to secure the best results. Such is only natural, as the excessive size of the mains for such a system increases the cost at an alarming rate.

When such a system is installed properly, and is not too extensive, fairly good results are obtained when a uniform artificial heat is needed.

Should it be necessary, however, to increase or decrease the temperature on short notice this system is too slow to respond, as the large amount of water contained in the system requires considerable time to absorb, from the furnace located quite a distance away, heat sufficient to increase its temperature all through the system, while it, at the same time, is radiating heat through its long lines. The reverse is true in case the weather moderates rapidly, or the sun breaks through the clouds and showers considerable warmth through the glass. It is surprising how long this volume of water will retain its heat after all is done to check the fires or the valves closed to stop the circulation.

Again, in exceptionally cold weather, with high winds and the thermometer outside going way below what was contemplated when the system was installed, and the radiation estimated for, and an extra amount of heat is required to meet such conditions, it is found impossible to increase the temperature beyond a point below that of boiling water, which limits the maximum temperature.

Forced Circulation.

With the forced circulation of hot water, while the boiler can be placed on the ground level and the mains can be made smaller and the circulation increased beyond the limits of the gravity circulation, the same objections are open to the slow change possible in the temperature. The mains being smaller and containing a smaller volume of water to heat or cool reduces this objection to that extent. At the same time, although the water may be kept at a high velocity in the system, on account of its volume it will heat or cool very slowly, and the circulation is unable to compensate for this. The result is that it will be too slow under the varying conditions to meet the requirements.

I do not want it understood that I mean to imply that the heat in the water cannot be utilized to a better advantage with the forced circulation than without it, as I agree with the advocates of this system in this. But I do contend, and I believe all must agree with me, that it takes longer to heat a large body of water than a small one; and even with the smaller mains and less amount of water in the system the rise in temperature is slow, when required in a limited time. When not needed, even if the circulation is stopped entirely, it will remain hot much longer than desired, especially if other outside influences are giving all the heat demanded without requiring any artificial heat.

Steam Most Flexible.

While steam heat has been used with a greater or less degree of satisfaction, according to the plan under which it has been installed, it is certainly the most flexible and easily controlled heating medium yet considered. The ordinary gravity return system usually employed is, if put in properly, a very good system, although open to the same objection of the low setting necessary for the boiler, or a trap system for returning the water of condensation. There is also the trouble of the coils becoming air or water bound.

The steam heat usually carried in such a system, being considerably above the atmospheric pressure, is often more than is necessary in moderate weather. One of the principal objections is that a coil must be full of steam, or entirely shut off. If an attempt is made partially to fill the coil with steam in order to moderate the heat, that coil gradually will fill with water from the condensation remaining in it, or with water from other parts of the system backing up into it.

While the heat can be increased to a certain point above boiling water, according to the pressure carried, there is still a limit to this, as if carried beyond this pressure limit trouble is encountered in returning the water to the boiler.

It is, however, necessary to have a temperature of 212 degrees in the heating coils under this system in order to free the system from air, which must be forced out against the atmosphere. This temperature is often more than required, but cannot be reduced without entirely shutting off.

One very strong point in favor of steam heat is that in case of overheating, or when artificial heat is not needed, the system will cool down in a very short time after steam is shut off.

A Perfect System.

From these analyses of hot water and gravity steam there are good and bad points to be found in each. While water can be used through a wide range of temperature and is flexible to the ordinary demands of outside temperature, it is slow to respond to emergencies. Steam will respond quickly to urgent demands, but has no very wide range of temperature.

A perfect system of heating, one that will conform to the requirements of flexibility and demand, and that will secure practically a uniform temperature, must necessarily combine the most important points of these two systems and be free, as far as possible, from their objectionable features.

After making a study of heating systems for several years, I feel that vacuum steam heating and automatic heat regulation combine, as nearly as possible the best elements of the two systems above described. Through them are secured the economy, flexibility and quick action necessary to conform to the demands and conditions of greenhouse heating.

The Vacuum System.

As may be learned from any steam table in a text-book, water will boil or vaporize at 212 degrees at the sea level and at atmospheric pressure, and at 98 degrees in a perfect vacuum. It follows that if confined in a vacuum of any degree water will boil at a corresponding temperature.

In the ordinary vacuum heating system the steam, after condensation in an ordinary radiator or coil, is discharged as water from that coil through a vacuum valve that is supposed only to allow the water of condensation and air to escape. This discharge is into a partial vacuum, as the entire return system is under this partial vacuum which is produced by a pump at the end of a return line.

In the compound system we conduct the water of the condensation through a secondary coil or radiator that contains the same partial vacuum as the return system, and so utilize the heat of this vapor in giving out heat to this secondary coil. With this system it is not necessary to carry any steam pressure on the heating system, as, when the weather is moderate, steam at one-half pound to one pound below atmosphere can be carried and a perfect circulation secured at a correspondingly lower heat. The vacuum pump always removes the air and water, so that every square inch of radiating surface is heating surface.

The steam mains can be considerably smaller than for gravity steam or for hot water. The return pipes are very much smaller than with either steam or water systems.

It is not necessary to carry return pipes back under ground, as they can as well be carried overhead. No air valves are needed.

In case of emergency steam at any pressure up to twenty-five pounds (265 degrees) can be used and can be secured on a moment's notice, as the boiler pressure will be about that all of the time. The pressure needed in the system regulated by a reducing valve as required usually is less than one pound pressure (212 degrees). The temperature of the secondary coil is from 170 degrees to 195 degrees, according to the vacuum carried.

It is not necessary to have any coil either entirely free of steam or completely full, as the vacuum pump in keeping the coils free of air and water, the steam valve can be opened to admit only sufficient steam to heat as much or little of the coil as desired.

Automatic Regulation.

I have also an automatic heat regulation that gives much closer and more economical results than are possible by hand regulation. Also, being on guard all of the time, is always ready to take care of any conditions that may come up. Owing to the quick change secured by the steam in the radiating surfaces, an approximately uniform temperature is secured, according to the temperature the thermostat is set at.

The sun may break through the clouds fifty times a day and give sufficient heat for a few minutes that would result in overheating if the artificial heat were used at the same time. With the automatic regulation this heat is shut off before any overheating takes place and remains off as long as the outside temperature is maintained.

The thermostat keeps close watch of the thermometer, and, when the proper temperature is secured, immediately closes the steam valves on the coils. They remain closed until the thermometer shows the temperature to be dropping, when the valves are opened again. This is constant and continues while the system is in operation.

A RHODE ISLAND PLANT.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of M. J. Leach & Sons' greenhouse establishment at Pawtucket, R. I. Located upon a plot of ground over 100 acres in extent, on the outskirts of the city and on a direct line to Attleboro and Taunton, it is indeed an ideal place—all that a grower could possibly desire.

Ten modern, good-sized greenhouses of comparatively recent construction, comprising about 40,000 feet of glass, with everything else about the place in the best of condition, are under the direct care and management of M. J. and Edward Leach. The store, at 20 Broad street, is presided over by Herbert Leach.

Although a general stock is grown for their retail trade, roses and carnations constitute their specialties. As a matter of course, only the best varieties find house room here—anything of questionable behavior is never given a second chance. In the words of Mr. Leach, Sr., "time is too short and room too valuable to give to experiments."

Mr. Leach is one of those progressive growers, who, regardless of their own wide experience, acquired during a period of years at no small expense, are ever ready to add to their store of knowledge by exchanging views with their fellow-craftsmen along all lines pertaining to floriculture. X.

CANTERBURY BELLS INDOORS.

The Canterbury bell as a greenhouse plant possesses so many advantages that all of them are not likely to strike the man who only gives the matter casual thought. To begin with, very little of its life, apart from the actual flowering period, need be spent in the greenhouse; it practically grows and looks after itself; is cheap to raise from seeds; and, can be thrown away after flowering.

I will briefly summarize the treatment of this invaluable greenhouse adorner, from seed sowing to throwing the flowered-out plants on the rubbish heap, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine, in the hope that it may find a few new friends among readers who have not yet tried it under glass. Of this I feel sure, any one who gives the plant a fair trial, and meets with even a moderate amount of success, will never be without it. "Once tried, always grown," may well be taken as the motto of the Canterbury bell.

At the outset I would emphasize the need of good seed; rubbish takes up just as much room as plants from a good strain. In writing for seeds, it is well to state the purpose for which they are required, and also to insist upon having a fair proportion of cup-and-saucer varieties. There are some seedsmen who will supply varieties in separate colors, and I have had the greatest satisfaction from a strain of white cup-and-saucer.

Thin sowing in a shallow pan should be the rule. The first pricking out should be done when the plants have four leaves, i. e., two smooth, or seed leaves, and two rough ones. For this pricking out I prefer a flat, as watering is much more readily attended to than when the plants are in pots. After pricking out, the seedlings should be kept warm, and syringed for a few days, when they may be transferred to a close cold frame.

A fortnight in a cold frame will probably find them ready for another receptacle, this being indicated by the leaves touching each other. When this stage is reached two courses are open to the grower, (1) to place the plants in pots, (2) to put them out on some well-drained, sunny border. The latter will give the biggest plants, though not necessarily the most floriferous, but will involve potting up in the autumn. Pot culture means constant attention to watering during the summer, but saves autumn potting. Personally, I prefer it, because one gets stocky specimens, well established before winter approaches, and such always give the best account of themselves in the greenhouse.

After placing the plants in 4½-inch or 6-inch pots, the latter size being seldom necessary with pot-grown specimens, stand them in a semi-shady spot outdoors for a week or two, and then expose them to full sunshine. If the pots are plunged halfway in ashes, watering will be considerably lessened. In such a position the plants may stand until severe frost threatens, when they should be placed in a cold frame. If fallen, but not decayed, leaves are packed between the pots they will need no water for weeks together, especially if, as may be safely done, the frame light is kept off in all but sharp, frosty weather.

Towards the end of January the plants should be carefully examined, and all those which show signs of making fresh growth taken into the greenhouse, leaving the others to follow in successional batches. Water at the roots, and an occasional syringing will soon bring the plants into full swing, and flowers may be expected to open by the beginning of May, the supply being kept up until the end of June. Liquid manure should be given freely when the flower spikes begin to rise, and stakes are generally necessary. When in bloom the plants should be kept as cool as possible.

Canterbury bells in pots, equally with those grown in outside borders, have a second season of blooming. This follows immediately upon the fading and removal of the first flowers. However, as by this time plants in the open border should be in full bloom, pot plants are scarcely necessary. Therefore they can either be thrown away after the first flush of flower is over, or planted out where they will give a few nice flowers.

Red Spider.

I notice in your reliable weekly that the growers have trouble with the red spider. Some twenty years ago, after trying everything recommended and failing to find a sure remedy, I tried Paris green, mixing it in solution as strong as used for the potato beetle, with perfect success. Since then have had no failure with them. I find it, also, a sure cure for the little worms that make brown lacework of the rose plants, for slugs, and caterpillars that destroy the mums; or, in fact, anything that eats the foliage of plants. About two sprayings with the Paris green ten days apart will effect a cure. I use an old-fashioned watering can to apply it.

TROUBLE WITH CIRCULATION.

I have a carnation house 20x200 with a No. 16 Hitchings hot water boiler at one end and three 2-inch flows and three 2-inch returns the length of the house. The expansion tank, at the farther end of the house, is fully five feet above the top of the boiler, but the piping has never heated properly. Is there too much water for the boiler to heat, or are the flows too long for hot water? The temperature never falls below 26 degrees outdoors, and I wish to maintain 52 to 55 degrees. C. C. L.

One difficulty with the system is that the runs are too long to be successfully heated by hot water unless under high pressure or by aid of a circulating pump. Another obstacle is the location of the expansion tank. If it can be connected to the main return close to the boiler and elevated to the height of fifteen to eighteen feet it will materially help. The best plan, however, with a house of this length would be to locate the boiler to one side of the middle of the house and carry independent risers and returns from the middle to each end of the house, thus making the runs 100 feet, instead of 200 feet in length. With runs of this length and an elevated expansion tank the system should give good results provided the pipes are properly graded.

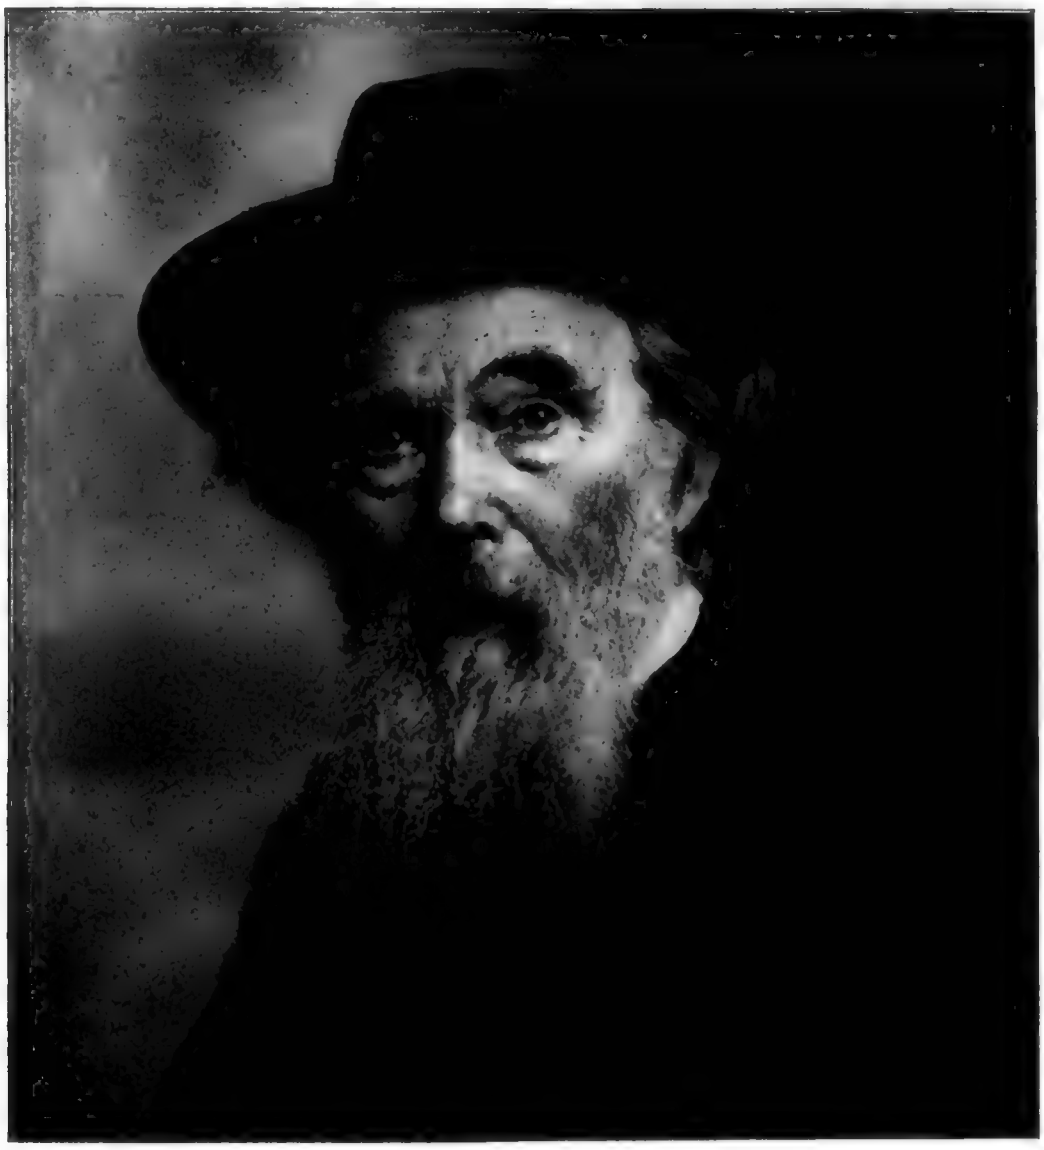
PREPARATIONS FOR PLANTING.

There is one thing that comes to a violet grower more and more forcibly as the years go by, and that is the monotony of the work; more than in growing any other stock that I can think of. Roses are continually growing, making a different shape of plant, and then there are all the time new kinds coming out, and the same can be said of carnations and, in fact, of most of the crops grown under glass. But in violets there is an everlasting sameness, which even extends to the writing of cultural notes concerning them; you feel as if you had covered the ground so often, and from so many viewpoints that it does not seem possible that you may have overlooked anything, and I suppose this might be even so if it were not for the younger men who are constantly coming up, and who are taking up violets for the first time.

We have been asked about preparations for next season and, while we have to be always looking ahead, still now is the time to bring to a focus what we may have been having in mind for some time, but not heretofore come to a definite conclusion regarding.

As with any kind of work, if you wish to make it a signal success, start early, be ahead, and keep ahead. Indeed, it applies even more to violet growing than to work with other kinds of flowers, and so if you have not already selected the house that you are to use for them, do so at once, and hasten to get it in shape to plant.



If it is a house that has been used, one of the first things to be done is to clean it out. If the benches have been used for some time, they would better be removed; in fact, if you can use them in other houses, this would be a good plan, even if you have only used them for one season, and so have your violet benches of entirely new, fresh material. Clean the paths and ground under the benches and against walls, etc., and remove any stray weed or plant growth that may be showing anywhere. See that all the piping is correct and in perfect order; the same with ventilators, etc. Clean all the sash bars and other woodwork and give a good coat of white paint.

You will also want to thoroughly fumigate the house, two or three times, once before making repairs, once after cleaning out and once or twice after getting the house ready for the plants. This is a time when you can give it very heavy sulphur fumigations, when there are no plants to harm. And you can keep it closed tightly, so that the fumes will penetrate every crack and crevice, where any sow bug or other "varmint" may be hidden.

Do not forget to coat the benches or borders, etc., with fresh slaked lime, and if the house had borders in it before, you will find it a good plan, after having removed the old soil, and before bringing in the new, to spade up the old bottoms cover evenly and quite heavily with unslaked lime; then spray just heavily enough to slake the lime, which will cook and sweeten these old bottoms. Then, after it has cooled off, you can wash it down some more with the hose before bringing in the new soil.

While attending to all of these matters do not in any way neglect your violet stock and allow it to become stunted, or soft. And watch for red spiders, aphides or any of the other things that "happen" so easily. A good start is not only desirable, but essential, if you wish to be successful and make violets pay.

JOHN B. NUGENT, SR.

We present herewith the portrait of John B. Nugent, Sr., of New York city. Mr. Nugent is probably the oldest florist in the United States, having celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday anniversary last month. He was born in Ireland, and started his apprenticeship, under John George, sixty-nine years ago, and is still actively engaged in the trade. With his son, Wm. F., he conducts an extensive florist business at Lexington avenue and Seventy-third street. Another son, John B., Jr., is the active member of the well-known wholesale and retail florist firm of Young & Nugent, of New York city.

RETAILERS' ADVERTISEMENTS.

The invitation to send specimens of retailers' advertising has brought the Review a number of clippings which are well worth the attention of every one who caters to the public. On the opposite page a number of these advertisements are reproduced. Nearly all are good. Those which combine an illustration with a price are probably the best. Attractive display is, of course, an advantage, but an idea is a very much more valuable thing than the method of display. Most of these advertisements can be used with slight change in advertising almost any retail cut flower business to which the proprietor devotes sufficient thought and energy to make the service in keeping with a first-class advertisement.

At the very successful advertising show held in Chicago in October a conspicuous feature was a large sign which read: "If your business is not worth advertising, advertise it for sale." There are many ways of advertising, but newspaper advertising is best of all.

Bath, N. Y.—The seventh annual exhibition of the Steuben County Nature Workers will be held here September 25 to 28 under the management of Henry L. Drummer. There will be the usual floricultural display.

It is related of a well-known nurseryman from Boskoop that, as he was walking up Broadway in New York the other day he was accosted delightedly by a man unmistakably a fellow Hollander. "How do you do?" welcomed the delighted one, calling the other by name. "Fine and dandy," was the reply, or words to that effect, "but who may you be?" With just a suggestion of sarcasm a card was passed out showing the stranger to be a nurseryman whose lists we have all had, also from Boskoop. And Boskoop is not such a metropolis, either.

The Great Central Market.

Each year Decoration day is assuming greater importance in the local market. It now has become one of the most important of holidays, taking much more stock than Christmas and affording several days of fine business, at a season when stock is usually quite abundant. This year another advance was made, orders being more numerous than had been expected, with prices excellent.

The turn to cold weather Saturday and Sunday checked production, and Monday found a material shortage in supplies, especially on carnations, of which thousands more were needed to fill all orders. The carnation is a popular flower for memorial purposes and most houses were compelled to cut orders severely. Prices naturally became stiff and on Monday local buyers were refused all but supplies for the day. Quality was, to say the least, nothing to brag about.

The call for Beauties took everything in sight, the short and medium lengths being especially in demand. Few good roses were to be had, but buyers were glad to take small and even mildewed stock at fair prices. Richmond and Liberty were the best of the lot and in special demand. Kaiserin brought the best prices, although Chatenay was also in good shape and sold well.

The peony was the one abundant flower, and buyers took peonies when roses and carnations were not available. Then, too, the peonies were of good quality, in fact, about the best flower in the market. There is, however, some complaint of the petals falling from the stock which has been in cold storage for a fortnight or so; the late frosts seem to have affected the keeping quality.

The Bride gladiolus sold well and outdoor valley was picked up as rapidly as boxes were opened. Fortunately it was in heavy supply. Sweet peas were not nearly so abundant as in the previous week and brought good prices, in every case in keeping with the quality. Cape jasmine was not as abundant as in recent years, but, nevertheless, if one must have capes he found little difficulty in getting them.

Green goods were equal to all requirements and common ferns cost the retailers only half as much as a year ago.

The bulk of the shipping trade was done on Monday, but Sunday was exceptionally busy, many of the wholesale houses keeping open all day. Monday night found the market well cleaned up on everything except the odds and ends, like spiræa, mignonette and snapdragons, and Tuesday morning found the local buyers hustling for supplies.

Opinions vary as to whether the turn in the weather was an advantage or disadvantage. Some of the wholesalers who were obliged to cut orders say they lost through the reduction in supplies, but others consider that the additional value put into the stock more than compensated, for prices certainly were much better than anyone expected a week ago. Also, had it not been for the cool weather the quality of everything would have been much worse; it was bad enough as it was. Taken all together, every one has reason to be satisfied with the business the past three days.

New Wholesale Firm.

Following the announcement in the Review that George Reinberg would remove to rooms 207 and 208 in the Atlas block, the space he has occupied did not remain long unengaged. The fixtures and lease from June 1 are the property of Kruchten & Johnson, who will be ready for business in a day or two.

The new firm is composed of John G. Kruchten and O. Johnson. Each has had a stand at the Flower Growers' Market, Mr. Kruchten selling the cut from the establishment of his father, Nic Kruchten, and Mr. Johnson handling the product of his firm, Johnson & Carlson, and several other growers. Mr. Johnson has now sold his interest in the greenhouses to his partner, F. E. Carlson, who will conduct them alone hereafter.

There is no better location in the wholesale district than the one Kruchten & Johnson start in. Although the rent has been almost doubled since E. C. Amling occupied it, there are several who would like to own the lease.

Grand Boulevard.

Grand boulevard is one of the finest residence streets in the west, and where Forty-seventh street intersects, with its crosstown electrics and the elevated railroad station a half block distant, is one of the best business corners on the south side.

It was close to the corner of Forty-seventh on Grand that John Muir built his new store. The display there is one hard to beat. Mr. Muir now devotes most of his time to this store and will eventually confine his business to it, but the prestige of many years on Michigan avenue makes the good will of the old location almost too valuable to abandon.

Across the street from Muir on Grand boulevard Miss Charlotte Megchelsen is making steady progress. She has worked hard for a number of years and has enlarged her store as her business grew. It still cannot be classed as one of the largest in town, but it is a credit to her and the windows are always attractive, the service good and further development is in prospect.

A Rose Nozzle.

The rose grower needs a spray with sufficient body to dislodge red spider from the underside of the foliage; a fine spray will not do the work, and an upper-cut is necessary. Most rose growers use the hose without a nozzle and get the spray by the forefinger over the opening. To supply something better than this Louis Wittbold set his inventive faculties to work, and has turned out a nozzle of which rose growers who have tried it speak highly. It is a solid piece of brass to screw on the hose. The end is cut "on the bias" instead of square. A ¼-inch hole is drilled through the brass to where it meets a similar opening entering at an angle from the slanting end. This gives an upward direction to the stream without effort on the part of the operator. The spray is made by a sleeve which slides back and forth at pressure from a finger; the farther you slide it off the finer the spray you get.

Various Notes.

M. Weiland, the Evanston veteran, says that the way for an old man to retain his grip on life is to keep right on working; to quit is to invite early physical decay. Mr. Weiland is 70 years of age and busy as ever. He is one of the early birds among the city buyers, and when business is good at Evanston, as in the last few days, makes two trips a day for the supplies not produced in his own greenhouses, returning as heavily laden as any younger man.

Charles Klehm says local peonies are several days late, due more to lack of rain than to the check of cold weather. Stems are shorter than usual and buds smaller, but Mr. Klehm says experience has shown that they will develop to full size when placed in water, the same as in seasons with more rain.

May has been a month of low prices, but E. C. Amling says it has been one of his best months; and he is looking for a good June. In May he has handled such quantities of stock that, even at low averages, the total of sales has been very satisfactory. And Monday, May 28, his sales totaled higher than for any other day in his ten years in the wholesale business.

The A. L. Randall Co. has installed a force of wire-workers on a new balcony in the supply department. A finely printed price list on wire work has been issued.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is receiving large lots of Mississippi cape jasmines this week, the season having been more favorable in Mississippi than in Texas.

Theodore C. Hanschke on May 25 opened a store at 848 North California avenue, a neighborhood which has for some time been without a flower store.

Mike Fink is what is called a hustler and is doing a constantly increasing business on Cottage Grove avenue, just south of Twenty-second street.

C. L. Washburn thinks he is especially favored when it comes to trouble. A tooth bothered him and the dentist sent him to a specialist. The specialist said an "operation" would be necessary to get rid of the offending molar, performed it, and left Mr. Washburn with a hole in his jaw and a hole in his pocketbook, which, if not equally painful, was equally large.

Mrs. Eaton has opened her new store at 86 Jackson boulevard. It is handsomely fitted up and a good business will likely be done. Charles Balluff has charge of the work.

Orchids are again quite abundant, and McKellar reports them selling well, for wedding work. He anticipates a big run on them during June.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. reports a heavier run of advance orders than in any previous year. All their output is built to order. Over eighty greenhouse boilers already have been built this season.

Carl Ickes, of A. Dietsch Co., says that the note in the REVIEW last week as to their having booked orders for 166 greenhouses should have made clear that this number of houses had been already turned out and all but sixteen shipped; as a matter of fact about 100 more houses are on the books for future delivery.

George Reinberg tomorrow will move to his new store on the south side of the Atlas block.

The Central Floral Co. expected to move today to the new store at 68 State street but the workmen are slow in remodeling and it is not yet ready.

The Market.

Trade, consequent on the approach of Memorial day, showed a gradual bracing all through last week and during the early part of the present week things were booming. On May 26 very few flowers had to be carried over and on May 28 practically everything was eagerly snapped up. An enormous amount of material was placed on the market, but the demand was phenomenal and there was no trouble in disposing of it unless in the case of some lots of pickled carnations, which were cleared at lower rates. Year after year growers will persist in hoarding up flowers in anticipation of greatly enhanced prices and each year they are taught a lesson which, however, is forgotten ere the advent of another Memorial day.

Roses have stiffened quite a little from last week's low figures. Some choice Beauties made $20 to $30, other grades varying from $5 to $15. Some very fine Liberty and Richmond appeared and brought Beauty rates. We saw a few nice Brunners and Jacqs from one grower, which sold well. Few hybrids are seen nowadays. Brides and Maids were not of especially good quality. Some choice stock made $12, from that down to $3 being prevailing rates. There were some really splendid Chatenay at $2 per dozen, and Killarney and Wellesley of good quality sold readily. As many growers are now busy replanting roses, a much lessened supply will be forthcoming for some time. Some very nice Kaiserin and Carnot on long stems made good prices, the latter, of course, having the preference.

Carnations, while plentiful, did not suffice to meet demands. While some pickled stock sold down to $2 and whites were, as usual, sluggish, good ordinary grades readily made $3 to $4 and fancies $5 to $6, the scarlets, crimsons and deep pinks being in most request. There was only a moderate supply of Easter lilies at $10 to $12.50. Callas made $8 to $10. Very few tulips were seen and no narcissi except some poeticus. Gladioli of the Gandavensis type were very fine and sold at $1.50 to $2 per dozen, G. Colvillei, The Bride and Blushing Bride going at half these rates. White, lavender and red stocks were abundant, as was Spiræa Japonica. Big lots of candytuft, feverfew and lilac were mostly sold at 50 cents per bunch. Sweet peas sold very well at $1 to $1.50 per hundred. Blue cornflowers at $1 per hundred were also in demand. Spanish iris in limited quantities, antirrhinums, marguerites, outdoor lily of the valley and other flowers were noted.

Lilac is always heavily used for grave decoration and in spite of the heat of the last week kept in fairly good condition. Viburnum plicatum, Spiræa Van Houttei, loniceras, Deutzia gracilis and other flowering shrubs were in good condition and proved extremely useful. The demand for bedding out plants of all kinds was unsually heavy, cannas, geraniums, petunias, myosotis and pansies being special favorites. Spiræa Japonica, pelargoniums, hydrangeas and other blooming plants in pots also met with a good sale. Taken all in all, the Memorial day trade at this writing seems to have once more broken all records.

Various Notes.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold its next field day on Tuesday, June 19, at the estates of Larz Anderson and Mrs. W. C. Brandegee in Brookline, where Duncan Finlayson and David Weir are the presiding geniuses. It is proposed to meet at 3 p. m. and after visiting the two establishments adjournment will be made to Horticultural hall, when the regular June meeting will take place, for which special attractions are being prepared.

W. H. Elliott will this season discard Beauties at his Madbury, N. H., establishment and grow Wellesley, Richmond and Killarney. He will give the first named a trial as a summer bloomer.

The sympathy of a large circle of friends goes out to M. H. Norton in the bereavement caused by the death of his wife on May 26. Mrs. Norton had been a great sufferer from cancer for several years. She was known and esteemed by many in the trade.

H. M. Robinson & Co. have had the heaviest Memorial day trade in their history. They anticipate excellent business during the month of June.

Boston's parkways are wonderfully attractive at present. The extensive system under Superintendent Pettigrew's care shows a constant improvement, and no visitor interested in trees or shrubs should fail to visit it if in the Hub at this season.

Hans R. Werdmuller, of Medford, has gone to Long Island, where he will act as superintendent on an extensive private estate. The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will miss him.

Many complaints are again coming to hand of damage to carnations in the fields by cut worms. The grower who discovers and makes public a simple and effectual cure for these pests will be deemed a public benefactor.

The rhododendron show scheduled for June 2 at Horticultural hall promises to be about a week too early.

Recent rains have benefited peonies wonderfully, and the exhibition on June 15 and 16 promises to be a grand one. Unless very hot weather intervenes to spoil plans the dates selected should prove all right.

In the way of choice flowers for Memorial day, Cattleya Mossiæ seemed to be considerably used. Small quantities of other cattleyas were noted.

A few plants for Memorial day trade, which florists might profitably grow in larger numbers, are Calceolaria rugosa, Golden Gem and Prince of Orange; Coreopsis grandiflora, Darwin tulips, especially the scarlet, rose and pink colors, also such sorts as Gesneriana, Bouton d'Or, Golden Crown and the ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The wholesale market remains weak. There is plenty of stock, much more than could be disposed of last week. The retailers nearly all complain of slow trade. A few good funeral orders helped out, although transient trade seems to have almost disappeared. Cheap sales among the down-town florists have become quite a business, with carnations and roses at 15 cents per dozen. In about two weeks the season will be over, with June weddings and school commencements, and all we will have to depend upon will be funeral work, which seems also slow during the summer months.

The stock seen at the commission houses is of very good quality. Roses are keeping up in quality fairly well, with prices too low for the stock offered. Carnations, too, are holding up good in supply and quality. Last week these were only bringing $1.50 per hundred for fancy stock in Enchantress, Craig and Fisher.

Decoration day hardly makes much difference in price, as only the cheapest outdoor stock sells on that day. Sweet peas are not overplentiful, owing to the very dry season.

Various Notes.

A. Dietsch, of the A. Dietsch Co., Chicago, spent a day in the city last week, in company with W. C. Smith and A. C. Burrows, who showed him the city by gas light.

Harry Ellison is now with the Ellison Floral Co., at Grand and Olive streets. He recently was married.

Frank M. Ellis will return June 15 from Panama, where he has been since February 1.

A. Jablonsky has offered his old place at Wellston for sale. It consists of six houses. Mr. Jablonsky's new place at Central is in fine shape, under the management of Henry Braun.

W. C. Burrows, of the late firm of Pilcher & Burrows, has opened offices in the Lincoln Trust building, being now in the real estate brokerage business.

Henry Emmons, of Belleville, was a caller last week. He says his outdoor stock is in fine shape, as his fine well supplied him with plenty of water during the dry spell.

Frank Weber, of H. J. Weber & Sons, nurserymen, expects a big delegation from here to attend the convention of the American Association of Nurserymen at Dallas, Tex., June 13 to 15.

Henry Ostertag reports a busy week with funeral work and has a few good wedding orders ahead for June.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, was in the city last week. He hopes for a big attendance at the June meeting of the Florists' Club, and any one wanting to know how to grow sweet peas, also smilax, should not fail to hear the discussions of Messrs. Winter and Aul at this meeting.

The west end florists report an exceptionally busy week with funeral work. Among them are Geo. Waldbart, Mrs. Ayers, F. C. Weber, Miss Newman and others.

A. G. Greiner, the cactus grower, received a car-load of new cactus plants from Mexico the past week. Mr. Greiner has worked up a fine shipping trade.

The league bowling season ends next week. The florists' team is not well up this season. They were beaten last week in their match with the Kerns. Kuehn was in good form and rolled high. He was followed by Ellison, Schreifer, Lohrenz and Beneke.

CLEVELAND.

The hot weather last week has brought in an abundance of everything, and prices have gone down several notches and a large surplus has found its way to the rubbish pile, even the fakers refusing to hustle while it was so hot.

All the plantsmen seem to be right on the dot with more stock than ever, and almost without exception the best line of stuff the writer has seen for a long time.

In spite of the hot weather Isaac Kennedy is sending the Cleveland Cut Flower Co. some of the finest white roses from his sport of Bride that the market can show. His Maids are also fine.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Last week saw an immense quantity of flowers marketed at low prices. Bright, warm weather increased production and transient business. The middle of the week was unsatisfactory from a wholesaler's standpoint, but the end of the week was much better. The first of the school commencements created more demand for flowers especially suited to youth, such as sweet peas, daisies, etc., Queen Alexandra having a lively run.

Peonies are coming into town in larger numbers. Some are very fine; some are affected by the drouth prevalent during their development. Outdoor sweet peas are an important factor. The growers who took care of their plants will reap a harvest, the quality of their product putting the fag end of the indoor grown, and of the unwatered stock, to the blush. Wild smilax and southern asparagus are over.

The earlier date of going to press precludes anything but a forecast of this week. The horse show, Memorial day and the first of the June weddings promise a week of floral activity that will tax the resources. There will be but little advance in prices except on high grade stock of a few varieties.

The See-Saw System.

It is a recognized fact that the wonderful development in the cut flower business is largely due to the wholesale commission florists. They now market a large majority of the flowers grown commercially. With a continuance of their present high standards of business sagacity and integrity their strength will increase.

The business of the wholesalers has not been obtained without overcoming many difficulties, with the growers, with the buyers, and with the express companies. Some are settled permanently, some only temporarily. All require foresight, tact, and vigilance to be properly met. One of the most curious of these difficulties is what may be termed the see-saw system of shipping. It is the playing of one commission man against another.

Originally the see-saw system consisted in sending flowers to a wholesaler a few times, then discontinuing without notice when some one else offered more, returning again to the first wholesaler when his bid went one better. Gradually this method was abandoned by desirable growers. It was looked down upon as not the right thing. In its place was substituted the division of shipment by which the cut was divided in given proportions between two or more wholesalers. This system is practiced by some large and some medium places. It has advantages and disadvantages. From it has been evolved the present see-saw system. This see-saw system consists in dividing the product in certain proportions and increasing or decreasing these proportions according to the returns. The see-saw system of shipping requires weekly returns to be carefully compared and used in next week's distribution.

The devilish ingenuity of the see-saw shipping system from a wholesaler's standpoint is apparent at a glance. Suppose he is receiving this week a certain lot of stock for which he has orders next week, but, his returns being lower than his competitor's, his supply is cut down and his customers are disappointed, while his competitor may or may not have a market for his increased receipts.

I am opposed to the see-saw shipping system. It is ingenious, but it is not based on sound business principles. Business relations wherein one individual represents another necessitate mutual confidence. Mutual confidence is an impossibility under the see-saw system of shipping. Reliability is as essential in a wholesaler as it is in a retailer, and reliability is impossible in a wholesaler who is not in close touch with his growers.

I have dwelt at length on this point because it is of vital interest. The evil is small as yet, but it must be checked.

SUBJECT TO MARKET CHANGE.

Mention The Review when you write.

There are two remedies. The first lies with the growers who can keep in touch with the wholesalers, telling them in a general way what to expect from time to time. The second remedy lies with the wholesalers, who can keep in touch the better to secure or distribute stock.

Various Notes.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are as busy now as in the height of the season. Mr. Berkowitz is pleased with Memorial day business. He commented especially on the export orders for cape flowers and other lines of goods.

J. A. Smith has been selected as manager of the Henry F. Michell Co. He assumed his duties last Saturday. Mr. Smith, who was born in London, England, only twenty-six years ago, served an apprenticeship of nearly nine years with the Henry A. Dreer Co., about seven years at Riverton and the balance of the time at 714 Chestnut street. He has been three and a half years with the Henry F. Michell Co. While this thorough grounding made promotion possible, it is due largely to a clear head and genial manner. To say the right thing quickly and pleasantly under trying circumstances is a rare gift.

Samuel S. Pennock suggests that an arrangement of space by which Richmond would be planted early and Liberty left in late would be apt to yield the best results.

Eugene Bernheimer is handling fine outdoor sweet peas in all colors.

Much local interest will be taken in the account of the Alban Harvey & Sons' place at Brandywine Summit in the carnation department of this week's REVIEW. The figures of returns are especially valuable. The stock is distributed by the Leo Niessen Co. and W. E. McKissick.

It is announced that the partnership of Johnson & Stokes, of twenty-five years' standing, expires by limitation July 1. Mr. Johnson and Mr. Stokes will continue independently, one at 217 and the other at 219 Market street.

Rice & Co. report the largest Memorial day business in their history. They note increased demand for cycas, laurel, magnolia and metal wreaths and a falling off in demand for cape flowers and immortelles. Their universal cemetery vase proved extremely popular.

Walter P. Stokes plans building three new greenhouses at Moorestown this season. PHIL.

WASHINGTON.

Flowers for the sweet girl graduate have been the features of the business of the past week. In addition to the large number of bouquets ordered for commencements, there have been several good decorations executed for these exercises.

The hot weather has glutted the market with flowers and any attempt to quote prices would be futile. Decoration day will surely make a clean-up, and with the June weddings there are prospects of better business. In addition to the heavy local cut of roses and carnations, large quantities of fine blooms are being shipped here from Pennsylvania at prices which give grounds for the belief that some of the shippers up there have not yet been investigated by the interstate commerce commission.

A heavy shower on Sunday morning broke the drouth and growers now breathe more freely. All of last week was strenuous for those who had carnation or aster plants out of reach of the hose. The writer, for one, now has a practical knowledge of what the pioneer florists of the country must have endured when overtaken by similar dry spells.

It is doubtful if there is another city in the country where Decoration day is more generally observed than here. The people, both rich and poor, find time and means to lay offerings on the graves of loved ones on that day.

Theodore Dietrich, of Congress Heights, is sending in very fine peonies. The dry weather hit Mr. Dietrich hard and he was kept busy, but brought everything through in good shape.

George H. Cooke, in addition to commencement business, is busy with an extensive job of landscape work near Dupont circle.

The rose garden at the U. S. Treasury was a noteworthy exception to the general scorching visited on the public grounds. The treasury gardener is an early riser. SCOTTY.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The cut flower market remains in the same condition as a week ago, too weak to sit up, and content to be alive. The growers can surely find little to complain of after such a splendid average season as the one just closed and should be content with the memory of the past and the knowledge that these are but a repetition of the dull days of every year that precede Decoration day.

June weddings and sailings and a possible short crop will lift the market from its stagnancy. The commencements, too, are already with us. Some retailers had as many as 100 bouquets for one popular school last week. All seem to get a share of this yearly golden shower, and the sweet girl graduates grow in numbers all the time.

Many roses came in badly mildewed last week; $1.50 would buy a whole box of them. The general quality is below the average.

Carnations still continue excellent in quality and good stock clears out well and at very good summer prices. The stock with many is superb.

Gladioli are coming rapidly. Lilac is done. Peonies are everywhere. The south has certainly made a peaceful invasion and some of the stock is good and brings very satisfactory prices. Everybody expects a good June, and the trade deserves it, after as discouraging a May as the records of a generation can show.

Various Notes.

Bowling interest, in behalf of a New York club representation at Dayton, is still asleep. This may be a case of the awakening of a giant when the time comes to stir, but Flatbush at present is the only semblance of a florists' bowling club in this vicinity. A few of the old New York club meet on Thursday evenings and Capt. Lang has kept up his usual record and enthusiasm, but the regulars of the past two or three years never are heard from. Some of them will come to life at the outing July 2. The tickets for this yearly reunion are selling fast.

the leading retailers. The exodus to Europe is remarkable and never were so many flowers delivered to the voyagers.

McConnell had a big wedding, the Van Buren-Mohlman, on Saturday, at the Church of the Heavenly Rest. Palms, plants and white flowers were used. At the house, torches of American Beauty, two floors turned into bowers of pink roses, hanging baskets of the same on the side walls, electric lights among the palms. The bride's bouquet was a valley shower and orange blossoms. Seven bridesmaids carried yellow centaureas. The boutonnieres were gardenias.

The nursery at New Rochelle is now in its glory, especially the Japan maples and retinosporas. A large contract for beautifying the grounds of the Flower Memorial library, at Watertown, N. Y., is now being executed.

David Clarke's Sons have many weddings booked for June, and have been exceedingly busy with commencements. As usual, their big store is very handsomely and appropriately decorated for Memorial day.

In one of the bon ton windows on Fifth avenue, artificial shower bouquets of valley and gardenias are on exhibition, so perfectly formed as to deceive any but the critic's eye. The same store is cementing the windows for fountain and aquatic display.

At Siebrecht & Son's white palace the exhibit is orchids from their own conservatories. The immense output of these greenhouses is now entirely used in the firm's retail business.

A great deal of interest is being taken by the florists in the discussion as to granting a franchise to a second telephone company, for the florists would be among the first who would be obliged to install the telephones of the new system. The present company has 260,000 instruments and is adding them at the rate of about 50,000 a year. Through their long distance connections one can reach over the present system some 35,000 cities and towns in the United States and Canada. The new company promises in three years 33,500 telephones and no long distance connection. The florists think its promise of a lower rate hardly would be worth considering, as the first service could not be dispensed with and the new would simply be an additional expense. The comptroller has expressed a doubt as to the advisability of granting a franchise to another telephone company in New York for the above reasons, and the florists seem to think that two telephones would be a great nuisance, as well as an added expense.

A much needed rain on Sunday, after a week of drouth and extreme heat, has given much needed encouragement to the patrons of the seedsmen and the nurserymen in this vicinity. The downpour was a flood while it lasted, but the benefit was vast, especially to the market gardeners and to the outdoor plantings of the florists.

Decoration day promises the usual large business to all located near the great cemeteries around New York, and great preparations have been made for it. In the city no special increase is anticipated. The Merritt leucothoe wreath should be in demand. It is especially adapted for this occasion and its enduring quality commends it. Down at Coney, Decoration day will be celebrated by the laying of the corner stone of the Friede Globe tower, the largest building in the world, 700 feet high. Far up will be a handsome palm garden, a unique tribute to horticulture. All over the island, at its popular resorts, the effect in carpet bedding, Japanese gardens and abundant bay and palm decorations have never been equaled.

Mr. and Mrs. Leikens left for Newport Saturday. Mr. Wenham has just returned from Paris with novelties for this house and purchased a fine lot of palms while in Europe. He says New York flower stores are far in advance of those in Paris and London. D. Smith, formerly with A. L. Young & Co., has charge of Leiken's Belmont Hotel branch. J. Austin Shaw.

RHUBARB.

Rhubarb plants intended for forcing next winter should receive attention now, and throughout the summer, to have them in the best possible condition when forcing time arrives. If the plants are exceptionally strong it will do no harm to pull a few of the stalks now, but unless the plants have strength enough and to spare they would better be allowed to mature all the growth they can make and the stalks be allowed to die down naturally in fall, so as to throw all the possible strength into the roots.

Another important matter is to remove all flowering shoots as soon as they appear. Plants that are strongly and freely grown are not so apt to run to seed as those that have been kept in a more or less starved condition, and where plants are taken proper care of and divided every two or three years, they seldom show any tendency to throw flower shoots. But it often happens that the division of the crowns has been delayed too long, in consequence of which the flower bud has been formed in the crown the previous season and will develop as soon as fresh growth starts, in spite of the best cultivation. The only remedy is to remove the flower stalk as soon as it can be distinguished. When a crown once throws a flower shoot, that ends its existence as a crown, but buds are produced from the side which grow to form other crowns, so the cultivator's efforts must be directed toward the best possible development of these if he would secure suitable plants for his winter supply.

The strength of the plants may be greatly increased by thorough and frequent cultivation and liberal application of manure water. The rhubarb plant is one of the heaviest feeders we know of, so it is hard to overdo this matter. If wash from the barnyard can be procured, it forms the best possible material. Any of the commercial fertilizers that can be applied in liquid form will do, but as these soon eat into money, it does not pay to be too liberal with them, or profits are soon sacrificed; still, every application will tell on the plants and it will pay to spend a little to get them into a good, strong, healthy condition. The application of clear water is often found of much benefit during dry spells, when the plants are apt to suffer in this respect, and in dry situations, where the soil is light and sandy, a mulching of stable litter or some such material is of great advantage to the plants. Such situations, however, are not at all suitable for the cultivation of rhubarb, a deep, rich soil being what is required for its most satisfactory growth.

THE IDEAL EMPLOYER.

[An essay by M. B. Faxon, of Columbus, O., submitted in the S. A. F. prize contest.]

It takes but a moment to read the three words at the head of this article, and yet what a field of thought they give rise to in the minds of not only the employers but also the employees who may chance to read these few lines, which the writer sincerely trusts will, at least, bring the importance of this subject clearly to their earnest attention.

As was written by Charles Dickens years ago, "Those who take an interest in this tale, will be glad to learn that the Brothers Cheeryble live; that their liberality, their singleness of heart, and their noble nature, are no creations of the author's brain." And it is so that the writer feels with regard to the ideal employer—that he is much more numerous in our business life of today than he is given credit for being.

Perhaps in no better way can I make clear to you my own ideal of an ideal employer than by mentioning those characteristics that seem to me to be essential to the great responsibilities and cares that fall to his lot in these strenuous times.

Character.

That an employer should be a man of high character there can be no question. I mean a good-living man—one whom his employees can look up to and respect. Any man whose heart is in the right place will so conduct his business affairs that not only his employees, but his customers as well, will appreciate his fair dealings, and both equally contribute to his ultimate success. How often we hear it said of the head of some large house who has passed away, "He was a good-living man!" This means everything, as without this feeling of respect and absolute trust for the one who is the head of the firm, there is lacking on the start that indescribable something which should permeate the entire establishment and stamp it with the honest purpose which there is no mistaking.

Treatment of Employees.

The wise head of the firm will always treat his employees exactly as he, if in their position, would like and expect to be treated himself. He should be firm and at the same time very just, as the men are as good judges of right and wrong as he; but from their very position they cannot always assert their opinions strongly, as he does his. This is a matter that every employer should never lose sight of. He should always render due consideration to the opinions and expressed wishes of his help.

Another very important thing is the stand of absolute fairness the employer should take between customer and clerk, in any of those differences which can not fail to arise in every store where much business is done. Some employers consider it a matter of policy to always side with the customer. Nothing could be worse, as that not only casts an unjust reflection on the clerk, but also lowers the customer's opinion of the establishment. Be absolutely fair in this matter as in all others, for by so doing you will retain the respect of both the parties to the dispute, whichever way you may decide it.

Employees' Wages.

The firm that gets the best help and is able to keep them the longest is the one that pays its men liberal wages. In the long run, a good man or woman can command all they are worth, and do so; therefore, how much better business policy to give them what you feel in your heart they are worth to you, than to wait until the same wage that they perhaps asked for, is forced from you in order to keep them from going to a competitor! There is no prop to any business house like a satisfied worker as regards the wages paid.

Buying the Stock.

Every business should be divided into as many distinct departments as the special nature of each demands, and the head of each department, being held responsible for the welfare of that part of the business, should not only make the selling price of each article, but should most certainly buy all goods sold in his department. No man can sell to the best advantage the goods another has bought. In other words, I am a firm believer in letting each responsible employee work out his own salvation, so to speak. If at any time a department is found to be running behind, it is then time enough to make a change of management, but there is one thing sure—you cannot get the best work that is in a man from him unless you give him a free hand.

Now, do not misunderstand me. A good man wants to be guided in the policy of the business; he wants to gratify every wish of his employer; he wants in everything he does to please the man who pays him; but unless, as head of the department, he feels absolutely free to work out the details of his department, no lasting success can ever come to the business. The head of the house should set the policy of the business, and see that it is carried out, but the details should be left to the department heads.

The Stock Itself.

Every employer should set a liberal policy as regards allowing each department manager to keep his stock always in proper variety and quantity. There is nothing so disheartening to an interested employee than to receive an order which can not at once be filled in full, and to be held at least morally responsible for it when the real blame belonged to the policy of the house in running the stock too close. You cannot sell what you do not own; and in these days customers expect their orders filled at once.

Selling the Stock.

In the matter of selling-prices, there is nothing that creates such a solid and lasting business reputation for any firm than having what some men make a special effort to advertise—"one price." All goods should be quoted by everyone in the establishment at the same price, and the greatest care and pains should be taken that those customers who are entitled to the wholesale price always get it; and the same care with the retail purchasers; as mistakes in price once rendered on a bill are never satisfactorily explained.

Treatment of Customers.

As every business success is dependent upon the good will of its customers, so every employer will, of course, treat his customers just as nicely as he knows how; but he should make them no special price or other concessions that he does not allow and encourage his heads of departments to do. Nothing is worse for the morals of any store than for the customers to once contract the feeling that they can do better with the proprietor than with anyone else. Of course there are certain things in every business that naturally fall to the department of the owner, but these should be more in the line of setting the policy of the house, or deciding some very important matter.

Store Hours.

Perhaps the store hours in a mercantile business create as much harmony or discord among employees as any other one thing. The employer who expects his help to work all hours of the day and night in the busy seasons should be the first to propose early closing in the dull months of the summer. Men and women need rest in order to do good work, and, while the interested ones will take the keenest pleasure in the long hours when they are necessary, they will be the most disappointed and discouraged if night work and long hours are continued when there is nothing to warrant it. Be wise and reasonable in this regard.

Vacations.

Be liberal about the matter of vacations; you obtain from faithful employees all their best energies, and the best you can do in return is to give them a reasonable time each year for rest and recreation. This matter has nothing to do with wages paid. Every employee is entitled to his two weeks each year, and should have, the day he goes on his vacation, his two weeks' salary in advance paid to him. Be the Ideal Employer to your men, who use all their best efforts to make your business an Ideal One.

PROPAGATING DAHLIAS.

I have heard several complaints this season about the tubers of last year's new varieties failing to break, and I have examined some tubers which have been well developed and quite plump, with new roots starting but no symptoms of starting into growth, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser. It has been suggested that the fault is caused by the plants being propagated from tops instead of cuttings taken off close to the tubers. It is rather a difficult matter to explain. I do not think that there is any grower who would wilfully send plants out to trade growers that he knew would be of no use for stock the following season, and I may get into trouble if I say it is the fault of the propagators. I have had some considerable experience among dahlias, and have found that under the most ordinary circumstances some tubers may fail to start in the spring, especially those that are struck late in the season. Yet on the other hand, I have taken the tops off new varieties received in May, rooted them, and they have made useful plants for stock the following season.

It may be unnecessary to say that when taking the tops for cuttings they must be cut off quite close below a pair of leaves; but this is one point, and the most important is that the lateral shoots which show at the base of the leaves must not be cut off. I have made a practice of putting these cuttings in without removing the basal leaves, putting them into the soil only just deep enough to keep them firm, or sometimes it may have been necessary to use a stick to hold the cuttings in position.

When it was first suggested to me to propagate from the tops of young plants, I certainly thought that if they did root they would be of no use as stock plants for the next season; yet experience proved that they were. It may not be in all instances that failures are caused from the lateral shoots at the base having been removed when making cuttings, but this is one sure cause, and with young and inexperienced propagators this may be done without any idea of the mischief they are doing.

I would recommend anyone interested to try a few tops this season, for the purpose of proving my remarks. Put some cuttings in without removing the leaves and side laterals at the base, and others in the orthodox way of taking the lower leaves off, taking the side shoots with them. I think the latest I have taken tops has been the end of May or early in June.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw W. S., Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annua meeting will be held at Toledo, O., June 26-28, 1906

THERE was stiff frost in western Nebraska May 27.

THE wholesale lists of turnip seed are bringing prompt returns.

C. H. PUTNAM has bought an interest in the seed business of J. J. Bell, Deposit, N. Y.

RAIN has fallen in the Michigan pea and bean district and crops for seed are looking well.

THE Chas. H. Lilly Co., Seattle, reports having sold its entire acreage of Washington-grown cabbage seed for delivery next fall.

CONSIDERABLE surpluses of sweet corn are reported in the hands of several jobbers and the retail seedsmen are by no means cleaned out.

IN spite of reports of shortage, the spinach quotations are not advanced; the jobbers seem to be stocked for average requirements and anticipate no extraordinary call.

CURRENT lists on turnip are $2 per 100 pounds below the early lists on White Globe Strap-Leaved, White Egg, Pomeranian White Globe, and several of the yellow-fleshed varieties.

ROCHESTER joins in the report that both sweet and field corns have proved in oversupply, and oats have been a hard proposition. Onion has sold well and cabbage also cleaned up nicely.

THE department of agriculture has issued a bulletin entitled "The Home Vegetable Garden." It gives forty pages of cultural directions and elaborate planting tables. The congressional seedsmen should send a copy with each order for seeds they fill at the public expense.

JOHNSON & STOKES, Philadelphia, announce that the partnership, which has been in existence for twenty-five years, will expire by limitation on July 1. The business will be continued as two separate concerns, one by Herbert W. Johnson and associates, at 217 Market street, under the name of the Johnson Seed Co.; the other by Walter P. Stokes at 219 Market street.

THE Chicago general mail order houses seem well pleased with the season's business in seeds and are reported to be planning larger things for 1907.

THE senate has passed the agricultural appropriation bill with several amendments, but without disturbing the provision for free seeds. The bill is now in conference.

THE department of agriculture on May 19 issued circular No. 18, publishing the names of five seedsmen whose red clover was found to contain from eighteen to fifty-two per cent of yellow trefoil.

THE L. F. Jones Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., has an order from the Roach Canning Co., of Hart, for 75,000 tomato plants. The trade at Grand Rapids still remembers the year when Jones had a corner on the tomato plants of the neighborhood. It is estimated that the annual production of some fifteen to twenty growers there now totals 3,000,000 plants.

SEED TRADE PROGRAM.

Secretary C. E. Kendel has mailed to members the program for the twenty-fourth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association at Toledo, June 26 to 28. The Boody house, rates $3 to $5 per day, American plan, has been designated as headquarters, and the sessions will be held in the hotel parlors. C. S. Burge is chairman of the committee on entertainment and a cordial reception is assured. Toledo is easily accessible and all conditions favor a good attendance.

The essays announced are as follows: "The Seed Catalogue from the Customer's Standpoint," by Floyd Brallier; "Varietal Description of Garden Vegetables," by Prof. W. W. Tracy; "Early History of the Seed Business," by Burnet Landreth; "Desirable Imported Natural Grasses," by Henry Nungesser; "Seedsmen and Civic Improvement," by J. Horace McFarland; "Co-operative Publicity through the Press Department, National Council of Horticulture," by James Burdette; "Modern Retail Conditions," by Finley Acker.

CONDEMN FREE SEED GRAFT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 28.—Members of the house of representatives who accepted the statements of Representative Gaines of Tennessee and others that the farmers of the country demand free seeds from the government are likely to learn to their cost that intelligent farmers repudiate their generosity and are inclined to look the gift horse in the mouth.

Practically every agricultural periodical which has appeared since the house decided for free seeds has denounced its action. The executive committee of the National Agricultural Press League has adopted resolutions condemning the seed distribution practice and maintaining that it is not approved by self-respecting farmers. The committee, which met in St. Louis May 12, directed that its resolutions be sent to every senator and representative and to all agricultural papers.

The resolutions declare "there is no more to be said in favor of government seed distribution, as at present conducted, than there would be in favor of a regular distribution to farmers or any other class of citizens of free beef, free sugar, or free flour."

The senate committee on agriculture is being deluged with letters and telegrams from the agricultural press, seed trade and farmers' organizations urging it to try to stop the waste of public money. Action on the appropriation bill can not long be delayed as congress is due to adjourn by June 15.

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

The German, French and English seed reports are many and varied as to the bad trade and low prices of some sorts of vegetable seeds, and now the season's business comes to be reviewed, it is found trade on many lines is somewhat worse than usual, and some lines of vegetables are tumbling in price. Throughout the whole season business in peas and beans has been very slow, especially in Germany, and at the present time much money is being lost by holders of stocks. Many complaints also are being heard as to the low germination of all sorts of seeds. This is no doubt partly due to the exceptionally unfavorable weather during ripening and harvesting time of 1905, also due in a measure to the generally early sowing and bad conditions during the present spring, causing much otherwise good seed to perish.

Crop reports from practically all over Europe for the coming season speak of them as only looking moderately well and personally I think by harvest time this may be somewhat further discounted. It is now well confirmed that English crops may be considered bad.

Sugar beet, both in France and in Germany, is reported as having been badly frosted.

One of the surprises of the season is the exceptionally high prices of seedsmen's samples of tulips. Buyers are being asked 40 shillings for Scarlet Due, 48 shillings for Murillo, 26 shillings for Yellow Prince and so on. Certainly last autumn the seed shops cleared out their bulbs exceptionally well, and coupled with this and the somewhat pessimistic crop reports from Holland, many buyers are giving their full orders at above figures.

I have received a letter from Naples reporting heavy losses in crops in con-

CANNERS' COSTS.

The canneries in New Jersey, probably for the first time in the history of the packing industry, offer $10 a ton as the contract price for growing tomatoes. The price gradually has worked up through the last dozen years from $6 to $8, the latter price being first offered last season. The new price of $10 is satisfactory enough to secure acreage to meet the demands of the canners. Prices for spinach and beets have also been advanced $2 a ton, making $20 and $24 respectively. As the contracts usually stipulate that beets for this purpose are not to exceed one and one-half inches in diameter, the restriction greatly limits the chances of profit in the crop.

RUDOLPH FISCHER, Great Neck, L. I., N. Y.

Read What Some Well Satisfied Patrons Have to Say of it.

Mr. Rudolph Fischer, Great Neck, L. I.
Dear Sir:—Mr. H. F. Du Pont wants me to acknowledge receipt of the Fischer Grand Freesia "Purity" he bought of you.
I would state that we are very much pleased. I find it to be of a very superior quality; it is fully equal to the claims you make for it. It grows 24 inches high, good sized and stiff stems, bearing large clusters of magnificent white and very large sized flowers, which are delightfully fragrant—an important consideration. Growers will find that this variety grows much stronger, with finer flowers and in greater abundance than the regular type. It is without doubt the best freesia that has been introduced. No florist, or any one interested in flowers, can afford to be without this variety.
Yours very truly,
WM. KUPKE,
Gardener to H. F. Du Pont, Esq., Winterthur, Del.

January 11.
MR. R. FISCHER.
Dear Sir:—Yours received, and in answer thereto, we would say that we cannot speak too highly of your Freesia "Purity," as it has proved very highly with us, and should be a great seller on account of the purity of color, and being superior over any other freesia we have ever grown. Wishing you success with same, we remain, Yours respectfully,
A. LAUB & SON,

MR. R. FISCHER.
Dear Sir:—It gives us much pleasure to say that your Freesia "Purity" is simply superb. I cut the first 15 spikes on the 3rd of this month, and up to date have cut from 100 bulbs 227 first-size spikes, which I wholesaled at 2c each, and 38 smaller ones, which I sold at 1c each, and there are more to cut yet. There was one rogue in the lot, and the contrast was as crab apples to Baldwins. It will surely supplant the old variety when the supply is equal to the world's demand.
I congratulate you on your good fortune in giving to the world such a splendid plant.
Yours truly,
E. SEXTON.

125 E. 57th Street, New York, Feb. 9.
MR. R. FISCHER.
I received your postal asking my opinion of your new Freesia "Purity" and I am pleased to say that although I was so late in sending my order, and that I was only able to get smallest bulbs, I never saw such large-sized freesias in my life before. They were immensely productive, and their perfume was most delicious. In "Purity" you have put all lovers of the flower under lasting obligation. I hope you will meet with great success in the sale of it.
Very truly yours,
MRS. A. S. APGAR.

The Rural New Yorker, May 11, '06.
MR. R. FISCHER.
Dear Sir:—I have bloomed Freesia "Purity" during the past winter, and find it the strongest growing and most abundant bloomer of any variety I have ever tried. Three plants in one 6-in. pot produced 218 blooms; others were not far behind, the lowest being 195 blooms on three plants. I was able to get stems 16 inches long, and I can well believe that they may be grown two feet in length. The flowers are of large size, good clear white in color, and have sufficient fragrance for florists' use. Yours very truly,
DR. VAN FLEET,
Associate Editor.

Norwalk, Conn., Feb. 13, '06.
MR. R. FISCHER,
Dear Sir:—Your postal card of January 18 received, and I am sorry that it has been so long unanswered. The freesias which were bought of you have produced remarkable flowers, although you will remember I did not have the larger bulbs, as you had sold all of them when I wrote you. Grown side by side with the ordinary freesia, it is superior in every respect, and is simply not to be compared with it. I am well pleased with the small investment that I made in it, and shall undoubtedly have more if you have bulbs to offer next summer. Yours truly,
R. G. HANFORD.

Hightstown, N. J., March 10, '06.
MR. R. FISCHER.
Dear Sir:—The small bulbs (third size) you kindly sent me for trial last summer, did finely, although they had very little care. They produced as high as 10 florets on a single stem. Edward Reid, the florist commission merchant from Philadelphia, saw them at my place in bloom and said they were the largest blooms he ever saw, more than double the size of what came to Philadelphia. Wishing you success, I am, Yours truly,
CHAS. BLACK.

Floral Home, Santa Clara, Cal.
February 23, 1906.
MR. R. FISCHER.
Dear Sir:—Have waited for some time before sending opinion of your Freesia "Purity" as I wanted to see it in all stages of growth, and side by side with the common kind. Take it all in all, it is the best freesia I have seen on the coast. By doing proper elimination of bulbs showing yellow, I think in a few years it would be all white. Some of the flower spikes were perfectly free from color as it is. And I only hope your carnation, "Abundance," will please me as well.
Florally yours,
C. C. WOODWARD.

Ionia, Mich, Feb. 14, '06.
MR. R. FISCHER.
Dear Sir:—Regarding "Purity" I must say it was of the purest white of any freesia I have ever grown. Also very prolific, and long wiry stems with ten blooms on each. It was a sight to behold when in full bloom.
Yours respectfully,
M. WETTERLING.

Merrill, Wis., Jan. 31, '06.
MR. R. FISCHER.
Dear Sir:—Now that your freesia is in bloom, I must say that it is fine. It grew beyond my expectations, and beyond all support that I gave it. They grew 27 inches high.
Yours very truly,
N. GREIVELDING.

Camden, Me., Jan. 13, '06.
MR. R. FISCHER.
Dear Sir:—I consider your new Freesia "Purity" as a very good cut flower. I had a bench where I could grow nothing else, but your freesia grew to perfection. I shall want more next year. Yours truly,
GEO. GLAENTZEL.

Pemberton, N. J., Jan. 22, '06.
MR. R. FISCHER.
We find that your new Freesia "Purity" produces larger stems, larger flowers, and of better quality with the same treatment that we gave the older variety.
Yours truly,

MR. R. FISCHER.
Dear Sir: — Regarding Freesia "Purity" would say I am much pleased with it. It has fully sustained all your claims for it with me. I had first flower December 23, and have now finished cutting. The main stem had eight to eleven florets. I cut a number of bunches, all having eleven florets to the main stem. I am, Very truly yours, Fredonia, N. Y., Feb. 8, '06.

MR. R. FISCHER.
Dear Sir:—The freesia bulbs gave me very good flowers, much larger than I ever had before. Yours respectfully,
LARDER.

Christiana, Pa., Feb. 2, '06.
MR. R. FISCHER.
I believe your Freesia "Purity" to be a good thing. Very truly,
MAURICE J. BRINTON.

West Manchester, Mass., Feb. 14, '06.
MR. R. FISCHER.
Dear Sir:—Your Freesia "Purity" is the finest I have ever grown. We cut from our first batch December 29, with stems over two feet long. It thoroughly deserves its name.
Yours truly,
W. SWAN.

Philadelphia, March 6, '06.
MR. RUDOLPH FISCHER.
Dear Sir:—We are duly in receipt of your favor, also box containing flowers of freesia. They are indeed, a very fine sample, much finer than can be produced from stock as ordinarily sent out. When you are in a position to offer a stock of the same, would be pleased to hear from you regarding same.
Yours very truly,
HENRY A. DREER, Inc.

Lancaster, Pa., Feb. 27, '06.
MR. R. FISCHER.
Dear Sir:—The freesias sent produce remarkably fine flowers and are certainly an acquisition that you may be proud of.
Respectfully yours,
ALBERT M. HERR.

New York, Feb. 17, '06.
MR. RUDOLPH FISCHER.
Dear Sir:—The writer had the pleasure of seeing some especially fine blooms of your Freesia "Purity" as shown at the New York Florists' Club last Monday. Have you any stock for sale? If so, at what price? To what wholesaler, if any, are you shipping your cut blooms? Yours very truly,
WM. WALLACE BURNHAM,
Bloomingdale Bros.

Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y.,
MR. R FISCHER.
Dear Sir:—Yours of the 8th inst., asking in reference to your new Freesia "Purity" of which you sent us a few bulbs, is at hand. We potted up the bulbs that you sent us, on receipt, and they are now in bloom, and from what we can see of it, it is an extra fine freesia. Of course the small quantity gives us hardly enough to make a very good test, but it looks all right. When you have bulbs of this to offer again, we will be glad to have your lowest price on same.
Yours very truly,
F. R. PIERSON COMPANY.

REVIEW ADVS. MOVE STOCK QUICK.

Don't neglect your advertisement in the REVIEW. If it contains items on which you are sold out, or nearly sold out, write to have these cut out of the advertisement. Don't put it off. Do it in time to catch the next issue. It does you harm, it does everybody harm, to disappoint a man who orders from your advertisement.

A great many advertisements in the REVIEW are ordered to run "until I tell you to stop." Don't fail to tell us to stop the minute the advertisement has done its work. If an advertisement has been ordered for three insertions, and two issues have done the work, don't fail to head off the third one. It will save letter-writing as well as disappointment.

The REVIEW goes only to live people; not a dead name on our subscription list. Seasonable stock at right prices sells quickly if advertised in the REVIEW. With the advertisers' help, we will carry no dead offers.

CLEMATIS HENRYI.

A superb clematis is C. lanuginosa, variety Henryi, one of the oldest and most generally successful of the hybrid group, says W. Van Fleet, in the Rural New Yorker. C. lanuginosa is a native of China, and with the exception of C. cærulea, of Nippon, Japan, has given rise to more really desirable varieties than any other of the very numerous clematis species. Imported plants are often infected with the troublesome clematis disease, but home-grown plants, propagated by cuttings instead of grafting on succulent-rooted species, are usually healthy and reliable. They should be planted, where possible, in cool, moist loam, well-enriched and deeply worked. Care should be taken to spread the roots out well, and work the soil between them. Jamming the brittle roots into a bunch results in almost certain failure. After-care consists chiefly in training the young growth on a suitable trellis and applying every fall a liberal mulch of stable manure that may be allowed to remain all winter. Cut out all dead or obviously weak wood when growth has well started in spring, and you will be rewarded with fine blooms if your plants are strong and healthy. Henryi is very desirable to plant as a relief to the gorgeous but somewhat funereal deep purple C. Jackmani.

PLEASE discontinue my advertisement of ferns; I have sold my entire stock. The REVIEW does the work, all right.—MRS. A. DUEBENDORFER, Elwood, Ind.

DRY.

We have had an unusually dry spring in the growing centers. The rain-fall at Chicago is 3.87 inches less than normal and at the same time the temperature has been 473 degrees in excess of the average daily mean since January 1. Practically the same condition is prevalent throughout the west and in many eastern localities.

The result has been a material curtailment of spring business. From many places come reports that the demand for plants for bedding has been much less than it would otherwise have been, and many growers, who had prepared much spring stock, find themselves with a surplus because of the unfavorable weather. There is still a possibility of finding a market for this stock if we have a season of cool, moist weather in the first part of June.

Outdoor flowering stock is suffering from drouth. Many growers of outdoor tulips found much of their stock unmarketable this season because stems were too short, due to lack of moisture. The peony growers are losers. The drouth has blasted a large percentage of the buds, shortened the stems, made buds smaller than usual and delayed the blooming period. The same holds true of many other outdoor crops and the majority of the spring bloom was below the ordinary quality this season.

A year ago the carnation growers were suffering because of inundation. May of 1905 saw a heavier rain-fall than in any recent year and a large number of carnation plants were drowned out in the fields. It is alleged that the principal reason for light crops of carnations during the season now closing, was that the plants became too soft in the wet May of 1905. This year the exact opposite is the prevailing condition among carnation growers, for many have had no rain since they moved their stock to the field. Little growth has been made and generally it may be said the plants have had a poor start. There yet is time for a good growth under favorable conditions, but the prospects are not as good as at this date in a normal season. It looks as though good field-grown plants will sell well.

PACIFIC COAST.

Retailers Need No Aid.

There are many interests, outside of those in the city itself, which would like to see the flower business reestablished in San Francisco with as little delay as possible. A well known western florist, who is thoroughly acquainted with the trade in San Francisco, was recently appealed to for definite information as to what can be done to assist those who were burned out. Here is what he says on the subject:

"About the proposition of assisting members of the trade who were burned out in San Francisco, I may say I spent a greater portion of last Sunday in the city and saw probably about a dozen of the largest dealers, all of whom were among the losers by the fire. I find that the opinions of the retailers in general were about the same everywhere. Regarding assistance, I did not meet any one but who seemed to feel that they would have no difficulty in getting into business again as soon as conditions in the town shape themselves so that there would be a demand for stores. I think all of them are fairly well endowed with means and can tide over the difficulty very nicely.

"So much for the propositions of the big stores. I refer to such firms as Sievers, Podesta, Pelicano, Shibely, Mann, Jaeger, Jaccard, Rossi, Rosaia, Serveau, Stappenbach, Frank and a couple of others.

"With the small dealers, all of them are Italians and I did not see but a couple. The majority of them have gone to nearby towns and to the country and will stay away from San Francisco for an indefinite time.

"The principal idea seems to be with the retailers, that no flower stores are needed in San Francisco at present; there is no demand for flowers, practically speaking. There are about half a dozen small stores in operation and they are doing but little business. Of course, things will change in a reasonable time, and a demand will exist again for flowers.

"The small dealers of whom I spoke have left the town almost entirely, as near as I can find out, and I do not see how they could be assisted in a practical manner at this time. It is questionable whether many of them would think of going into this business again for some time at least, even if they were assisted financially to do so. Everything in the flower line is in such a chaotic state that it is hard to get much definite information as to future intentions."

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There has been little change in the situation here. There have been no new stores started in town, although I have heard several rumors during the past few days to the effect that we may expect several. There is, of course, an entire absence of functions of any sort, except funerals, and of this work there has been a fair trade in the few stores we have. Considerable shipping I find being done, both by the retail and wholesale dealers, and I am inclined to think this branch of the business will be up to that of former seasons. With the growers everything is about the same as it has been since the fire. Except for the interior shipping, they are making no use of their stock. About one-half of the glass devoted to roses and carnations has been abandoned, and for such stock as is being cut the retailers can make any price they see fit. The best quality of fancy carnations cost the stores about 10 cents per dozen, and all other varieties about half that price. Roses range a shade higher, but quotations on them are not to be relied on, as they have no standard of value at this time. Sweet peas are in unlimited quantity and of good quality, and can be bought at from 25 cents to 50 cents per dozen bunches. Other outside stock is at the same par and only a small quantity is being used.

I made a trip through the violet district a few days ago and find there is little activity among the growers, who at this time should be very busy cultivating their young stock. One patch containing probably eight acres was turned into a cow corral and entirely ruined for flowers. But I saw many patches, principally small ones, that are being kept in good trim, showing that some of the growers anticipate business later in the season. I think it is safe to say that if the total acreage is kept up that is still in good order at this time there will not be over fifty per cent of the usual output.

Over in Oakland, to which Mecca a majority of the growers look for business at present, things have brightened somewhat and there is a fair trade in funeral flowers. The fact that all the factories for wire designs were burned out in San Francisco made quite a scarcity of wire frames for several weeks, but already the Eureka Wire Works has started a branch factory in Oakland and the dealers can get anything needed.

Throughout Alameda and Contra Costa counties the conditions with the wholesalers are about the same as on the San Francisco side, and quantities of stock are daily thrown out. There is quite a falling off at this time in the supply of roses and carnations, the first spring crop being well over. Much country shipping is done from the Oakland side and a good business is always enjoyed for Decoration day.

Various Notes.

Superintendent McLaren, of Golden Gate park, has sent a communication to the supervisors in which he estimates that $50,000 will be required to repair the damage done to the various buildings in the park by the recent earthquake.

The Cox Seed Co. is handling late vegetable seeds from consignments they are receiving daily.

Many landscape gardeners are getting their supplies of grass and clover seeds from Los Angeles. Every seed warehouse except one was burned out here.

H. M. Sanborn, of Oakland, has completed the repairs to his building, made necessary by the collapsing of a brick structure next door, a great portion of which fell on the roof of his store.

F. Ludemann reports that outside trade in the nursery line is well up to that of former years at this time. Mr. Ludemann has a large place at Millbrae, also devoted to the growing of a general line of plants.

Almost all the car lines are again in operation and conditions are shaping themselves so that the debris can be cleaned away from the burned district.

W. D. Royce, of the Stockton glass works, has informed me that he has taken back orders for greenhouse glass to the amount of 2,000 boxes. One firm countermanded an order for 700 boxes, even after the houses were almost ready to glaze, and will do nothing further about building this season. The glass companies, however, are glad to save having to make deliveries, as glass has gone up in price at least fifteen per cent and there is an unprecedented demand for the small sizes. G.

PACIFIC COAST TOURS

A new booklet just issued under this title should be in the hands of every person who expects to make a trip west of the Rockies this year.

It outlines all the routes to the Coast, shows maps of each, contains a large map of the country from the Great Lakes to the Coast and has a great deal of valuable information about side trips, interesting sights, etc.

The booklet is finely printed and handsomely illustrated. Its use will save you the trouble of getting and combining the separate booklets of the many different roads reaching the Pacific.

Your request on a postal, mentioning the name of this paper, will bring a copy by return mail.

CALIFORNIA ROSES.

One of the interesting sights in the Pomona valley is the development work now being done by the California Rose Co. on its rose farm at the foot of White avenue at Pomona. Here may be seen literally acres of roses, the cuttings planted a few weeks ago covering the entire twelve-acre tract in rows about three feet apart. The plants are about six inches in height and here and there over the tract many of them are in bloom. The president of the company, C. E. Howland, personally is superintending the work of irrigating. The system of irrigation is specially adapted to rose culture and is quite an extensive one. The company has put in a pumping plant on the land, using water from a well already located there, but the supply is insufficient and will be increased later by sinking the well deeper. Additional water is now being purchased from the Matthews ranch.

The work of irrigating and tending the plants at this time of year requires about twenty-five men. From December until April, during the shipping season, probably fifty to seventy-five people will be kept busy. At this season the young plants are being pushed as rapidly as care, good soil, the available amount of sunshine and constant irrigating will accomplish it. There is something new in seeing a man plowing acres of roses, just as though they were potatoes.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June 13-15, 1906.

THE invoice value of the trees and shrubs passing through the New York customs house last week was $10,594.

THE Jewell Nursery Co., Lake City, Minn., has increased its authorized capital stock from $100,000 to $500,000.

THE May frost at Chicago, which made ice at Peterson's Nursery, did no injury to the peony fields, either at Peterson's, Klehm's Nursery or A. Kennicott's.

SOME nurserymen note an increased call for a smaller, lighter grade of fruit trees, but others aver that the demand instead should be stated as for cheaper stock.

THE Chicago Commercial Club wants the nurserymen's convention for Chicago in 1907. It offers a free meeting place, assures low railroad fares and hotel accommodations at moderate prices.

FLORIDA nurserymen are making a practice of setting out pecan orchards under a guarantee if located where they can exercise supervision over them during the period covered by the guarantee.

IT is reported from Painesville, O., that the expectations of the Storrs & Harrison Co. were more than realized in the spring business. The shipments totaled 231 cars, seventy-nine cars more than last year.

THE season thus far has been unusually dry in many growing centers and the young stock, especially cuttings, is suffering. Unless rain comes soon the summer's growth of older stock is likely to to be much lighter than normal.

CONFERENCE ON HARDINESS.

Under date of May 23, Leonard Barron, secretary of the Horticultural Society of New York, 1269 Broadway, New York City, sends out the following circular letter:

The Horticultural Society of New York proposes to hold in the early fall of 1907 an international conference on hardiness and acclimatization, if there is sufficient interest evinced to warrant organizing such a gathering.

I am instructed by the president and council to ascertain whether your institution would be inclined to support such a conference, and whether you would be able to take part in the deliberations.

I need hardly remind you that the questions proposed are of supreme importance to horticulturists, and there is very little, if any, codified matter available in this country. The proceedings of the conference would form the substance of a volume of memoirs of this society, to be a companion to the proceedings of the international conference on plant breeding held in 1902.

Any assistance that you can give me at this time, suggesting lines for discussion, together with names of those whom you think might be interested, and whom I could approach, would be greatly appreciated.

CONVENTION PLANS.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Texas Nurserymen's Association was held at Dallas May 23 to make arrangements for the meeting June 13, 14 and 15 of the National Nurserymen's Association. The following were present: E. W. Kirkpatrick, of McKinney, president of the state association; Edward W. Knox, of San Antonio, president of the State Horticultural Society; John S. Kerr, of Sherman, chairman of the program committee of the national association; C. C. Mayhew, of Sherman, chairman of the finance committee of the state association; Stanley H. Watson, of Houston, chairman of the entertainment committee; F. W. Mally, of Garrison, chairman of the committee on exhibits.

On the afternoon of June 13 a trolley ride will be given to Fort Worth, where some entertainment will be provided by the board of trade of that city. On the return an entertainment will be given at Lake Erie, where light refreshments will be served. On the afternoon of the following day the visitors will be given a trolley ride over the city, and in the evening will partake of a fruit banquet. The following night a lawn party will be given at Lake Cliff.

Since the meeting will be the first of its kind held in the south, it is desired especially to impress the visitors with the size and resources of Texas, and to this end an excursion will be run at the conclusion of the convention to Houston, San Antonio and Galveston.

ST. LOUIS HEADQUARTERS.

Emery Albertson, president of the American Association of Nurserymen, writes:

"Am glad to report that arrangements have been made with the Terminal hotel in the Union Station in St. Louis for our headquarters Monday, June 11, for members of our association going through St. Louis. F. A. Weber, of St. Louis, will be on hand there early Monday morning to welcome and entertain members who may arrive during the forenoon and to give them any assistance or instruction necessary, and for those who may wish to visit Shaw's Gardens during the day arrangements will be made for their admission. So that the day will be made as pleasant as possible in St. Louis."

AN ENGLISH VIEW.

The Horticultural Advertiser clips the following paragraph in relation to the prosperity in the nursery trade in America:

Very few nurserymen have any reason to complain about the demand for nursery stock or the prices stock commands. A larger market for ornamental stock prevails than ever before, and in some lines of fruits the supply is altogether inadequate. Nurserymen have been able to sell at money-making prices. Business has been thriving in the south, and is in a healthy condition in the north. Taking everything into consideration, the outlook is pleasanter for the nurserymen than it has been for some years.

Our British friends remark that "We insert the above as it seems to be the general feeling of the nursery trade in the United States. We hear so much in England of the dangers of Protection, and we know so much about the low prices brought about by competition, that it is perhaps as well to study the result of these matters in a protected country. We see by other papers that money is so plentiful in the States that everyone is beautifying his surroundings, and ornamental shrubs, plants, etc., are so much in demand that the cultivation of commercial things, like fruit trees, is being given up in favor of these luxuries, which can be sold at more profit."

In considering our tariff system the students "on the other side" should not pause until they have had a glimpse of some of our beautiful trusts, which are in many cases the outcome of our customs laws.

HERE is a dollar for a year of the REVIEW. I have access to it through the courtesy of our firm, but as there are so many valuable articles in it I wish to keep it on file for future reference.—D. W. BABCOCK, foreman for J. G. Harrison & Sons, Berlin, Md.

Current Comment.

We are in the midst of the bedding business, and it keeps all hands on the jump. The florists near the cemeteries have a still more laborious business, filling and carting out the iron vases. To handle 500 of these heavy articles is no light job, with the exception of the charge we make for watering and caring for them. The labor connected with them is much heavier than the profits, but it's all in the business and we can't have it all cake.

We have had several days of torrid heat, and now it again has turned to rain and is much cooler. Memorial day is too often accompanied by very cold, wet weather.

No local peonies are out, but there are plenty of lilacs, late tulips and fine valley grown outdoors, but covered with shaded sash. Carnations are of fine quality and too numerous; Boston Market, Lawson in variety, Enchantress and Flamingo about as fine as they were in February.

If weather is with us, Memorial day is largely observed by all classes. If you had 500 or 1,000 lilies that you could not get in for Easter, and put them in a cool house, how handy they come now, instead of flowering three weeks after Easter, when there was no demand. W. S.

Muncie, Ind.—H. Warfel, of the Riverside Greenhouse, reports a splendid trade in spring stock.

Altoona, Pa.—Karl Kuny reports business very good and getting better every year. He will erect another house 24x100 for carnations.

Spartanburg, S. C.—The Y. M. C. A. is to have a chrysanthemum show in the autumn, for which many people are growing plants. At the planting season C. A. Moss grasped the opportunity for good advertising by handing to the newspapers directions for preparing the ground, planting and culture.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Excepting for an occasional spurt, business has been rather dull of late. From all aspects there will be considerably less than the usual amount of decorating this June.

Despite the fact that Decoration day cuts but little figure in our city, as far as cut flower sales are concerned, the holding back of stock was again in evidence Saturday. Up to Friday noon large shipments arrived and everything was plentiful; sweet peas, snapdragon and some grades of roses were even a glut, but Sunday the commission houses were cleaned out, as no shipments arrived Saturday.

A drop in the temperature from 80 degrees in the shade Saturday morning to about 40 degrees in the evening also caused a falling off in shipments and stock was at a premium the first part of this week.

Brides and Maids are bringing from $4 to $8 per hundred, Kaiserins as high as $7 per hundred. Very few Beauties are in evidence. Carnations sell well at from $2 to $3 per hundred. Outdoor valley is gone.

Various Notes.

If growers of snapdragon would tie up their blooms, thereby keeping the stems straight, they could get a much better price for the stock.

Visitors: Harry Bunyard and C. B. Knickman, New York. H. S.

Bristol, Conn.—Mix Bros. have sold out, Arthur Mix to take employment as a machinist and David Mix to become gardener for L. E. Pike.

ROCHESTER.

Business is practically over and all are rejoicing over a record season. While the first part of March did not yield the returns expected, later things brightened up and as a whole were satisfactory. Bedding plants are selling at good prices, and the outlook for the morning after Decoration day is that the houses and frames will be tenantless. Geraniums and Golden Verschaffeltii coleus are the scarcest items now. Cannas and asters have been in good demand.

Our commission man, George B. Hart, reports first-class trade in all lines. He has had his office renovated, help increased, and is in a position to handle more goods than ever. At present he is doing a rushing business. He has a fine novelty in a single scarlet geranium, which he intends to put on the market this autumn. The trusses are immense, well formed, long-stemmed, the plant sturdy and stocky, furnished with luxuriant foliage.

Bulbous stock yielded good returns this spring and import orders are reported heavy. Prices on bulbs, as far as we can judge, will rule nearly the same as last year for fall delivery, although reports on Harrisii are not too sunny.

We notice that the Gardeners' Magazine, London, has reprinted in full Vick's aster booklet. Recognized from such a source as an authority on the question, Vick's people are girding up their loins for further progress.

Highland park is in its glory. Here can be seen the most comprehensive collection of lilacs in this country and they are simply loaded with the most fragrant flowers. John Dunbar, the superintendent, takes a deep interest in the grounds. Each plant is his favorite—"he calleth them by name"—and the park seems to respond to his parental care. An immense bed of pansies attracts most attention, now that the bulbs are on the wane. F. S. P.

PAXTON, ILL.

Addems, Morgan & Co. have just completed the cement work on a new and thoroughly up-to-date rose house. They have four houses here, a total of about 14,000 feet of glass. E. B. Morgan is the manager here and a fine new residence adjoining the greenhouses has just been erected for his use. The firm has had a very prosperous year, both here and at Loda, where they have a range of five houses, each 160 feet long, built on the Dietsch short-roof plan. These houses have solid concrete benches, which have given excellent satisfaction the past season. C. J. Addems is in charge of the Loda plant.

Some People have taken our advice as published in these columns recently and are buying My Maryland for trial. We reiterate here—if it succeeds with you as it does with us, it will prove the best white carnation you ever grew. Despite the variety's apparent failure in several places, we strongly advise all growers to give it a trial. We have been frank about its faults as developed in other places. We doubt if these will develop in many places.

Jessica we believe, will succeed generally and will prove to be the best red and white variegated ever disseminated. Few varieties show as strong constitution as this one does and it is a wonderful producer. Extra fine stock of both varieties ready now. R. C., $2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Pot plants, $3.00 per 100 extra.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The least said of the business last week, the better. There was scarcely any. It has been hot and dry. We have not had a good, soaking rain since May 8, and outdoor stock is beginning to suffer. Bedding is also looking very poorly.

Outdoor stock has come in with a rush. There are peonies by the thousands. All other kinds of stock are coming in heavily and the market is glutted. Prices were down to rock bottom last week.

Decoration day always calls for a great quantity of flowers at fairly good prices. Many advance orders early assured a good business and it is expected that the heavy cut of flowers will run itself out this week.

Various Notes.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Society will be held June 9. The secretary is sending notice to all florists of Cincinnati and vicinity to come to this meeting, as action will be taken on attending the S. A. F. meeting at Dayton. It is hoped that we will be able to go on a special train and with a party of from 100 to 150.

Chas. E. Critchell is busily engaged in organizing a bowling team to compete at the national convention. All florists who are interested should communicate with him at once, as practice games will be started shortly.

Fred Gear is a baseball fan, and every day that he can get away from business finds him at the game, rooting for the reds. Ask him why he always carries a book with him. C. J. Ohmer.

KANSAS CITY.

The stock of the Shaeffer Floral Co. was purchased at forced sale by the Alpha Floral Co. and the People's Floral Co. jointly. The sale was held in the former store of the Shaeffer Co. at 805 Walnut street, United States Marshal Durham disposing of the property. The purchasers of the stock held a big sale at 805 Walnut street May 23, where everything in the place was sold at about 25 cents on the dollar. The stock was bought in such a way as to make this possible.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The approach of Decoration day has caused a general awakening in every part of the business. There has been much improvement in the cut flower trade. Roses are still plentiful, but good carnations do not seem so much in evidence; in fact, hardly enough to go around. The poorer grades of all kinds of stock are abundant. Faded sweet peas are worst of all. The wholesale houses are all crowded with stock of everything except what they want. Smilax, which was so scarce for a while, now seems to be more plentiful. At this writing it looks as if there would scarcely be enough stock for Decoration day.

Plantsmen are now reaping their harvest. The continued hot weather is making people anxious to get planting done and they are pushing the plantsmen to the limit and by Wednesday those who have not pretty well cleaned up will probably not get as good prices for their stock as are now prevailing.

Hoo-Hoo.

INDIANAPOLIS.

After another week of drouth we have the pleasure of recording a fine rain that gave the ground a much needed soaking and will relieve many florists of the job of watering their field stock.

Bedding out has gone on extensively during the last week and now the final rush begins. As usual, the late ones, with their orders for vase filling, are coming to the front and expect instant attention and the best of plants.

We are sorry to report the death of Mrs. Teilmann, of Marion, which occurred May 24. Mrs. Teilmann had been an invalid for quite a long while, but her death came as a great shock to her friends here. Mr. Teilmann has the sincere sympathy of all in the great loss he has sustained.

Business keeps up to the mark and promises to make a record. Peonies can be had in quantity, roses and carnations are not so plentiful, while outside flowers, owing to the dry season, were scarce for Decoration day. S.

CHRISTMAS ROSES.

Helleborus niger and its varieties are the most popular and useful because of their value during the winter, but there are many other hellebores, especially the Lenten roses, that are of great interest in the open border in early spring.

Given a sufficiency of strong roots Christmas roses may be gently forced, so as to give their flowers in quantity through the months of December and January, but with a limited number of plants it is better to establish them in a bed and cover them with an ordinary garden frame, so as to secure a full crop of flowers annually in time for Christmas. With reasonable treatment the same plants will last for twenty years on the same site. I would, however, caution those who wish to lift the plants from such a bed, so as to flower them earlier in heat and then return them, that this practice means the ruin of the plants, as the roots cannot stand forcing and give satisfactory results afterwards.—Gardeners' Magazine.

NEW ORLEANS.

We are now passing through a spell of dry weather, which is very bad for the florists at this time of the year. Our city water system is not yet completed and many growers are suffering for want of water. The chrysanthemum and aster planting is not entirely done and good showers are needed badly. Business is dull.

The Gardeners' Mutual Protective Association, composed of the leading truck farmers surrounding New Orleans, will give its annual picnic and May festival Sunday. There will be a number of prizes distributed among the successful contestants, consisting of wheelbarrows, spades, pitchforks, etc.

We had the pleasure last week of visiting the place of C. W. Wichers, situated at Gretna, opposite New Orleans. It is well stocked with a general assortment of plants, but his attention is devoted mostly to the culture of ferns, asparagus and aquatic plants. His varieties of aquatics are quite numerous. He also has another place, eighteen miles from the city, on the Bayou Barataria, where he raises nursery stock. Mr. Wichers was for many years a resident of the southern part of Florida, being then devoted to the culture of oranges. His place here is shaded by huge palms. Phoenix Canariensis and cabbage palmetto, of the sabal type, fifteen feet high and only three years from seeds speak well in favor of our soil and climate. The greater part of his stock is shipped to other states.

DES MOINES, IA.

C. L. Allen, Floral Park, N. Y., has been visiting in this city for several days with Chas. N. Page.

The Iowa Floral Co. is expecting to move to its new location, 613 to 615 Locust street, June 1.

Lozier had an opening at his new cut flower store May 18, and the store was filled with both patrons and visitors during the day.

Wm. Trillow, superintendent of the Iowa Seed Co. greenhouses, has returned from an extended trip among eastern florists.

HOWARD, WIS.—J. H. Burkel is building a 200-foot greenhouse for vegetable forcing.

NEWARK, N. J.—The Begerow Floral Co. has been incorporated with $25,000 authorized capital stock. The incorporators are August Begerow, Otto Ramsperger and Thos. W. Dobbins, Jr. August C. Begerow is named as the agent in charge.

SOUTH BEND, IND., April 4, 1904.

"Superior to any Hot Water Boiler we have ever used. You certainly have placed the right name to your Boilers; no effort at all to keep the temperature at desired points when zero weather comes. Night after night the past severe winter weather gave your Boiler a good test. We are more than pleased with the Superior Boiler." Yours truly, Treanor & Rettic.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

The planting season is over and attention now is given to mums and carnations and a general cleaning up in the houses.

Commencement exercises are beginning to take the center of the stage, and many advance orders are being taken for these functions. The demand for flowers is keeping well up to the supply and there is little waste material. Reports from various points denote a larger business this year than ever before, and indications point to a rapidly increasing business the coming year. Advance orders for fall landscape work are coming in and the future seems bright for that part of the trade.

Mr. Taylor, of McKinney, visited Sherman last week. He reports good business.

Fred Hannah, of H. O. Hannah & Son, of Sherman, visited Dallas to attend the annual meeting of the Texas Elks.

Mr. Majors, formerly with W. V. Munson, of Denison, has taken charge of the Texas Nursery Co. greenhouses.

Mr. Goree, of Whitewright, has the distinction of being the daisy specialist of this section and has been filling orders running into the thousands.

The Test of Workmanship

No greenhouse is a perfect house unless all the materials which enter into its construction are properly made by experienced workmen. All of our material is made by men who know that perfect material is needed to make a perfect house and you can't grow the best stock without a perfect house. Well made material costs less than the inferior kind—less repairing to be done.

Our workmanship will stand the most critical test—how about making a comparison with the houses you have? Write for catalogue.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

BRIDAL BOUQUETS.

Sweet peas, valley or swainsona make airy, dainty bride's shower bouquets. All of these are best arranged in the shower form. The top of the shower should be put together in a round effect; that is, a round top effect, not a ball shape. The outline should be broken by sprays projecting above the body of the bouquet.

Short-stemmed flowers cannot be used without artificial mounting. Even long-stemmed valley needs wiring for extra length. A difficulty presents itself when an attempt is made to attach soft stems like these to a wire sufficiently strong to hold the flowers erect. To avoid this and also to reduce the amount of wire in the stems of the bouquet, wire several sprays of valley or peas with one wire wrapping and a little foliage around the flower stem between it and the wire. Wire close to the lower end of the stems and put all the little bunches together for the bouquet.

Don't try to make a perfectly round bunch. Let the general effect be round, but the outline broken every once in a while.

Fine foliage, like asparagus or adiantum, makes a good border or edge for the top bunch. Even a wide fringe of adiantums will not make the bouquet too heavy.

Fasten the bunches together with a tight clasp of wire. Cover the wire stems with green and wrap the whole stem of the bouquet with white ribbon or silk to protect the hands, after turning in all stray ends of wire or prickly foliage.

Cut the sash ribbon according to the height of the bride, allowing a little for a possible change of position in holding. The shower bouquet, by the way, should be carried in the hand and not on the arm.

Lily of the valley and sweet peas can be used prettily together in a shower bouquet, the two mixed in the top and one kind in the shower, preferably the valley, as being the lighter.

Material for the streamers in the shower may be fine strands of green, like smilax or asparagus, or a cluster of different lengths of narrow ribbon, in gauze, satin taffeta or velvet ribbon, white, cream, or green to match the flowers or foliage. The new gauze or chiffon tasseled ribbon is a dainty shower material. Avoid tying many knots in the streamers by tying the flowers on with tiny bows of one-eighth yard lengths of the same width ribbon. Catch two streamers together and drape slightly in two or three places in the shower.

The sash should correspond in color and material to the shower, but of wide ribbon, No. 40 or over. Let the streamers be as long as the longest streamer of the shower and the bows less than half as long. The sash should hang behind the shower, which should be light and gauzy enough to allow the sash to be seen through it.

The bouquet for the maid of honor should be of flowers similar to the bride's and alike in arrangement, and the bridesmaids' a deep tint or shade of the same color. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

After placing an attractive display basket upon an iron plant stand or a pedestal, a lanky look sometimes appears. To relieve this, set a group of foliage plants about the base of the stand. Boston ferns or Asparagus plumosus are usually available. Another relief is the draping of a string of smilax or asparagus over the top, and in front of the stand. Fill in the base of the pedestal with a pretty specimen plant, or a bowl of cut green, or long-stemmed flowers. A group of cut lilies, full-blown roses, or three or four ferns around a bay tree will add to its beauty, and also display the stock to good advantage.

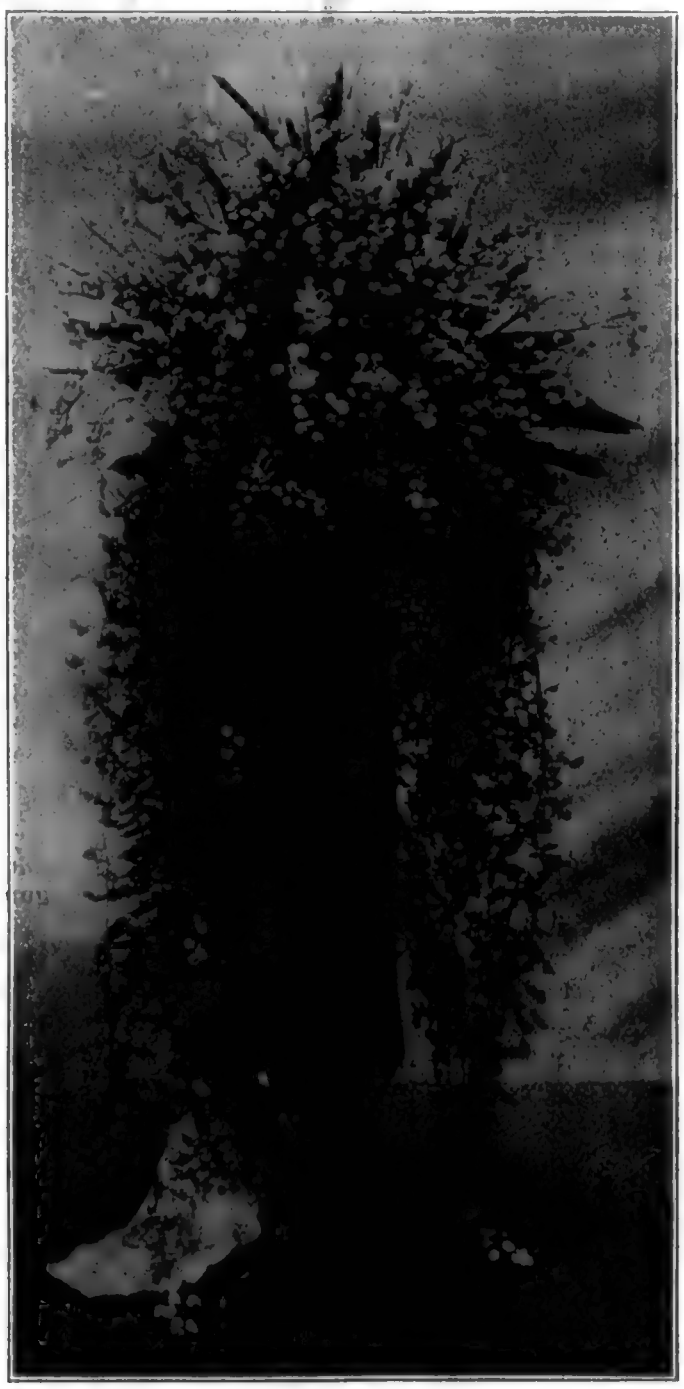
The boutonnieres for the bridal party sometimes receive no attention at all. The gentlemen should be provided with them to match the bouquets which their partners carry. One fine specimen flower with its own foliage, and a small pin with a black or violet head should be provided with each boutonniere.

With the end of the violet season, natty bunches of valley and sweet peas tied with tasseled gauze ribbon to match are becoming favorites for corsage bouquets.

Among the few formal designs surviving for decorative purposes, is the heart. One recently made for a luncheon for a prospective bride was solid with sweet peas ranging in color from an irregular blotch of King Edward VII, red, to a lighter red variety. Encircling the center irregularly appeared Blanche Ferry, gradually shading into Gladys Unwin at the edge. At both ends of the heart as it lay flat on the table were loose lovers' knots of slender sprays of smilax laid upon the cloth. The heart was noticeably rounded, displaying the flowers and coloring to good advantage. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

DEPARTMENT STORE SALES.

The department stores are becoming an important factor in the flower and plant business. A number of the leading establishments in the various large cities, like Bloomingdale's in New York and Daniels & Fisher in Denver, maintain regular flower departments, which are conducted along the most approved lines of retailing flowers and plants.



Bridal Bouquet of Sweet Peas.

But it is with the special sales that the trade is most concerned. These sales are invariably at prices much below the usual retail values. They are of much assistance to overstocked wholesalers and are at certain seasons largely used by the department stores as a means of attracting a class of people who are not usually appealed to by the ordinary bargain offerings in other lines.

The success which almost invariably attends these department store flower sales causes them to be very popular with the stores which are using them, and many who have not hitherto tried flower sales are giving them a test now that stock is cheap in large lots in wholesale markets.

The success which attends the efforts of the department store manager when he goes into the flower business causes many retailers to feel much alarm. That this is needless is shown by the experience at Kansas City, which was one of the first towns in which the department store cut flower sales were tried, and where they flourished greatly. There the leading retailers say that instead of being an injury to the trade, the department store sales serve as educators of the public taste for flowers, and in the end bring new trade to the regular flower stores at season when stock is too high for the department plan of merchandising.

DECORATION DAY.

Like Mother Hubbard's Cupboard.

The following original lines by an enthusiastic reader give a very accurate summary of the general state of affairs at the time mentioned:

Old florist Schuler, he went to the cooler,
'Bout ten on Memorial day;
Says he, "Nix come here ous, not a rose in the house,"
And his customer hiked him away.

Memorial day business has shown a rapid annual increase for the past half dozen years, and has now taken rank with the most important days upon the florists' calendar, calling for more cut flowers than any other day, not excepting Easter, and affording an opportunity for profit not possible when stock is less plentiful and high in price.

So often has it been reported that sales "broke all records" that it is a discredited expression, but comparing last week's Memorial day with any of its predecessors, nothing else will do; it is the story told in every wholesale market—and the wholesale markets always afford a true index to what is doing with the retailers. Cold weather following unseasonable warmth retarded production over a large section of the country and put a vim into the business which would have been lacking had stock been more abundant. The wholesale markets made a very satisfactory clean-up and the retail trade everywhere shared in the general good business. In store after store it was the case as with "Old florist Schuler," customers went away without stock because everything was sold.

One of the notable features was the popularity of the peony. Possibly because of its brief season as much as because of the good qualities of the flower, it has taken a strong hold on the public fancy and hundreds of thousands of dozens were sold at prices which all peony growers must consider excellent.

LONG HOURS.

It is not unusual to hear growers complain of the long hours which are a feature of their calling, where watchfulness must be maintained throughout the twenty-four hours, but the retailers have equal cause for fault-finding on this score. If eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, it is also the means of retaining freedom from the many ills the growers are heir to, and with the retailers a constant readiness to respond to the demands of hurry-up calls for anything from a boutonniere to a funeral bunch or a dinner decoration is the price of success. It takes the form of being on deck, open for business, early and late.

During the season the average retail store is open fourteen or fifteen hours a day and at least part of Sundays and holidays. Added to this, a run of funeral work will often necessitate working the better part of the night, a big decoration will call for night work, and at Christmas and Easter it is not uncommon for the full force to work all night putting up orders for early morning delivery. These things seem necessary in a business where calls not met at the moment are forever lost.

But now that the season is nearing an end it is time for relaxation. Nothing can be lost by early closing during summer and fresh energy will be stored up for the strenuous season which comes with returning autumn.

COUNCIL OF HORTICULTURE.

Press Bureau's Report.

The tenth instalment of the experimental press service conducted by the National Council of Horticulture was distributed May 18 to the 2,500 or more daily and weekly newspapers that had received the previous instalments, either by mail direct or through press bureaus.

This completes the expenditure of $180, set aside for a test service to determine the willingness of the newspapers of the country, large and small, to print matter, carefully prepared, calculated to stimulate the public interest in horticulture in all its branches, and to benefit financially the florist, seed and nursery trades.

The test has been successful. Letters from more than a score of managing editors of the best known newspapers of the country prove that the willingness of newspapers to print the articles we have distributed has amounted in many cases to eagerness.

The Plan Persued.

A list of the largest daily newspapers in the country and of six large press bureaus, engaged in syndicating matter to both daily and weekly publications, was prepared the latter part of March, and the service was begun with a letter explaining the nature of the National Council of Horticulture, and the purpose of the press service. Editors were assured that the articles distributed would be prepared by experts and would give their readers authoritative and valuable information concerning horticultural matters. The purpose of the service was explained as being a general stimulation of interest in horticulture, which would lead to more beautiful homes, and a closer acquaintance with nature. A pledge was given that the articles should in no instance have the effect of advertising any particular firm or group of firms, or any articles of commerce not generally disseminated. This pledge has been kept.

To understand the full meaning of the results obtained by the test service, it must be remembered that lack of funds prevented any attempt to advertise our service. We could not urge on editors the reasons they should print the articles we offered. We were barred by poverty from the "follow up" system without which any ordinary business would be lifeless. We could merely offer our wares, explaining their merits briefly, and accept the first decision, for or against them, in silence.

The Results Obtained.

As close a check as possible was kept to determine what percentage of the papers to which the service was tendered made use of it. This was found to be approximately ninety per cent. This percentage is very much above what I expected, and I believe that had it been possible to have properly followed up our offers, the few papers that refused them would have been brought to see their merit.

All the press bureaus and syndicates to which the service was offered accepted it. I give here a list of the bureaus and the number of papers they served as estimated by the different managing editors at my request, the number in each case being the minimum estimate:

Kellog Newspaper Co..... 750
Western Newspaper Union..... 750
(These bureaus, the largest in the country, combined April 15. Up to that time they were supplied with the service separately and supplied it to their daily and weekly newspapers. The maximum estimate put on the number of papers served by the merged bureau was 3,000.)
American Press Association, New York..... 400
Chicago Newspaper Union..... 500
(These bureaus supply weekly newspapers.)
Madison, Wis., Democrat Co..... 25
(These are daily and weekly papers of Wisconsin and Minnesota.)
Newspaper Enterprise Association, Cleveland, O. 60
(These are metropolitan dailies, including the Chicago Journal, Cleveland Press, Cincinnati Post, etc.)

The service went direct to the following large dailies and was used by them: Worcester Gazette, Detroit News, Grand Rapids Herald, Peoria Journal, Dayton Daily News, Atlanta Constitution, Ohio State Journal, Columbus, O., Duluth News-Tribune, Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune, St. Louis Republic, Louisville Times, Memphis Commercial Appeal, Omaha Bee, Topeka State Journal, Buffalo Evening News, Indianapolis Sun, Kansas City Star, Milwaukee Journal, Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin, Minneapolis Tribune, Brooklyn Eagle, San Francisco Bulletin, Washington Star, Spokane Spokesman-Review, Philadelphia Bulletin, Chicago Daily News, Chicago Tribune.

The willingness of newspapers throughout the country to print horticultural matter having been demonstrated, it remains to comment on the value of the service to the members of the nursery, seed and florist trades that supported it.

Value to the Trade.

The value cannot be questioned by anyone familiar with the effects of advertising. The articles sent out by the council have been advertisement, not for any one firm, but for the horticultural interests of the country generally.

Every branch of horticulture has been affected by the wide range of subjects in the articles. No one will deny, for instance, that an article on how to grow pansies, printed in the Brooklyn Eagle, Philadelphia Bulletin, and the Chicago Tribune, leading newspapers in three big cities, with a combined circulation of more than half a million, will stimulate the demand for pansy plants among the readers of those papers in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, and a large territory surrounding each city.

Such an article would probably be of so much value to the trade benefited, that by dividing the expense among them, the dealers in each city could afford to pay for the article's insertion at advertising rates. Certainly to any enterprising dealer that would be a business proposition not to be lightly put aside.

An article on pansies was published in each of the large papers named, and in 2,500 or more other papers throughout the country. It was distributed by the national council at a cost of about $5, and was published free.

Is it conceivable that the benefit done by that article to the florists and seedsmen of the country was not worth the cost, and many times the cost?

Every other article distributed by the national council was of similar profit to the trade, and was published with as little expense.

Consider what the cost of this exploitation would be at advertising rates. Consider also the immense circulation given to each article, even in our limited experimental service. The newspapers served ranged in circulation from 350,000 down to 1,000. Supposing the average circulation to be 2,000—which is reasonable—and the total circulation was 5,000,000. This at a cost of $5.

It must not be forgotten, moreover, that the articles distributed by the council are published as editorial matter and the value of editorial matter is generally rated as much greater than matter in the advertising columns.

Against these arguments in favor of the council's press service it may be urged that the newspapers, being cognizant of the public interest in horticulture, will print information about it, whether the council supplies it or not.

Reasons for Extension.

It is true there is a wave of interest in horticulture sweeping over the country. It is fostered by the Civic Association, the Woman's Outdoor Art League, and a dozen other admirable voluntary organizations that are inspired by high ideals of beauty and a love of nature. It is this general interest which makes it possible for the national council to get its matter printed with so little trouble.

These organizations, however, do not have the prosperity of the commercial man at heart. Their work is not systematized to that end. While the general interest they stimulate often leads newspapers to print horticultural information, then again in many instances it does not. What is printed may lack timeliness, from a trade standpoint. Certainly, it won't be prepared with the commercial men's benefit in view.

A Birchbark Receptacle Filled by Muir, Chicago.

Compare the effect of such desultory results, to that of the council's press service, which is systematically conducted with the benefit of the commercial men as its ultimate aim, and gets with regularity, week after week, into twice as many papers as would print horticultural information if left to prepare it themselves.

It is my opinion that the council's press bureau, properly enlarged, can apply a stimulus to the wave of horticultural interest, that from a commercial standpoint will have double the effect of the work of all other organizations. Should the commercial men refuse to take advantage of this opportunity, when it means dollars to them, and those who are working on other lines are acting from mere love of horticulture?

The value of general newspaper publicity is being recognized in most lines of business, and large sums are being spent for it, but the results obtained in horticultural exploitation cannot be touched in other lines. This is because of the general recognition of the moral value of horticulture.

In the recent life insurance investigations in New York it was brought out that a press bureau was maintained by the Equitable which obtained the insertion of matter favorable to the company in the editorial columns of newspapers and paid for it at a rate of $1 per line. This shows what value is set upon publicity of this sort.

I have received from the managing editors of some of the best known daily newspapers of the country letters which show what great interest they take in horticulture and how they regard the council's press service. Here is a typical one from a leading publication:

James Keeley, managing editor Chicago Tribune, writes: "I take pleasure in saying that The Tribune has used, with due appreciation of its value, the press service of the National Council of Horticulture. I regard in the most friendly feeling any effort to teach the people in the gentle art of raising flowers and beautifying the grounds around their residences."

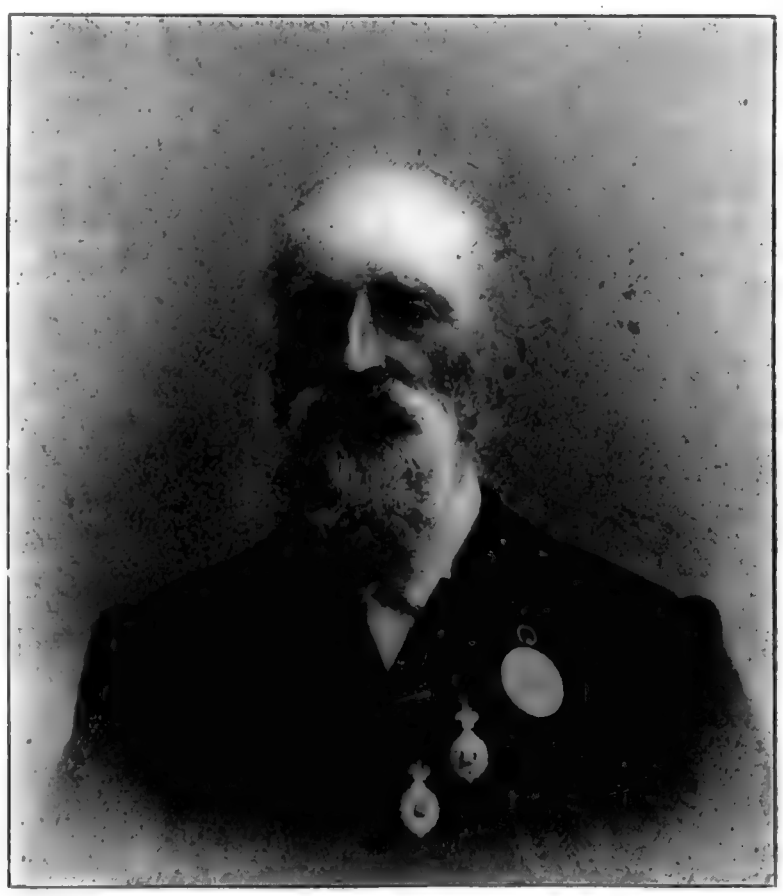
A FAMOUS HORTICULTURIST.



Plant lovers all over the world have lost a benefactor, plant growers a comrade—Edouard Vander Cruyssen died at his home in Mariakerke, near Ghent, Belgium, on May 7, in his eighty-seventh year. Edouard Vander Cruyssen was the originator of Azalea Mme. Vander Cruyssen, undoubtedly the most popular variety of forcing azalea today. No collection in America is complete without it, while in nearly every collection it outnumbers any other variety.

Edouard Vander Cruyssen was born at Mariakerke, December 8, 1819. He was in horticulture in 1849 at his place near Ghent. He devoted especial attention to the culture and improvement of Azalea Indica, originating a number of new varieties. He won the gold medal at the universal exhibition held in Paris for the best twelve varieties of azaleas grown and exhibited by the originator. This set of twelve included the peerless Mme. Vander Cruyssen. He also won high honors for his productions during the next eighteen years at Amsterdam, Vienna, Brussels, London and Antwerp.

In 1902 the syndicate of Belgian nurserymen presented Mr. Vander Cruyssen with a gold medal in commemoration of the thirty-fifth anniversary of the introduction and the victory at Paris of his greatest azalea.

The funeral took place at Mariakerke on May 10. Among the many beautiful floral designs sent by relatives and friends was a wreath composed entirely of azalea Mme. Vander Cruyssen from Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

A Chapter on Bench Building.

The time will soon be here when our most important crops must be planted, and probably many readers are considering what kind of benches are to be built in place of those that are decayed and must be replaced.

Smilax and Asparagus plumosus are the first crops to go in, and for these there are no benches to build. Both of them should go right into Mother Earth. This is particularly true of asparagus.

Bed for Asparagus and Smilax.

The soil of the surface of the greenhouse may not be suitable. If not, all you have to do is to put up a plank 2x8 inches, held in place by some pieces of 1-inch pipe, and then fill in with soil that is one-fourth cow manure. Don't put boards or any other material at the bottom of the bed. As the asparagus will do in the same soil for three or four years, with an annual top dressing, it should have a bed at least eight inches deep, and if it were twelve inches deep, none the worse.

The smilax pays best when planted annually and, therefore, six inches of soil will grow it well for one year. To get the best returns from smilax it should be planted the last week in June; then by the time to replant a year hence, you should have cut four crops. Smilax is mostly used in quantity. If you need fifty strings you have time enough to procure it of a specialist, but unless you have some on your own place, if you are a retailer, it is a continual annoyance sending to the wholesale house for a few strings. We daily notice the inconvenience of not having smilax on the place, and I am not sure that it is less profitable than many other plants that occupy our thought and space and upon which we put our labor.

The smilax, like its closely allied genus, the asparagus, is a heavy feeder, and should have a heavy loam with a third or fourth of fresh manure. Once we were compelled to use a light, gritty sand for our smilax bed, and it was a most pronounced failure. We also planted a lot of asparagus in a bed of good soil at least a foot deep, separated from Mother Earth by planks, and that also was a failure, so avoid these mistakes. We have paid for our experience and profited by its teachings.

A Digression.

The planting of roses and carnations yet is a few weeks in advance, but it is none too early to be prepared. I notice that some methods of building and glazing are pronounced fads by a wise man in New Jersey. Most of us are faddists. We copy, or follow the teachings of men who have new ideas. Many of tnese bright and original ideas are fallacies, and yet others are jewels. The idea that roses could be grown to produce the finest blossoms in four inches of soil on a board bench at first was laughed at by the majority of florists, and was called a fad, yet long ago it was universally adopted and has proved correct. The New Jersey friend, who styled the short-span-to-the-south a fad, was about right, but when he included butted glass as another fad he was far wrong. However, this is no time or place to discuss the merits of that style of glazing. Only those who have extensively tried both the butted and lapped methods are fit to pass an opinion.

Cost of Bench Material.

A few years ago there was a slight inclination with many growers to adopt solid beds for our most important products, and that reached the stage of a fad, but most growers are going back to benches, or what has been called semi-solid beds. The enormous increase in cost of lumber suitable for benches made us realize that repairing and renewing wood benches is a most serious item of expense. One illustration: Hemlock lumber, which ten years ago cost $11 per thousand feet, now costs $26 per thousand, and used for benches it is only good for an average of about four years.

Last summer, having returned from the fad of solid beds to the raised benches, we bought a carload of pecky cypress. It was landed in western New York at a trifle less than $21 per thousand feet, mostly boards 1x6 inches and 2x4 inches. It is rough looking and from the holes in it you would think that the patriarchs of the borer family had flourished in the trees since the age of Noah, but those who ought to know say these apparent borings are not caused by any of the boring insects, and it is no unsoundness. One year's experience is not enough to be any guide, still we believe it will outlast by three times the life of white pine or hemlock. If so, it is a boon, and this material must be available at a much lower price to thousands of florists than it is to us in western New York.

Several Styles of Benches.

Having had several kinds of benches and beds the past season—the board bench with five inches of soil; the solid bed, with no separating material between the prepared soil of the bed and the floor of the greenhouse; and what we will call semi-solid, with six inches of soil on a floor of tile or hollow brick,—we have come to the conclusion that the raised bench with four or five inches of soil will grow roses or carnations to perfection from July till the following March, and for the average florist it is safest and best, and in the majority of houses tne plants will receive the greatest light.

The solid bed, where the prepared soil is on the floor of the greenhouse is, of course, the least expensive to construct, as the side can be merely a plank. There are, however, several disadvantages. Unless the floor of the greenhouse is of gravel, the beds will have poor drainage, anu with houses that have board sides, both north and south, the plants will not receive enough light. Another factor is that the atmosphere surrounding the plants is heavier and less pure than it is three feet above the floor.

I have noticed this spring a decided advantage, both in roses and carnations, on the semi-solid beds. There are several ways of making these beds; one was described by Mr. Montgomery last summer in his article on grafted roses.

The Best Style of Bed.

The beds used by the Canadian growers are about perfection and attain the object in view, viz.: Nothing to decay, and practically everlasting. They build low walls, either two bricks high, or just as well make the walls of concrete, six to ten inches high. Then soil is filled in even with top of wall, and firmly packed down. Then a floor of 2-inch drain tile or 4-inch hollow brick is laid in the soil, extending to the outer edge of the walls. A 2x4 or 2x6 cypress scantling will do for the edge of the bed, or to be still more permanent an edging of concrete can be laid on the tiles. This makes a bed of perfect drainage, brings the plants up to a convenient height and the air at the temperature of the house is circulating through the tiles or bricks at all times.

The first cost of such a bed may be a trifle more than of the raised wood bench, yet only a trifle. It is convenient to fill or empty, has perfect drainage, and there is nothing about it to decay, and when we get the hot suns of April and May there is not the continual drying out that takes place in the raised wood bench. What is known as hollow brick is better than the round drain tile; not better drainage, but more convenient for shoveling off.

Soil Beneath the Tiles.

The soil beneath the tiles need not be a special preparation; any old soil that has been previously used is good enough. The utility this six or eight inches of soil beneath the tiles is not easy to explain, yet it is of the greatest use. If you doubt it, place the tiles on planks or a concrete floor and notice the marked difference between the plants grown there and where the tiles rest on soil. Our attention has been drawn to it, and we have frequently noticed it where a small piece of bench was carried over some stone or concrete floor.

We have found the bed which I have endeavored to describe as near the ideal as possible, convenient to work, lasting, and not expensive. If the crops on it are not ideal we are convinced we must look to some other cause than the construction of the benches.

BITUMINOUS MINES RESUME.

The strike of the Illinois coal miners terminated May 31 as the result of an agreement effected by the joint scale committee of miners and operators. In substance the agreement provides that the 1903 scale of wages shall be paid the miners and that the cost of shot firers and inspectors shall be assumed by the miners, and in case of any new legislation enacted which shall affect the equity of the agreement the party which is injured by the legislation shall be reimbursed by the other party to the joint agreement. The agreement is to continue in force for two years.

The mines resumed operations on Monday and soon all will be working at full capacity, although there is no immediate need for coal. The prospects are that coal can be laid in cheaply this summer.

CARRYING STOCK OVER.

As soon as the plants have acquired the proper condition of ripeness, all the small, blind wood should be cut out and the stronger shoots cut back to at least four eyes. As much of the top soil should be removed as can be done without injuring the roots, and the surface given a sprinkling of air-slaked lime. The bed should then be refilled with a good, rich mulch and given a thorough soaking.

The house temperature should be kept as near 55 degrees as the weather will allow, and the plants should be frequently syringed until root action again commences, when more water and freer ventilation can be given.

By tying the stronger growths in a horizontal position the buds, which are at the base of the stem and in a dormant state, will be encouraged to break and form nice shoots.

As the young leaves develop and the young growths begin to reach, ventilation should be given freely and ordinary watering resumed.

During the whole process of ripening, preparing and restarting the plants, great care should be exercised in administering ventilation and giving the requisite quantity of moisture to the house without direct application to the roots.

In ventilating the sashes should be raised a little at a time, never so much as to perceptibly reduce the temperature, and should be lowered during the afternoon with the same care; that is, never lower the ventilating sash so much at once as will have a tendency to raise the temperature of the house.

While the plants require a good deal of moisture, the roots being in a semi-dormant condition do not require much water after the first soaking until there are very evident signs of renewed root activity.

No effort should be made to push the plants along by feeding or otherwise until they have developed a good crop of leaves and young wood of good substantial quality.

FUMIGATING WITH ARSENIC.

We have noticed some comment on fumigating with arsenic. Can you advise us in what quantities this should be used and whether or not it has ever been successfully used for leaf rollers on roses?

L. W. H.

Regarding the merits of arsenic as a fumigant to be applied to rose houses and the quantities to be used for destroying the leaf roller, I have made some careful research as to its properties when so applied and the best and easiest methods of so applying it.

The question of whether it would benefit the rose grower and be of practical use to him in exterminating insects is, so far as I can learn from inquiries among the most advanced in the craft, an unknown field. That the deposit left on the leaves of roses from properly sublimated arsenious acid (the common white arsenic of commerce) would be fatal to chewing insects there can be little doubt, but some of our worst enemies belong to the class called suckers, that derive their sustenance from the sap of the plant and consequently can not be reached through their stomachs.

It is possible that a fine deposit may affect any of the insects by absorption and thus set up a fatal irritation, but these effects can also be accomplished by the simpler and safer method of using the acid in solution.

According to some authorities arsenious acid is entirely volatile at an incipient white heat and if thrown on ignited charcoal it emits a strong garlicky odor, while in the British pharmacopœia it is said to be entirely volatilized at a temperature of 400 degrees F. Dr. Taylor, in his work on medical jurisprudence, gives the subliming point at 370 degrees F., and Wm. A. Guy, who has made careful experiments on the volatility of various substances, states that arsenious acid rises in vapor at about 280 degrees F. On being heated to about 424 degrees F. it is completely volatilized without melting.

To show how widely doctors can differ on even such an easily settled discussion, the above statements were entirely disproved by experiments made under the direction of Prof. Mallet, of the University of Virginia. He succeeded in fusing arsenic without difficulty, but failed to pass it into vapor without fusing.

With arsenic in its various forms as an insecticide there is a wide field, but at the same time there is great danger in volatilizing such a subtile poison and it is only by a thorough knowledge of the properties it assumes in its various forms that can constitute safety. Few growers possess this knowledge and experimenting with such an agent may place some of the growers themselves in the same condition they would like to put the pests of the rose houses.

GLASS MAKING GOES ON.

The window glass factories of the country will not shut down for the summer June 9, as recommended by W. R. Hilton, president of the United States Window Glass Manufacturers' Association. In response to the circular last week asking the manufacturers to signify their willingness to close on the date named only a few manufacturers who have stocks on hand favored the early suspension. The plan has been abandoned, and all factories will continue in operation until the close of the fire, June 30. Some will endeavor to operate during the summer months, for stocks are lower than usual at this season and many factories will not be able to make full deliveries without working beyond the usual period for a cessation of operations. The demand for greenhouse sizes continues active.

STYLE OF HOUSE.

What location is best for a carnation house 30x150 feet? Two sites are available, one east and west, the other north and south and much better elevation.

What system of heating would you consider best for such a house? Following are the conditions: At present we have 11,000 feet of glass, steam heat supplied by two twenty horse-power boilers. The houses, six in number, are poorly located and in few years will need rebuilding, with complete overhauling of the heating plant. The farthest point of the new house would be at least 300 feet distant from the present boilers. Would it be wise, therefore, to attach the new house to the present heating plant? We are inclined to favor a hot water system with separate boiler and boiler-house. What is your opinion of same? F. A. S.

Of course you know that the most popular method of building greenhouses these days is running east and west, and there is no doubt in my mind that, all things being equal, this is best. However, there are conditions that might make houses running north and south preferable, and when such houses are built light, and large glass used, as high a grade of stock can be grown in them as can be grown in the east and west houses. In the east and west houses you can get a greater amount of direct sunlight, which is worth a good deal during midwinter, but the north and south houses are cooler during the summer. So by striking an average for the twelve months I doubt whether there is a great deal of difference in the net results. If there is much advantage in the north and south site over the other I should not hesitate to use it.

In building houses running north and south I would be inclined to build them wider than the average, say about forty to fifty feet wide, and to build them separate, with at least fifteen feet of space between them, and run the glass down the sides to a level with the beds. Use as light sashbars as may seem practicable, especially in the way of depth. A sashbar 1½x1½, or even a little wider, would be better than the regulation bar, 2¼x1⅝. To give the roof the necessary strength you could put in one or two extra purlins. We usually calculate eight to nine feet between purlins, or between purlins and ridge or gutter, but with such a light bar this would have to be reduced to six or seven feet in the clear.

If you expect in a few years to tear down your old houses and build on your new site, then I would certainly advise you to put in a separate heating plant at once. You will find that you will have much less difficulty in heating the house properly than you would after taking the steam so far from your boilers. You would find, if you tried to heat from the old boilers, that unless you always carried a good head of steam, at least twenty-five pounds pressure, your new house would always be slow in heating up and quick in cooling off. You would find this very exasperating at times. Then, again, I hardly think you would be able to maintain the proper temperature during zero weather with your present boiler capacity. This new glass would give you an additional 5,000 feet of glass and being such a distance away from the boilers would require as much work on the part of the boilers as would 8,000 feet added to the old range. A total of 19,000 feet of glass is too much for your two boilers unless everything is in fine working order.

If, however, you expect to build only this one house on this site, then it would perhaps be better to feed it from the old heating plant and if necessary put in a larger boiler. In such case I would feed this main entirely separate from the other system by running it direct from the boiler and having no connection with the other mains.

It will save you much labor to have your entire heating plant in one place, if it is possible, and it will pay you to build with that idea in view. The old-fashioned way was to put up a couple of houses, with boiler house, etc., apparently without any idea of ever adding to them. By and by, when more glass was needed, very often an entire new plant had to be put in for the new addition, and so on until in some cases as many as a dozen sections, with as many boiler holes, were scattered over a couple of acres of ground. Places with four and five boiler holes were common enough ten years ago. Now when an up-to-date man builds he plans as though he expected to cover every foot of ground he owns, or expects to own, and the one thing he provides for is an adequate heating plant to heat all the glass that he will ever put up, and to heat it all from one central point. The wise man looks far into the future.

As to the best method of heating, experts differ in opinion. When you meet a grower who has a heating plant that works satisfactorily he will tell you to put in no other system. Hot water and steam each has its advocates, and you will find plenty of places fitted up with each, working first-class in every way. Personally we prefer steam to hot water as being quicker to respond in case of emergency, either in getting up extra heat or in cooling off entirely. For those who have very small places and do not employ night men, hot water is of course preferable, but on a place the size of yours there should always be a man on duty during firing weather. One thing I want to impress upon your mind, is to set your boilers low enough to give your return pipes plenty of fall. Poor circulation in most cases can be traced to that one point. If the water line in your boiler is six feet below the lowest point of the return, it is better than if it were three feet, although three feet is sufficient if the piping is perfect.

CARNATIONS IN ENGLAND.

For smartness, up-to-date methods and fine results we yet have seen nothing in connection with winter-flowering carnations to beat A. F. Dutton's establishment at Iver Heath, close by the little old Buckinghamshire village of Iver, says the Gardeners' Magazine. Firstly, Mr. Dutton grows carnations for the purpose of producing flowers for market, and secondly, he believes in producing flowers a little better than any one else. Thirdly, he grows carnations, as plants, for both wholesale and retail trade.

Iver is well out in the country, where pure air and clear light prevail, and where London fogs are unknown. Here Mr. Dutton has erected two splendid pairs of span-roofed houses. These are of his own designing, and they combine lightness with strength in a remarkable degree. There is no division down the center of each twin house, so that there is an enormous area under the one roof, and when most of the benches are in full cut such a house presents a fine sight. An adaptation of the American plan has been followed by Mr. Dutton, and he has a well-founded belief in bench culture, but not in the rough and ready methods occasionally followed. The raised wooden benches run the whole length of these houses 200 feet long, and each bench is wide enough to hold six plants.

The rude health of the plants, the blue bloom on the leafage, and the big, substantial flowers all point to one thing—excellence of culture. Very often a market establishment is not so clean and tidy as to attract the visitor's attention in that respect, and to any gentle hint at the absence of cleanliness and tidiness a prompt retort that the place is run to pay and not for show, is forthcoming. Not so at Iver; cleanliness is regarded as one of the essentials. No weeds are to be found on the benches, no spots on the plants—all is clean, healthy, fragrant.

The plants are planted on the benches from pots, and not from the open ground. Mr. Dutton does not grow a multitude of varieties. New American and home-raised varieties are always being tested, but while many are called, few are chosen. Mrs. Lawson and Enchantress are more largely grown than any others.

His list of best sorts is: White, Lady Bountiful, White Lawson, Lillian Pond, Lieut. Peary, Boston Market, The Belle, and Governor Wolcott; pink, Enchantress, Floriana, Ethel Ward, Fiancee, Fair Maid, Melba, and Morning Glory; cerise, Mrs. Lawson, Mrs. T. Roosevelt, and Nelson Fisher; scarlet, Christmas Eve, Cardinal, Flamingo, and G. H. Crane; crimson, Harlowarden, Harry Fenn, President, and Gov. Roosevelt; fancies, Prosperity, and Mrs. M. A. Patten.

Mr. Dutton's stock of Mrs. Lawson is a superb one, as pains have been taken to reject plants giving duller and rosier shades of color, and to propagate only from plants giving the best cerise-pink blooms. The White Lawson, from which Mr. Dutton has worked up a stock, is a sport of his own, and by careful selection he has now secured a fine form of the purest whiteness and without any pink markings. Mr. Dutton has also a white sport from Enchantress.

OBITUARY.

C. H. Kunzman.

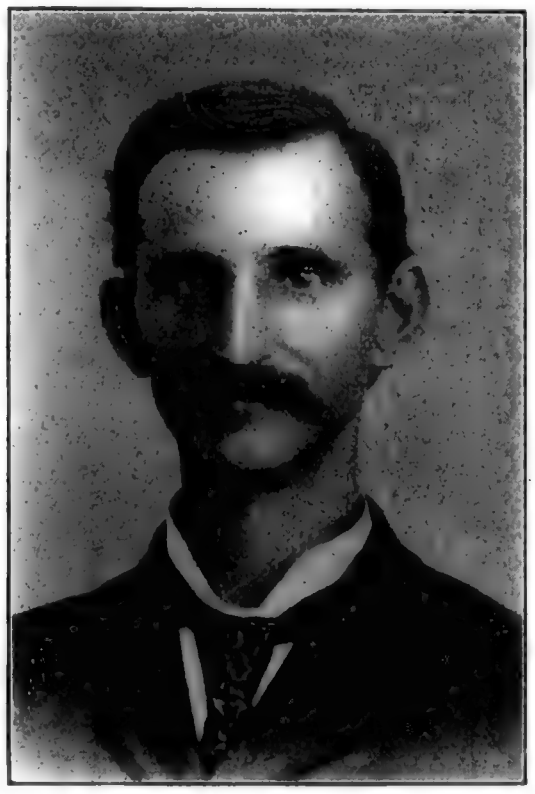
C. Harry Kunzman died at his residence, 3710 High street, Louisville, Ky., as the result of tubercular trouble at 5 o'clock on the afternoon of May 28. He was 43 years of age, and leaves a widow and one little boy.

Mr. Kunzman was born in Louisville, and spent his life in that city. He had for years been identified with the trade and was known throughout the country as a successful grower of fancy carnations, having won prizes at state and national exhibitions. He was treasurer of the Kentucky Florists' Association.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

[The New Horticulture, by H. M. Stringfellow; Texas Farm and Ranch Publishing Co., Dallas, Tex.; cloth, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.]

In the New Horticulture, H. M. Stringfellow puts in permament form the many arguments he has from time to time advanced in the horticultural press and which have created much discussion, if not widely accepted. Mr. Stringfellow believes that most troubles of the fruit growers, and many of the nurserymen, are the result of planting stock with long, fibrous roots, and he has evidence which seems to prove it—only, as he says, so far as securing the adoption of his methods goes, "My individual efforts for eight years have amounted to practically nothing." Here is what he contends:



"1. I claim that the best form of tree for planting is exactly the opposite of that recommended by all authorities from time immemorial, inasmuch as the latter departs farthest from nature's method of seed, which experience of the past proves to be the best, and to which I claim my method is superior. The close root-pruned tree strikes several strong penetrating tap-roots, instead of one, like a seedling, and sends them much deeper.

"2. I claim that deep preparation of the ground, as now recommended, is equally far from the truth, and nature's method of a firm, unbroken soil, inasmuch as such deeply pulverized ground, after excessive rains, even though well drained, will for several days become a bog, to drown and scald the young rootlets in summer and freeze them to death in winter at the north.

"3. That all cultivation of trees after several years, when the feeding roots hunt the surface, is wrong per se, inasmuch as all trees depend upon these surface roots for the proper development of the fruit, both as to size and quality, and any cultivation must necessarily be destructive to them. From the very start, except a space around each tree large enough to prevent damage from the mowing blade, frequent and close mowing through the growing season, leaving the clippings on the ground, is the best plan for all close root-pruned trees, with annual fertilizing to perfect the crop. But please take notice that I do not recommend this treatment for poor, handicapped, three and four-year-old, long, fibrous-rooted trees, if planted as they come from the nursery.

"4. That all fall, winter and spring pruning, until after the trees are in full growth, is contrary to nature and common sense, in that it, as well as fall, winter and early spring stirring of the ground, tends to break our trees' rest and start a premature motion of the sap."

The 146 pages of the book are devoted to proving the correctness of the system of close root-pruning and to illustrations of the process, together with the author's views on various phases of the successful management of fruit trees. It is stated that "quite a number of nurserymen, some of them the most extensive in the Union, are now practicing this method" of close root-pruning, and certainly every one who grows trees will find the book well worth reading and the method worth trial in a cautious way.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

Little disease is now seen in English rose houses, that formerly ruinous trouble, mildew, having almost disappeared. Some years ago many went out of rose growing solely because they could not cope with mildew, but since the value of sulphur has been fully recognized very few are troubled with it.

At the Royal Horticultural Society's show on May 1 W. Paul & Sons exhibited some fine new rambler roses, such as are probably destined to become useful commercial sorts, Wedding Bells and another variety, called Friar, being especially fine. A new hybrid tea called Warrior looks like being useful for cutting.

It is remarkable that of the great number of new sorts of narcissus raised of late years and put on the market, how few there are of any commercial use, Bicolor Victoria being the only one used in big quantities. It is one of the best and easiest forcers, the perianth being pure white, making it a true bicolor. Outdoors the perianth is yellow, trumpet golden, very broadly expanded and heavily frilled and of immense substance. It can be hard forced for blooming in fine quality immediately after Christmas. A list of sorts forced will be interesting for comparison with those used in the States: Poeticus ornatus, Sir Watkin, Golden Spur, Emperor, Princeps, Horsfieldii, Empress, Victoria and Sir Henry Irving.

Spanish iris is very plentiful from forced stock and this year has proved a profitable item. Growers are ordering from Holland in greatly increased quantities. If the increased popularity continues, both for forcing and outdoor use, a rise in price may be expected for the bulbs at no distant date.

Hydrangea hortensis is especially fine this year and grand plants are seen, carrying giant heads of bloom, in some cases over nine inches across, the only fault being the color, few being able to get their stock the beautiful bright sky blue such as are seen in some establishments. Where the blue coloring is brought out well some high prices are made. An old market grower told me the other day the way to obtain these bright blues is to use a few lumps of alum placed over the drainage when potting, and when the plants show bloom they are watered two or three times each week with alum water. The method sounds too easy to be effective.

HELP WANTED.

If evidence were lacking of the great prosperity and rapid expansion in the florists' business, it would be found in the large demand for competent help in all departments of the business. Always at this season all available help is employed, but this year more than any other, work is delayed because of an insufficient amount of labor to accomplish all which is to be done within a stated period.

There is call, first for men who have the knowledge necessary for producing general stock for retail trade; such men as couple an acquaintance with plants with dependability and clean living. Then there is demand for men as assistant growers under foremen in the big cut flower ranges. Also there are innumerable places open for men capable of taking charge in the absence of the owner—men with records for sobriety and faithfulness which inspire confidence. Also there is need for more workers in wholesale stores, in retail stores and "on the road." In fact, a man who is able to do things in any branch of the florists' business, unless there is some weak spot in his character, need not be for long out of remunerative employment, and the young men are being advanced with much rapidity into responsible places.

The "want" columns of the Review afford a good index to the condition of the labor market in our trade. In it are advertised the best positions; to it the best men turn when in need of situations. At present it is a one-sided column—mostly all "help wanted"; not many men are out of work, for growers are all busy.

Prize Essays.

President W. F. Kasting offers three prizes, $20, $15 and $10, for first, second and third best essays on "The Best Method of Marketing the Product of the Wholesale Plant and Flower Growers." The competition is open to all and essays must not exceed 1,500 words each. Those wishing to compete are requested to send their completed manuscript to the secretary not later than July 15. The manuscript should be unsigned, but the full address of the writer should in all cases accompany same. The awards will be made by a competent committee and the names withheld until after a decision has been reached. WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

The Market.

Since the rush of Decoration day, trade has been quiet; still it could be much worse and there is little cause to complain. The regular crop of June weddings and commencements is beginning, with a corresponding increase in demand. The coming week will be the banner week of the month, and business will be fine, without a doubt. Already there have been enough orders booked to make this an assured fact. With this prospect in view the entire craft is in good humor.

The supply of roses has been fair and the quality, if anything, is somewhat better, owing to cooler weather. Beauties are arriving in much larger quantities and there is a good demand for them. Carnations are slacking up a little and there are none too many on the market. The price holds up well and may go higher with the increased demand. Sweet peas sell fairly. Other items of stock are selling out well.

Various Notes.

The local investigating committee took out subpoenas for Julius Baer, E. G. Gillett, Joseph Glins, C. J. Jones, David Knott and William Turner. They were before the grand jury May 31 to tell what they know of municipal affairs.

The annual election of the Florists' Society will be held in the club rooms Saturday, June 9. It is expected that this will be an unusually large meeting, owing to the many subjects of special interest that will be brought up.

W. K. Partridge has purchased fifty acres of land adjoining his present place. He will use this farm to obtain soil for his benches.

Mr. Trinz, of Lubliner & Trinz, Chicago, was a caller, as was Mrs. Wm. Dittmann, of New Castle, Ind.

C. J. OHMER.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The weather conditions for May were of extremes, cold the fore part of the month, we were treated to July heat for about ten days, having a very demoralizing effect on roses; the carnations stood it better. A rainy week helped produce a bad dose of mildew.

Flowers were scarce for Memorial day, particularly with those who have a shipping trade, and of shipping orders not more than forty per cent were filled. All plants in bloom sold well, nothing salable in bedding stock being left. All are rushed with the work of getting bedding done. The quantity of hanging baskets and window or porch boxes used is considerable, as they are all the rage.

Salvias are extensively used and are becoming more popular each year, 3-inch pots bring 75 cents per dozen; 4-inch $1. They are easily grown and more profitable than geraniums.

The weather has been ideal for carnation planting, a rain having occurred just about when needed. G. F. C.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Good business and the scarcity of stock have kept every one on the jump the last few days. A number of commencement exercises, receptions and confirmations have livened business considerably. The scarcity of wedding decorations, or at least inquiries in regards to prices, has been very noticeable.

While roses have been quite plentiful, carnations have been unusually scarce, but the shipments are larger today, so it is hoped that the shortage was only of a few days' duration. Sweet peas are plentiful but the demand is equal to the supply, except for pink, which are commencing to pile up. Peonies are just appearing.

I intend to do some heavier advertising next season, for I find it pays.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

has given better results than any other advertising I have done.

Various Notes.

Taepke is cutting from 2,000 to 3,000 carnations daily at the new range of glass. This has gone a long way toward eliminating the scarcity of this popular flower in this market.

Breitmeyers have been exceedingly busy with several wedding decorations. A large stock of outdoor stuff from their place at Mount Clemens adds considerable variety to their sales.

Charles Warncke is suffering from an attack of rheumatism.

The last three weeks have been very busy ones for B. Schroeter and his staff. Being located near Elmwood cemetery for over thirty years, he does most of the bedding, besides having numerous jobs about town and in the suburbs.

The Bemb Floral Co. makes a specialty of Japanese decorating. Cork bark is also used extensively by this enterprising firm, one of their best selling novelties being ferneries and plant-boxes covered by this useful material.

Confirmation wreaths excited considerable interest among many of the retailers, everything available, from bridal wreath to valley, being used. Customers in 1907 will find the price of these wreaths advanced considerably, as the florists have come to the conclusion that there is no money in them under $2, while one containing three dozen valley should bring $3 at least.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange reports a very good month. Mr. Dilger being busy in the parks, has thrown the detail of this concern on Robert Rahaley's shoulders. He has shown himself more than capable.

The Detroit Cut Flower Supply House also reports a very good month. This concern is handling some very fine roses from Pierce, at Pontiac.

Bernard Koeberle, for many years with B. Schroeter, has accepted a position at Breitmeyers'.

Wm. Hielscher's wire works is adding to its list of employees. Besides doing all the floral design work for Detroit and vicinity, they do lots of special work.

Visitors: Martin Reukauf, Philadelphia; Arnold Ringier, Chicago; James F. Smith, Philadelphia; Mr. Mellstrom, with Sander & Son, of England.

WORMS IN SOIL.

Will you please tell us what to do to be rid of the little worm that eats our radishes, cabbages and cauliflower? It is so bad we cannot raise any early crop. The ground is full of them. What is the cause and remedy? J. D.

The trouble you describe is a very common one; in fact, very few old gardens, or soils that have been used for garden purposes, are free from it, especially if it has been receiving liberal dressings of barnyard manure, as this material seems to attract the flies which deposit eggs in it; and also seems to be an ideal hatchery for the young larvæ. In soils of a light, sandy nature or in soils that have been lying in grass for several years, they seldom prove troublesome.

A liberal dressing of air-slaked lime in the spring, in place of manure, will be found advantageous, but in the meantime to help stop the immediate ravages of the insects, give the plants, soon after they are up, a good watering with lime water. This may be prepared by soaking over night about a peck of hot lime in a barrel of water, draining off and using the clear water next day. This should be applied about twice a week.

A solution of nitrate of soda at the rate of two ounces to ten quarts of water has also proved destructive to this pest, but as with the lime water, it must be started in the early stages of growth and kept up to be effective.

A good deal may be accomplished toward the checking of the trouble by judicious rotation of crops. In ground that has been occupied by such crops as corn, on which the insects cannot work, the previous season, the soil has a good chance of being pretty well clear, but some chemical manure, such as superphosphate of lime, should be applied to the soil instead of the barnyard article. The superphosphate is used at the rate of from 200 to 300 pounds to the acre.

NOTICE

Because of the new wage scale which the Printers' Union has enforced upon those employers not willing to suffer interruption of their business, especially because of that part of the scale which makes overtime practically prohibitive, it is of first importance that the Review obtain its advertising "copy" earlier.

It is therefore earnestly requested that all advertisers mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday morning, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

Contributors also please take heed.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business held steady up to Saturday in the mid-afternoon. Late receipts on that day congested the market and the slump began. This week opened with heavy receipts in all departments, supplies being several times the legitimate demand and prices broke on everything but the select goods, and even on these concessions were made. It looks as though this week will see a glut even worse than the exceedingly bad one of a fortnight ago. The change was one of the most sudden on record in a market widely known for its violent fluctuations. About the only consolation growers are likely to get out of this week's figures will come by averaging them with the fine ones of last week.

There is still much good material but with 88 degrees in the shade Monday and 90 degrees Tuesday all kinds of stock suffered in quality. Brides and Maids again grew smaller and soft. Most carnations are also diminutive and lack keeping quality. Peonies are wide open. The outdoor valley came hurrying in. Sweet peas no longer require superlatives for description. That summer is here was shown by the first receipts of water lilies. The supply of green goods is not up to the requirements of the June brides and some of them will likely have to do without smilax or asparagus unless orders are placed early. New ferns are everywhere.

Decoration Day Aftermath.

Last week's Review went to press in the height of the rush, but nothing remains for the second telling but to emphasize the satisfaction with which wholesalers sum up the week. The total sales were, with practically every house in town, considerably the best ever recorded for Decoration day. The demand was something to marvel at. Supplies were less than had been expected, because of three cold days, and orders had to be cut. It was inevitable that prices should advance, and advance they did, sharply, all along the line. For the last few days the wholesalers, who a week before were explaining to growers who protested that stock was being given away, have been excusing themselves to buyers who assert that they were "roasted" on prices for Decoration day. And now the glut is on again. Whichever way the market goes, the commission men stand between the devil and the deep sea. They like the short end best, if things won't come out even, and they seldom do.

Peonies.

A week before Decoration day fear was expressed that peonies would be a glut; but the southern crop passed and the local stock proved a week late, so that, with a scarcity in other lines, conditions were as though made to order for the holders of cold-storage peonies. The principal lots were the Sarcoxie crop stored by Kennicott Bros. Co. and the Carbondale crop of R. E. Kennicott, stored and distributed by his father and brother. Kennicott Bros. Co. in particular was fortunate in a large supply, for everything cleaned up at fine figures; indeed, the demand was not wholly supplied.

It was peculiar that peonies brought better prices for a couple of days after Decoration day than they did before; demand continued and supplies were light, except local Old Red. This week the glut is on again heavier than ever. Too bad the newly converted vegetarians can not eat them. It will take little more than the rest of the week to work through the local crop, and then will come another fortnight of good business for those who know how peonies should be stored.

For the past couple of years the carload shipments of the Chicago Carnation Co. have been a feature of the peony market, but this year these are missing because most of the stock was divided and replanted last fall. They have about an acre of singles in bloom and are cutting moderately of other sorts.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting a big crop of peonies this week, part for current order, but 2,000 dozens go into cold storage.

Street Stands Removed.

The commissioner of public works on June 1 ordered the removal of all sidewalk stands throughout the loop district. The order applied to fruit as well as flower stands and the Greeks and South Water street are up in arms. They will bring all possible influence to bear to secure a modification of the order, which now permits no selling on the sidewalk, even by the tenant of the property.

The market is feeling the effect this week, for several of the largest buyers of job lots are temporarily out of business. As the frequent crusades against the Greeks never are of more than transient effect, some of the wholesalers, while sympathizing with the retailer under whose nose a stand is operating, are inclined to deprecate these periodical interruptions as in the end not profitable to anyone.

And in the end the Greek, driven off the street, gets a store next to the regular florist, where he becomes a much more damaging competitor.

Club Picnic.

The entertainment committee of the Florists' Club held a meeting Monday morning and decided to issue a call for a big picnic on Sunday, June 24, at Higinbotham's woods, Joliet, Ill. It is several years since the club has indulged its old-time proclivities for picnicking. Baseball and other games are scheduled, with liberal prizes. Every one is to bring a basket of provender. Railroad tickets will be on sale at all the wholesale stores by June 11 and it is expected that a record crowd will turn out.

Cape Jasmines.

Although all other houses handle cape jasmines, E. F. Winterson Co. had the largest supply for Decoration day and the store has since been odoriferous with the daily receipts of many thousands of capes. The Texas crop was a few days late for the best demand. The capes have brought from $1 a hundred down to $1 or less a thousand, largely according to the skill used in bunching. Some of the stock was tied six in a bunch and placed loose in berry crates; it did not realize express charges. No better stock, all at the same stage, all of the same length, bunched with heads even, above the green, wrapped tightly in newspapers, sold in preference to buds put up in any other way. In general prices have compared favorably with last year, when capes were a glut at Decoration day.

Forty-seventh Street.

The greenhouse on the roof that thousands see from the elevated railroad each day, is over the store of J. W. Niesen, who is doing a nice business. It is the old Holden stand. Mr. Niesen, who is a graduate of Wienhoeber's, uses the greenhouse for bedding plants. He has done a large trade this spring in filling window boxes.

Julius Schnapp recently opened at Forrestville and Forty-seventh. The store makes a fine showing from the street and the neighborhood is an excellent one. A prosperous business is sure to result with time and good work. Mr. Schnapp's right hand man is his daughter, a clear-headed attractive young person who is sure to make friends for the store.

Over at Lake avenue, close by the Illinois Central station and in one of the best locations on the south side, the Johnson & Swan store has been so long established that it has a trade which has stayed with it through several changes in management. John Mangel once had an interest here and the Mangel policy of making at all times a good display of stock is still practiced.

Weather in May.

Meteorologically May was a most peculiar month. On the 9th, 36 degrees was registered and on the 17th, 90 degrees; on the 27th, 42 degrees. There was heavy frost on the 9th and light frost on the 10th. The rainfall was 2.09 inches; in 1905 it was 5.14 inches and the average for thirty-six years is 3.46 inches. There were nine clear days, eight cloudy and fourteen partly cloudy. The average velocity of the wind was fifteen miles per hour, prevailing direction southwest.

Various Notes.

H. N. Bruns sails at the end of June for a visit with his brother at Hamburg and to have a look at the lily of the valley. Mr. Bruns is among the largest importers of valley pips, forcing about a million a year, to say nothing of the large business done in the sale of retarded pips. He says that ever since Easter the demand for cut valley has been excellent and the average price in May exceptionally good for that month. June starts off with more business than he can take care of.

George Reinberg is now nicely installed in his new quarters on the Randolph street side of the Atlas block, where Manager Jos. Foerster is more than pleased with the facilities of the new store, which is four times the size of the old one. The new ice-box is his especial pride. Although the move was only a matter of fifty feet, and in the same building, a different mail carrier serves at the new address, hence the change in street number.

Kruchten & Johnson, the new wholesale firm, opened June 2 at the quarters vacated by Mr. Reinberg. They express themselves as more than pleased with the business to date. At present their stock is principally roses and carnations, but shortly a full line will be carried and they propose to make a bid for the shipping business.

E. C. Amling is congratulating himself that he was especially favored in the matter of quality of supplies for Decoration day. For years he has preached the wisdom of taking good care of the plants through a glut in anticipation of the inevitable reaction. The growers who followed his advice profited by it at Decoration day. Fred Weber's crop of summer Beauties in finest order is coming in handy.

C. M. Dickinson announces that E. H. Hunt has the general western agency for the Sabin plant stand, which has been so favorably received in the east. A small brass model of the stand rests on Mr. Dickinson's desk and was the means of securing a number of nice orders prior to the receipt of the stock.

One of the polling places for Monday's judicial election was in a show house of the George Wittbold Co., on Buckingham place. Louis Wittbold thinks it a good advertisement to have all the voters in the precinct come into the show house and says it is the only advertising he has ever done which did not cost something; in fact, they are paid $15 for it.

Where Odgen avenue branches from West Madison street, Charles Fisk is doing a constantly increasing business. There is scarcely a foot of vacant ground for blocks around, so that he isn't much bothered with spring planting, but there

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

Decoration Day Trade.

We have had two weeks of good business. Decoration day brought a great demand, thought by many to be the largest by far ever done in Columbus. The increase is variously estimated to be from fifty to 100 per cent. There were two flowers that were in greatest demand and divided the honors, carnations and peonies. Both were available in immense quantities, but sold out clean. Indeed, peonies were oversold, several disappointing their customers in not being able to furnish them in sufficient quantities. Stock of all kinds was in good demand and the consequence was that a higher level of prices was maintained over the holiday. The best Enchantress and Lawson carnations were retailed at $1 a dozen, and peonies from 75 cents to $1. I mention these two items to illustrate the good market we had. What helped things, perhaps more than anything else, was the absence of much outdoor stock.

Various Notes.

plants and moonvines, went; and again May 28 much damage was done. It makes trouble for everybody.

Underwood Bros. have been handling very large quantities of Baby Rambler roses.

The Livingston Seed Co. has done a large business this season in bay and box trees for decorative purposes, as well as some choice retinosporas of various sorts. Trade of this sort is developing very fast in this city.

Some of the craft who lost many of their geranium customers, because others sold lower than $1 a dozen, have discovered that 3-inch stock was supplied as against 4-inch, and as a final clincher, the plants were planted without extra charge.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. has its usual large number of wedding decorations booked for June.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has sold out entirely its stock of over 25,000 geraniums, which at one time looked very large to the writer. But good stocky 4-inch geraniums in the best varieties are about like so much money.

Graff Bros. have been handling very large lots of choice peonies. Some days they could not get enough to go around.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market the past week was much firmer. Decoration day trade cut quite a figure this year, as most of the retailers report a big business in cut flowers, designs and plants. The florists who do business near the cemeteries had about all they could handle. Prices on stock went up, but for that day only. First-class stock in all lines is very scarce, but plenty of stock is to be had in the second grades. The few cool nights the past week have mildewed all the rose stock very badly, especially Bride and Maid. American Beauties are in good demand. Extra fancies are not very good in quality, but there are plenty of medium and shorts of better quality.

Carnations are keeping up fine and selling well, but Lawson and white are scarce. Enchantress is plentiful. White is the best seller.

Peonies are about over. Field daisies are coming in. Sweet peas are more plentiful, but very short in stem. Cape jasmines are offered very cheap by the Third street commission men. All kinds of greens are in the market.

A number of orders are booked ahead for this week for weddings and school commencements, some of them very elaborate affairs.

The bedding season is about over and everybody is well satisfied with the plant trade.

Various Notes.

Miss Dora Halstead, daughter of A. S. Halstead, of Belleville, was married on Saturday to C. J. Stovel, of Detroit.

Tom Wilson, one of the oldest florists at Kimmswick, Mo., is reported very sick. Dr. Halstead, of Belleville, who is attending him, says that there is very little hope for his recovery.

Charles Wors and Charles Richards are out picking ferns for the local trade. Wild adiantum and daggers are what they bring in.

Frank and Walter Weber, of H. J. Weber & Sons' nursery, visited the Kirkwood florists last week and found them all in first-class shape.

A. S. Halstead, head of the St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, called last week and reported a very busy plant season.

The first Sunday opening of the year of Shaw's Garden took place June 3. The crowd broke all records for attendance. It was 27,831. The garden is in first-class shape. Prof. Trelease and Irish, and Messrs. McClure and Thompson, and a host of students were on hand to welcome the visitors.

Henry Lohrenz, who runs the Park Floral Co., on Park avenue, reports he did a fine business in plants this season. He says that down in a deep well on Gravious road, near the captain's house, is his hoodoo and he expects to bowl better from now on, and expects to be on the convention team this year.

The local nurserymen are making arrangements to entertain the nurserymen next Monday, when they pass through here on their way to Dallas, Tex., where the annual convention will be held.

Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, in Strassberger's hall. The trustees have something to report that will interest every member of the club. The club's annual picnic for next month will also be put in shape.

The bowling club was again beaten the past week, two out of three games. Those who played were Kuehn, Ellison, Meinhardt, Lohrenz and Schreifer. This week Thursday will be the last match, as the season ends in the league. The bowlers will then practice every Monday night, as usual, and it is hoped all the old-time florist bowlers will again show up.

BOSTON.

The Market.

For a few days after Memorial day a comparatively small amount of stock appeared and prices ruled high. A better supply is now forthcoming and lower quotations prevail. Later Memorial day reports go to emphasize the fact that the business transacted this year far exceeded that of any of its predecessors. All outlying cities from which we have had reports state that everything in the nature of a flower was sold and in many cases orders were refused.

There is a good supply of roses now coming in and values are drooping once more. A very few Beauties reach $15 to $20 per hundred. On other roses $6 to $8 are top prices and many go at $1 to $... Some outdoor Jacqs will appear within a day or two. These will sell well for June weddings. Carnations are not now of good quality, $3 being top price on these, ordinary grades making only half this price. Sweet peas, too, sell well. Gladioli and lilies are both rather scarce. Outdoor valley is about over, but very good forced stock is arriving and makes $2 to $3. Such flowers as stocks, candytuft, German iris, antirrhinum, etc., meet with rather a slow sale. Pæonia officinalis is the only variety seen in any number on the market as yet. These sell well. A few double pink ones appeared this week. Two or three more days will see an abundant supply, however.

There is a good call for green goods, asparagus and smilax being in best demand.

Rhododendron Show.

June 2 was too early for hardy rhododendrons, as the exhibition proved. There will no doubt be a better display of these at the coming peony show. For twelve varieties of unquestioned hardiness, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher gardener, was the only exhibitor. For six varieties, Mrs. A. W. Blake, J. L. Smith, gardener, was first and Geo. F. Fabyan, James Stuart, gardener, second. For twelve varieties hardy azaleas, Mrs. A. W. Blake led, followed by Wm. Whitman, M. Sullivan, gardener, and T. C. Thurlow. For six varieties, Mrs. J. L. Gardner was first and W. Whitman second. The latter took both first and second for a single truss and was also first for thirty-six vases German iris. Mrs. J. L. Gardner was in the lead for thirty bottles pyrethrums, W. Whitman, second. The latter took first for collection of tree peonies, T. C. Thurlow, second.

Mrs. J. L. Gardner had the best collection of cut blooms and foliage of ornamental trees and shrubs, W. H. Heustis, second. Blue Hill Nurseries, as usual, led for thirty bottles of herbaceous plants with a very good lot. J. R. Leeson had the only table of orchids arranged for effect, winning the Appleton silver gilt medal. A new Japanese viburnum from T. C. Thurlow was awarded honorable mention.

In the way of miscellaneous exhibits, J. E. Rothwell, Emil Johansson, gardener, received a first-class certificate for Lælio-cattleya Acis (Lælia tenebrosa x Cattleya Mendelii) and a similar award for Lælio-cattleya Marguerite (Lælia purpurata x Cattleya Mossiæ vestalis). He also showed several other interesting hybrids and a good vase of Phalænopsis amabilis and Rimestadtiana and Odontoglossum crispum. Harvard Botanic Gardens had an extensive collection of hardy herbaceous plants and there were displays by Wm. Whitman, T. C. Thurlow, Mrs. E. N. Gill, N. F. Cowley, C. W. Parker, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, who filled a large table with rhododendrons, and others.

Various Notes.

Welch Bros. are receiving some superb lily of the valley and Kaiserin roses from Carl Jurgens, Newport, R. I. They sold several thousand peonies for Memorial day and could have disposed of many more could they have procured them. They report far the heaviest Memorial day trade in their history.

his plants as being in magnificent condition since the recent soaking rains. He has some remarkably fine new French sorts to exhibit at the coming meeting of the American Peony Society.

Wm. Rosenthal, the proprietor of the Boston Cut Flower Co., on Bromfield street, is around again after a siege of sickness.

E. Sutermeister is at Portland, Me., taking a needed vacation with his son after the Memorial day rush.

Israel Rosnosky, of J. Breck & Sons Co., has entered the employ of the H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia. He has been an active worker in the local Gardeners' and Florists' Club.

Wm. Nicholson reports Memorial day trade at Framingham as ahead of all records. He is proposing taking a European trip, sailing on the S. S. Ivernia on July 10.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club field day on June 19 promises to be more largely attended than any preceding one. President Wheeler expects an attendance of 100 members.

The rose show will be held the week following the peony exhibition, the dates selected being June 22 and 23. Hardy roses have seldom looked more promising than at present.

J. R. Morgan, of Glastonbury, Conn., was calling on a number of our leading florists the past week.

Christ Johansson has leased the Coolidge Bros. greenhouses at South Sudbury for a term of years. He has been manager of the establishment for five years past.

A couple of prize cats in T. F. Galvin's Tremont street store became frightened at some visitors the past week and in their efforts to reach a place of safety destroyed about $50 worth of fancy vases.

Mrs. Foster, of 637 Main street, Worcester, well known in Boston, met with a rather serious automobile accident a week ago, but is progressing favorably.

Lawrence Cotter, who returned a few weeks ago to his old place in Dorchester, is making extensive improvements, rebuilding and rebenching several houses. He will finish planting his rose houses in a few days.

S. J. Goddard is busy glazing his new house. He reports Memorial day trade as 100 per cent better than in 1905. For delivering his many orders he used an up-to-date automobile marked "S. J. Goddard, special delivery."

H. N. Eaton, of South Sudbury, is a busy man these days, rushing out orders of geraniums and coleus, of which he grows many thousands.

Robert Montgomery has completed his new rose house 36x250 and is busy planting it with young stock.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. report that their seed business this year shows a remarkable increase over 1905. They have also largely improved on their former years' sales of nursery stock.

W. W. Rawson & Co. have secured new quarters and hope to move into them on or about July 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fuller sailed on the S. S. Romanic on June 5 for a European trip.

There would appear to be a good opening in this section for any one who would devote a few acres to popular peonies for cutting for market. We have several commercial growers of these who, however, make more of a specialty of selling roots than flowers.

Welch Bros. very kindly offer cold storage facilities for any who may desire to store their peonies for the coming exhibition. There are good cellar accommodations at Horticultural hall for keeping the flowers also.

John Walsh, late manager at the Park street market, reports Memorial day trade at Melrose as splendid, with every flower sold, and many more could have been disposed of had they been obtainable.

Prof. C. S. Sargent entertains the members of the American Medical Association, who hold their convention in Boston this week at his fine estate, Holm Lea, Brookline, on June 6.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Decoration day made good in and around New York. It was one of the busiest memorial occasions in the history of the wholesale cut flower market. The supply of stock was light, the demand general, prices quite satisfactory, and nothing left over. But summer heat and the natural depression that follows a holiday all combined to flood the stores and shake things. On Saturday and on Monday the false bottom fell out and prices started toward the usual standard of the hot season.

Last week, with its commencements and weddings, was inspirational. Everybody was happy. The retailers were all busy. There were contented faces everywhere, but Monday night it was cloudy and there was no snap left in things.

Peonies are coming in great quantities. Before the week is over there will be a flood. Fine stock will bring good prices, but there is a lot that will be unsalable at any price and much of the southern shipments were disposed of only because of scant supply. A good deal of stock was shipped to other cities for Decoration day.

Roses especially felt the strain on Monday and fell in value rapidly. Many were closed out as low as $5 a thousand. Beauties were of poor quality, most of them, and $15 per hundred was top. Carnations maintain their quality, but prices are cut in two.

Cattleya gigas is grand in size and brings better prices than a week ago. One plant exhibited at Orange last Friday evening carried thirty-eight perfect flowers. Lager & Hurrell shipped it to their selling agent, Jas. McManus, Saturday, and it was immediately sold. It will doubtless sell at retail close to $100. Orchids are growing more and more popular for wedding bouquets.

Various Notes.

Next week, Wednesday and Thursday, the Horticultural Society, of New York, holds its summer show at the Museum building, in Bronx park. It is to be hoped a better attendance than that of a month ago may afford encouragement to the managers.

Next Monday evening, June 11, the final meeting of the New York Florists' Club for the summer will be held at its rooms in the Grand opera house. This will be ladies' night and peony night and elaborate preparation is being made. The entertainment committee has several surprises and Prof. Nugent will reveal some practical demonstrations of his culinary skill. The exhibit of cut flowers will be very interesting, several of the large growers of peonies having promised to ship in variety. The attendance should be large. President Kasting is expected and will have a royal welcome.

Brooklyn wholesalers all seem to be doing an excellent business. Mr. Crawbuck, of Hicks & Crawbuck, Inc., reports an excellent supply trade as the result of a business trip just concluded through Jersey, Connecticut and Long Island. Wm. H. Kuebler finds his new store none too large for his increasing business, and Bonnet & Blake have moved to 106 Livingston street, close to their old store, where much better facilities may be enjoyed.

Marshall & Co., on West Twenty-third street, have developed a big retail seed business on this great thoroughfare, and their store now compares in size and convenience with many of the down-town seed stores.

Max Limprecht has had more than his share of misfortunes lately. In addition to the fire, which destroyed his entire stock, he is now laid up at home helpless from locomotor ataxia. His family will continue the business.

The early closing movement among the wholesalers begins to take shape and bids fair to be almost universal.

This has been an abnormal season with the auctioneers. The marts are crowded and buyers pay big prices for many things. But one seldom sees a retail florist. Gardeners come occasionally, but suburbanites are the patrons that have lifted the scheme into life again. Among those who ship stock to the auction rooms I note Dryer, Lorenz, Henderson, Thumann, Daly and Louie Schmutz. Lorenz has sold his property on Long Island to the real estate boomers.

day in Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, apparently by a trolley, but many things indicate a deliberate murder, the body being placed on the track to obliterate evidence of the crime.

Jos. Fasinella, of A. J. Guttman's staff, was married on Sunday to Miss Terangelo, of this city.

C. H. Grant, who was entrusted with the responsibility of opening a flower store at Long Branch for A. Hanig, of Brooklyn, is missing. As he had considerable money when he left the city, foul play has been suggested.

The wonderful Belmont twenty-story hotel has been made a bower by Leikens with great palms, bay trees and gigantic ficus. It is the most complete and interesting hostelry from top to bottom in this country.

Through Broker Hart a contract for a term of years has been made whereby Geo. Cotsonas & Co. come into possession of the fine premises at 50 West Twenty-eighth street, the first and second floors being controlled by the firm. In the upper floor a first-class restaurant will be conducted. The street floor will be used for headquarters for the galax and fern business, and a portion of the floor, it is understood, will be sub-let to one of the wholesale cut flower men who has long been in the market for a Twenty-eighth street location.

Henry Crawbuck, of Brooklyn, proprietor of the supply establishment on Pearl street, is summering at his home in Chatham, N. J., where he has a five-acre place devoted to growing nursery stock. He comes to Brooklyn daily, as usual.

The Cut Flower Exchange reported no pickled stock sent in for Decoration day. Pickling cut flowers, like canned hogs and chickens, has become unpopular. A good sweeping exposure of the names of the picklers would have stopped it years ago. I'll try and send the name of every grower who sends in a pickled rose next Christmas.

Smith's stock of candytuft and stocks on the Exchange floor couldn't be excelled.

Bonnot Bros. did a lot of shipping for the holiday, and the day before, among other stock handled over 6,000 of the Dorrance roses.

Frank Millang reports the best Decoration day business in his long career. Mr. Millang has just purchased a summer home near Lake Mahopac, Westchester county, with eighty acres of fine land, only forty miles from the city, where he is now located with his family.

Moore, Hentz & Nash are proud of the Brides and Maids sent daily by J. T. Wagner, of Chatham, one of their champion growers. Sidney Nash, son of John Nash, of this firm, has been distinguishing himself in aquatic contests.

A. L. Young is located for the summer at Suffrens, N. Y., in Rockland county.

A. M. Henshaw is much pleased with his venture onto the wholesale sea and maintains a reputation for fine roses, many of them from his own greenhouses.

Ford Bros.' big ice-box had a wonderful display of carnations Monday, some 10,000 of them.

Last week I gave a brief description of the new floating palace, the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, in which suites cost from $3,000 down, and said facetiously that "many a florist will make his honeymoon trip on the boat." I meant to include all departments of the trade, and I am sure you will admit I spoke prophetically, for I am advised M. Rice and his bride are due June 15, returning on this steamer from their wedding trip to Europe. As B. Eschner says, "Now will you be good?"

Carrillo & Baldwin, at Secaucus, report a pleasant incident which happened a few days ago. They unpacked an importation of Cattleya labiata and put them out on the benches. They noticed a bird flying about for several days and after a while discovered that a sparrow had taken possession of a clump of roots, making its nest far down in the clump. When found, there were four eggs, and now there are four little birds. Quite a number of orchid men have seen it and say they never heard of such an occurrence.

Bowling.

Flatbush bowlers did some excellent practice work for Dayton last Thursday. Louis Schmutz, the veteran, absorbed the kitty with a score of 212. The scores of two games were:

Schmutz	142	212
Scott	181	118
Reley	145	131
Kemper	127	111
Wocker	128	116
P. Dailledouze	159	137
H. Dailledouze	146	139

Capt. Lang, of New York, won as first prize at the final games of his club in New York last week, against a score of competitors, a 40-dollar emblem, of which he is justly proud.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The consensus of opinion places the Memorial day business above that of any previous year. The bulk of the demand came from points out of town, and called for stock of medium grade. Fancy flowers were not desired except in a few cases. Carnations, peonies, and roses all shared in popularity. It is understood that the large majority of these flowers were used for the purpose for which the day is set apart.

The demand for peonies and for carnations has fallen off since Memorial day, but roses of the better grades are in extremely brisk demand. Kaiserins seem to be off crop. Beauties, Brides and Maids are all eagerly sought for the June weddings and commencements, now taking place. Chief among the latter, Bryn Mawr college, is giving our local retailers a great deal of business. Sweet peas are very plentiful, but their quality is not quite so high as usual at this season; the weather conditions have been most trying. Valley of fine quality is plentiful and in demand. Easter lilies are over. There are a few callas, but they seem to be nearly done.

The Peony Show.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society held its annual peony show in the lecture room of Horticultural hall on Thursday evening and during the day Friday of last week. There were three tables filled with vases of handsome flowers. James W. Paul, Jr., Joseph Hurley, gardener; John W. Pepper, William Robertson, gardener, and Clement A. Griscom, R. D. Barclay, superintendent, were the principal prize winners, all three showing some excellent flowers. The Henry A. Dreer Co. exhibited twenty-eight vases of named varieties. Among them were Asa Gray, light pink; Mons. Paillet, pink; Duchesse de Nemours, white; La Tulipe, white; Golden Harvest, pink and creamy white; Rose d'Amour, light pink; Delachii, red, and M. Forel, soft pink.

Magazine Lane.

It is an old saying that the way to a certain place, much warmer than is pleasant, is paved with good intentions. So Phil in looking in his notebook was horrified to find a promise over a year old that had not been fulfilled. It was the only unkept promise in that notebook, a slight consolation.

Down Twelfth street to the southwestern trolleys, then to Magazine lane, there is a big greenhouse plant of some 60,000 square feet of glass. The first man encountered inside the long shed was the proprietor, John A. Shellem. Everybody knows Mr. Shellem, his freesias, his peonies, his new rose, and his lifelong friendship for Robert Craig. He has four acres of ground and twenty houses on Magazine lane. They feed his store at Seventeenth and Tasker streets and overflow into the big wholesale houses.

He has a new 7,000-gallon water tank, a fine coal vault, fields of peonies, dahlias and hardy roses, a house of the new rose—his rose—William R. Smith, the easiest rose to cultivate imaginable, Mr. Shellem says. All the flowers are used in the store. Then there is a cross between Crimson Rambler and Wichuraiana, a hardy, robust grower with healthy foliage and a soft pink flower. Ten houses are used for a general collection of flowering and foliage plants of the best varieties.

Various Notes.

Edward Reid has just received a very appreciative letter from a customer to whom he shipped a large order of cut flowers. The weather was warm, the distance great, every flower reached its destination in perfect condition; a high tribute to Mr. Reid's careful selection and packing.

John A. Shellem wholesaled 19,400 peonies during the last fortnight of May, pretty close to his prediction of 20,000.

Edward Towill, of Roslyn, is building a new greenhouse 24x150, which will be devoted to American Beauty roses, Richmond, Liberty, Killarney, and—but you will have to ask Mr. Towill what else he is going to grow.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. were closed on the afternoon of Memorial day; a telegram arrived for some supplies, the wire was forwarded to Mr. Berkowitz's house. He went to the store at once, personally selected and packed the goods, and got them off, by express. His customer wrote to say he was much pleased.

The employees of the Robt. Craig Co. enjoyed a half-holiday at Norwood last Saturday afternoon. Norwood is the growing place for the company's greenhouses at Forty-ninth and Market streets. It consists of about sixteen acres. Only a part is yet under cultivation. Crimson Rambler roses in quantity are planted. There is, as yet, no glass at Norwood. A game of baseball was played between teams captained by Fred Schelsky, who superintends the cut flower department, and the treasurer, Robt. A. Craig. The latter's nine was victorious; score, 6 to 4. Possibly the ladies favoring this nine applauded the most heartily. Music and refreshments ended the day.

Decoration Day Trade.

In his address at Congressional cemetery, Hon. Albert F. Dawson, of Iowa, said: "The significance of Memorial day increases with each passing year. It has a deeper meaning today than it had ten years ago, and ten or twenty years hence it will be held in deeper reverence than it is now. Each recurring year brings to the living with greater force the obligations which we owe to those whose memories we honor this day by strewing their graves with the choicest flowers, and as the years go by and our country increases in greatness and power this sense of obligation to those who made this greatness possible will increase and deepen."

To the writer, the foregoing seems to be a most comprehensive statement, and its significance is of importance to the trade. There is an ever increasing demand for good stock for decorative purposes, and dealers should be prepared to meet it. Peonies, roses, carnations, sweet peas and numerous cheaper stocks, were about cleaned up. Peonies seemed to lead, as immense quantities were sold, prices ranging from $1 to $2.50 per dozen. At Arlington National cemetery, I was struck with the profuse use of these flowers, as well as roses and carnations. Though there were a few good specimens of dry work, fresh flowers were the rule.

Various Notes.

Five years ago S. R. Whitney, a G. A. R. veteran of this city, put in practice a happy thought. He had noticed that while soldiers' graves were decorated, the sailors who died for their country seemed to be forgotten. With his own hands, Mr. Whitney built a little boat; on Decoration day he loaded it with flowers and launched it on the bosom of the broad river that sweeps by the national capital on its course to the sea. Every year he repeats the ceremony, President Roosevelt this year sending a fine floral piece as a tribute to the sailor dead.

Continued showers have put the parks, lawns, fields and gardens in fine condition and the dry spell is now but a memory.

The Center Market florists came out strong with Decoration day stock, and had good business. A. B. Garden, Robert Bowdler, the American Rose Co., and other dealers handled fine lots of peonies, roses and carnations. Their Seed Trade News.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at Toledo, O., June 26-28, 1906.

EVERYTHING points to an unusually large attendance at the seed trade convention this month.

THE acreage of radish for seed in the Michigan section is reported slightly larger than last year.

R. R. MCGILL, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, went to Boston June 2, and will spend a fortnight's vacation in New Jersey.

JESSE E. NORTHRUP is vice-president of the board of park commissioners at Minneapolis, his board membership extending to 1909.

TURNIP seed is moving out in good shape and the prospects are that an excellent business will be recorded on this item before the close of the season.

FRANK HOERMANN, Terre Haute, Ind., reports that market garden trade has taken a new lease of life since the recent rains, prior to which planters were pretty well discouraged.

THE universal postal congress at Rome has increased the international letter weight unit from a half ounce to an ounce, making the new rate 5 cents for the first ounce and 3 cents for each additional ounce.

THE Louisville & Nashville railroad is endeavoring to establish cantaloupe growing on a large scale along its Sheffield and Tuscumbia branch in Tennessee. L. H. Lister is in charge and hopes to rival the Rocky Ford district.

GENERAL CONDITIONS.

Peas.

Reports from all sections show a good stand and all conditions favorable.

Beans.

Planting is under way and reports from all the stations show favorable weather and the soil conditions good.

Onion Sets.

LOUISVILLE.—Acreage about equal to last year; stand fair; weather favorable; prospects good for an average crop.

INDIANAPOLIS.—Acreage less than last year; stand poor to middling; prospect for half a crop. Recent rains have improved conditions somewhat and the outlook is better than a week ago.

CHILLICOTHE.—Acreage less than last year; stand good; condition favorable; crop will be below average owing to reduced acreage.

CHICAGO.—Acreage equal to last year; stand variable, excellent in some fields and very poor in others; rain needed in most localities; weeds bad with the smaller growers. Several of the large fields show a poor outlook for even half a crop. On the whole it is thought that if rains and favorable conditions prevail for the remainder of season the crop may average up to last year.

At other centers average stands are reported and average crops expected.

THE SEASON'S BUSINESS.

HENRY F. MICHELL Co., Philadelphia:—Business for 1906 has been very good, considerably ahead of any previous year. The orders already booked for bulbs for autumn delivery are far ahead of last year and the prospects for the rest of the year are very satisfactory.

CURRIE BROS. Co., Milwaukee:—The season's seed trade in this section has not been remarkable in any respect. We consider it a fair average season in point of sales. Crops generally are looking well.

JOHN A. SALZER SEED Co., La Crosse, Wis.:—The main feature of this season's trade as it came to us was the large volume of February, which exceeded any February that we have ever had, and the length of the season. We are certainly much busier today, June 1, than we were last year or the year before.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & Co., Philadelphia:—On the whole the season just closed has been most satisfactory, notwithstanding that several lines of seeds have not moved as well as could have been desired. Our total business, however, has been the largest we ever have had and it was most gratifying to more than make up in April the falling off of our mail order business during March. One of the influences that had the greatest effect on business was the mild weather during January and February, when doubtless other seedsmen like ourselves had the largest influx of orders ever received in these two months.

BARTELDES & Co., Denver:—In Colorado we consider that trade in all lines pertaining to the seed and floral business has increased. We think that growers and dealers have had a better trade than for several seasons previously. The weather has been especially favorable for crops in general.

The nature of our business is such that it varies little from year to year. This season has been fully equal to those of recent years, and, if anything, we think we have noted some improvement.

A. C. Kendel, Cleveland:—It is too early to say just what our total trade for this spring will be, because we are still very busy. The trade in small seeds has been good; that on corn, on account of dry weather which prevented plowing, much below the average; that of perennial plants two-thirds of last year and that of bedding plants very much larger. So far, the total has been satisfactory and if the trade continues two weeks longer we shall consider it excellent.

D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit:—We prefer not to say anything for publication.

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

In looking back on the trade of the past year one cannot help being struck with the number of misfortunes and ups and downs from one cause and another the seed trade has experienced during the last autumn and spring. Floods and excessive rains have ruined many crops in France, and also the latter has been very disastrous to many English seed crops. German crops, especially around Erfurt, have suffered through adverse weather, and also general bad trade has left an unpleasant surplus of some articles, and more particularly of peas and beans. This is amply proven by the ridiculously low clearing-out offers some of the continental houses are making to the trade. The recent troubles in Russia have almost prohibited trade with that country, and their exports in many seed lines have been almost nothing.

The mild winter in Holland caused a very premature growth of some sorts of bulbs, causing the winter covering to have to be taken off entirely in some cases in January, with the result that many fields suffered badly by later frosts, and now the last is the eruption of Vesuvius, which has ruined many crops around the fertile base of the mountain. Generally the elements have been very hard on growers in Europe.

The seed trade in particular is one that the season's crops depend especially on the results of conditions prevailing the year before. Consequently the full force of this last season's bad conditions will be felt next harvest and to some extent into the next, and it is impossible to gauge the effect, but it will probably result in very many articles being short and of low quality, and for best samples high in price during the trade of 1906 and 1907. FRUITDALE, ALA.

J. B. Bridge, of the Buckatunna Nursery, Buckatunna, Miss.; L. H. Read, of the Fruitdale Nursery, of this city, with T. H. Brown and A. B. Brown, of Buckatunna, have made application under the laws of Mississippi for a charter for the Southern Floral Nursery Co., with authorized capital stock of $30,000, to operate nurseries at Fruitdale, Fairhope, Buckatunna and other places. A prospectus has been issued offering the capital stock to the public at par, $10 per share. The main office will be removed to Buckatunna about August 1. It is stated that the plan of branch nurseries, which is not only for the purpose of interesting local capital but as a sort of insurance against drouth, etc., is proving a fine thing and several more will be established in the next year.

The Southern Floral Nursery Co., Fruitdale, recently registered with the secretary of the S. A. F. the names and descriptions of twenty-seven of its seedling cannas, and now supplements this by registering another list of twenty sorts.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Decoration day business was the best ever experienced, but the weather conditions and shortage of stock were about the worst that could have happened. The hot spell of the week prior to Decoration day, followed by cold and cloudy weather, shortened stock to such an extent that calculations on receipts were impossible. Outdoor stock was badly checked and affected by the heavy rain and cold nights, this throwing the entire demand on roses, carnations and other greenhouse stock. This being a day when cheap stock mostly is wanted, it was hardly possible to advance prices above the usual quotations, but the stiff market helped clean up inferior stock at much better figures than what could have been realized had weather been favorable for supply. Therefore the average returns were satisfactory.

Local buyers who always depend on the market, without placing orders, were disappointed, as the advance shipping orders cleaned up the bulk of the supply, and extensive cutting on orders was necessary to help everybody out on outside orders. The sharp advance within a few days, especially on carnations, confronted the retailers with many difficulties, for many of the "10 cents a dozen" signs were conspicuously displayed in some of the down-town establishments up to Saturday, when the price jumped to 50 cents and 75 cents a dozen, which probably had a demoralizing effect on the flower buyers. More uniform prices would be a better rule and more satisfactory all around.

There is still quite a quantity of bedding stock on the market, but mostly stock which was not in bloom when needed. Geraniums were the heavy sellers, although cannas, vincas, pansies and verbenas sold well.

There were practically no jasmine or peonies on the market.

Various Notes.

Fred Ernst has bought the establishment of Hans Bartels, deceased, and will continue the business at the old stand.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. took in sixty cases of palms and araucarias which came in from Belgium. They had a busy week at their greenhouse plant.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. reports a very satisfactory business right along. They had a big May and expect a first-class June. INCOG.

BLUFFTON, IND.

Myers & Co. report their most successful season, sales for Memorial day being fully twenty-five per cent ahead of last year. They were cleaned out of stock, both in cut flowers and plants. They have 16,000 square feet of glass and will make an addition of about 6,000 feet this summer. Three houses each will be lengthened twenty-one feet, and a new house 24x121 will be built for roses. This house will have gutters set six feet from the ground and will be thoroughly modern in every feature of its construction. With this addition, making 22,000 feet of glass, they will be prepared for another increase in business next season and will add a department for general wholesale gardening.

WINNIPEG, MAN.—Herbert W. Hollis, John W. Stuart, Charles A. Allen, Charles W. St. John and Andrew K. Dysart have incorporated under the name of the Rosery Flower Co., Ltd., for the purpose of carrying on the business of florists and nurserymen. The company will have a capital stock of $40,000.

The Market.

The cut flower market has been in a fair condition the past couple of weeks. Decoration day was much ahead of last year, peonies being the best sellers, and carnations a close second. Steamer trade is also reported by the retailers as being on the increase. Commencements have also helped to keep the market in good shape. Roses have been very much affected by the hot weather, many of them arriving open and soft. Carnations continue of very good quality and plenty of them, with fair prices. Peonies have been arriving in large quantities. Some show the effect of the drouth, but the larger portion of them are of good quality and are in much greater demand than last year.

Various Notes.

Wm. J. Johnson is making extensive alterations on the building which he owns at 213 West Madison street.

Wm. H. Porter & Sons have been awarded the contract to erect the Baltimore Florists' Exchange building, at the southwest corner of St. Paul and Franklin streets, which lot was purchased several months ago. The structure is to be two stories high, built of brick, and will be 33x87 feet, the cost to be about $15,000. It is expected to be finished by the first part of October. A. F.

Lenox, Mass.—The annual rose and strawberry show of the Lenox Horticultural Society will be held June 26.

Stevenson, Wash.—W. T. Jackson is no longer in the trade, having engaged in the hotel business.

We find the Review most valuable and appreciate it very much.—Myers & Co., Bluffton, Ind.

PACIFIC COAST.

Seattle, Wash.—Seattle's annual flower show and horticultural exhibit will be held this year on June 20 to 23. The exhibits will be housed in a canvas and wood structure to be put up on the northwest corner of Third avenue and Marion street. From present prospects this will be the banner show given by local garden enthusiasts. More than twenty professional exhibitors have already announced their intention of competing.

RIVERSIDE, CAL.

Gov. George C. Pardee, Prof. E. J. Wickson and Benjamin Ide Wheeler, comprising the commission appointed by the last legislature to locate the southern branch of the California Agricultural Experiment Station and of the pathological laboratory, have made public their decision. Riverside has been awarded the agricultural station, the site being twenty-three acres at the base of Rubidoux heights, adjoining Huntington park, donated by the promoters of the heights.

To Whittier has been awarded the pathological laboratory. The site is one acre of land donated by the Pacific Electric, the Whittier Citrus Association, the Los Nietos Walnut Growers' Association and the Whittier board of trade. The two-story laboratory will be erected there at once at a cost of $7,000. At this station walnut blight will be studied, also the diseases that ravage tomatoes and the rust that attacks asparagus and other vegetable life.

The work of the department will be under the charge of Prof. Ralph E. Smith, who will have Profs. H. J. Ramsay and A. M. West as associates.

Memorial day has come and gone and the few retail dealers who survived the fire had a very fair trade. The greatest increase was with the wholesale dealers, who have been making extraordinary efforts to move their stock, and as a result have had many large shipping orders from interior points and from Oregon and Nevada. It is not the custom with a majority of the wholesale dealers to ship stock otherwise than the varieties they grow, but this season has been an exception and great quantities of mixed flowers have been handled by the rose and carnation growers.

Flowers have not been very plentiful either. The principal cause for this was the fact that during the past six weeks a great many growers have let large portions of their stock dry out completely and only operate a few houses. As a natural consequence for the past week good stock has been scarce and the dealers, many of whom booked large shipping orders, had to scurry around at the last moment to fill them. The first crop of both roses and carnations is finished and in any event good flowers are not plentiful.

Another fact which added to the scarcity of outdoor stock was that we had several heavy rains, commencing May 26, and the sweet peas suffered greatly. As they are the most popular cheap flower at this time and as enormous quantities are shipped to other places during their season, many dealers lost money in handling them. The price rose from 40 cents per dozen bunches on the week previous to Decoration day, and at this time they are scarce at $1 per dozen.

Quite a change has come over the business aspect here. The wholesale dealers have succeeded in establishing a good out-of-town trade and from present indications a great many of them will be able to handle a goodly portion of their output. This shipping has of course been especially active at this time, but from indications a great many permanent customers have been secured by growers who under the usual conditions have refused to bother with out-of-town trade.

With the retailers in Oakland things were normal and quite up to last year's trade at this time. Much of the poorer quality of stock was used by the Italian peddlers, who swarmed the town, especially in the neighborhood of the cemeteries.

In comparison with the prices secured a year ago, I find we have lowered somewhat but there has been a fair demand for everything in the line of roses and carnations. The prospects for business for the near future are not very bright, although in any event we are now in the middle of our quietest month.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June 13-15, 1906.

THE Missouri apple crop promises to be the best in years.

J. H. HALE, South Glastonbury, Conn., was at Chicago May 22 to attend Frank B. White's annual round-up.

THE imports of trees and plants passing through the New York customs house last week were valued at $8,179.

LEON A. DAMOURS, for some years in the nursery business at Springfield, Ill., died at Denver, Colo., May 19, aged 82 years.

THE annual convention of the American Association of Park Superintendents is to be held at Washington, D. C., June 12 to 14.

THE Missouri State Horticultural Society holds its semi-annual meeting at Moberly June 12 to 14. M. J. Wragg is on the program for an address on ornamental trees.

FIREWORKS at a new amusement park dropped sparks into the nursery of W. J. & L. D. Spaulding, Springfield, Ill., and started a fire which consumed stock valued at $2,000.

THE LAKE NURSERIES.

Big nurseries, where things grow under well-directed labor, have been potent factors in the growth and prosperity of Shenandoah, Iowa. The D. S. Lake nurseries have given work to a large force and scores of men have made their start there. When a man could find nothing else to do, he got a spade or hoe and went to Lake's. The story has often been told of the raw Swede who, when asked by an evangelist if he did not want to work for the Lord, said, "Naw, ay tank ye, ay got a yob at Dave Lake's."

The Lake nurseries had many years of struggle before they reached their present standing. They have 500 acres in Shenandoah devoted to the raising of trees, shrubs, flowers, etc., but this isn't all. In New York, Kansas and Colorado, where climate and soil are especially adapted to the growth of certain kinds of plant life, they raise immense quantities of stock. This spring they shipped 150 carloads of stock. They annually import large quantities of stock from France, upon which our own choicer fruits are grafted. Nurserymen have found that the French people, because of peculiar climate and soil or better culture, can produce healthier and stronger stock, in certain lines. The Lakes turn out 2,000,000 grafts and 5,000,000 seedlings every year. They employ 100 to 200 hands and the annual turn-over reaches at least $125,000 to $150,000.

The firm is composed of the father and two sons, all of the same large mould. The sons are competent to step into the shoes of the father, and their sons will follow them, and so the big nursery, like Tennyson's brook, goes on forever. When a man has established a business that perpetuates itself, descending from sire to son, he may be said to have reached the zenith of success. This seems to be the destiny of the Lake nurseries. A. F. Lake is the general field manager. He can show six immense packing-houses on the hill and a still larger one in the forks of the railroads, the Wabash and Burlington, and can point to acres and acres of young trees, shrubs, flowers and vines.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

May finished up in fine style; everyone busy along all lines. Plantsmen were in their glory. Anything with a flower on it was salable at a good price. Among the wholesale cut flower men things were moving rapidly. It was the biggest Decoration day on record and, if it keeps on increasing, this occasion will soon be as important as Easter. The only trouble was a scarcity of stock; carnations and roses were much short of the demand. Peonies arrived in quantities and helped out, but some of the wholesalers called it an unsatisfactory business because there was not enough stock to take proper care of all orders and some had to be refused entirely. The retailers had all they could do and some worked all night May 29. All report it ahead of any other year.

Roses and carnations are showing the effects of the sun, many Lawsons being badly burned. Quite a number of roses are showing mildew and the question among the dealers is as to what causes it. Many of them say carelessness. Are they right? Can it be possible that a man would neglect his stock for a few nights at the expense of several hundred dollars, as there is always sale for all the good roses during the first two or three weeks of June?

Frost gave some of the gardeners a scare May 25 and in some places tomato plants were caught. Hoo-Hoo.

Your paper is invaluable for both the seedsman and florist; we like it and here is a dollar for another year of it. —Jos. A. Schindler & Co., New Orleans, La.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

We had fine weather for Decoration day and also a fine trade. All report a general clean up of cut stock. The majority had sold out by 11 o'clock. The crowds going to the cemeteries were larger than usual and the decorations more general, all of which tends to make good business for the florists. The cooler weather during the few days prior to May 30 shortened the supply of flowers in all lines and made prices satisfactory all around.

Various Notes.

Mr. Pettit, of Long Island, is to embark in business here. He will commence building at once and be ready for the fall trade.

The different city parks look better than usual, and that is saying a great deal. H. Tall, the city florist, and his corps of assistants, are to be congratulated on the results of their efforts.

Herman Junge, of the Smith & Young Co., is the cement expert. What he doesn't know about cement isn't worth trying to find out. He is now putting in cement benches that will never wear out and cannot be broken. S.

Savanna, Ill.—J. Y. Lambert says that Memorial day business exceeded expectations, although bad weather for two days preceding hurt plant sales. The rush for cut flowers brought the total sales about twenty per cent above last year.

Ionia, Mich.—Memorial day trade far exceeded that of former years. Everything was cleaned out. M. Wetterling and D. L. Vincent did not have enough to go around. The former had some beautiful Crimson Ramblers and spiræas just out that sold at sight. His pansy trade was phenomenal.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

Weather conditions are becoming more favorable and plants are showing the effects. In my nine months' experience in Texas I have learned several things, among them being that the method of growing in the north must be reversed here. The sun shining more than in the north, the east and west plan of building will not answer so well. During the winter the mercury would register 70 degrees and in a few hours would drop to 30 degrees. I find that too close watch cannot be kept, and that one must be alive to these changes and act quickly.

Mums are being planted on the benches this week, and stock is in fine shape.

I have an idea that solid beds would grow better carnations than raised benches, as the solid beds would have a tendency to keep the roots cool, whereas the benches soon dry out.

Asters are coming in bloom and sweet peas are a sight. Herbaceous stock is giving promise of fulfilling the faith placed in it.

Landscape work is showing an upward tendency and several large contracts have been placed for next winter and spring.

Great interest is being taken in the nurserymen's convention at Dallas and a vast amount of good will be done.

Things in Dallas change so quickly that it bewilders one. I understand that the Dallas Bazaar has changed hands and is now controlled by the Dallas Floral Co. Also that Col. Green has been buying up some of the other plants. Fine progress is being made on the plant of Col. Green, several houses being almost completed. Large quantities of stock are being bought and no effort is being spared to make it the finest plant in the south. NARCISSUS.

CALUMET, MICH.—This is one of the localities where bedding begins late, and at the Lutey Greenhouses the rush is just beginning. Trade has all season been heavier than ever before, and Mr. Jensen, who has charge of the plant, has a large stock, but it looks as if it will all go out at good prices.

WE couldn't get along without the REVIEW.—E. A. Humfeld, Kansas City, Mo.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Business the past week has been fine; in fact, it was not a question of getting orders, but a question of how the orders could be filled. From reports of all the dealers Decoration day trade was the largest that the florists ever had. The weather was fine and everybody wanted something in the flower line. Cut flowers were scarce, and all kinds of substitutions were made in order to give something to each one. Cape jasmines come in handy and many an order that called for carnations was filled with capes. Roses were held at a premium. The heavy rains spoiled about everything growing outdoors. Complaints from out-of-town customers will no doubt be general. The city trade knows the exact conditions, but the country trade expects what is ordered and it will be a hard matter to explain the situation to them in a satisfactory manner. That prices were good goes without saying.

St. Paul.

L. L. May & Co. report the heaviest trade they have had in years. They say it has never failed, that they receive large funeral orders at just such busy times.

The Swanson Floral Co. says business was fine and they sold about everything in stock.

Holm & Olson report an exceptionally heavy demand for bedding plants.

Otto Hiersekorn did a nice trade and is glad the rush is over.

Krinke & Son sold everything they had and say they could have sold twice as much.

Minneapolis.

Carl Johannsen, manager for the Powers Mercantile Co., reports the largest business they have ever had. In addition to the Decoration day trade, he says the demand for flowers for graduating exercises was unusually heavy.

Whitted is well satisfied with the increase of business in the new store. Miss Whitted will leave for an eastern trip within the next few weeks.

James Soudan, with Wm. Donaldson & Co., says it was the best trade they have had, as they sold everything and could have used more stock. FELIX.

A. F. J. BAUR. F. S. SMITH.

POPULAR MARKET PLANTS.

In verbenas, Miss Wilmott is selling fairly well, but does not make such good prices as it did early last season, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser. It has been too plentiful, but it is a color that will always command some attention. Scarlet King sold fairly well when it first came out, but we have too many other good scarlet flowers; and the beautiful white variety recently shown may be well worthy of attention, but as a market plant it is doubtful if it will prove of great value while we have so many good white flowers.

White marguerites have sustained a wonderful reputation, and since growers have kept off the maggot, that was at one time so troublesome, they have sold better than ever. Just now we have two classes of these; there are those suitable for window-boxes or planting, and others, well flowered, used for decorations. Good yellow marguerites are always scarce until late in the season, but we are already getting Chrysanthemum segetum, both the single and double forms. These, however, are too soft to be much appreciated, and they do not seem to sell so well as usual this season, though for some purposes they are very useful. If anyone could find a really good yellow-flowering plant that would stand well, there would be money in it. When Jasminum primulinum was shown some time ago many were much taken with it, and no doubt if it would come in at the right time, and last fairly well, it would be sure to sell.

I find market growers are always on the lookout for good things, yet it is surprising how few novelties we get that will take the place of the old favorites.

YORK, NEB.—C. S. Harrison reports a very large sale on peonies for Decoration day.

BLANCHESTER, O.—Henry W. Oliver has had a very satisfactory spring season and is figuring on adding two more houses this summer.

FORT WORTH, TEX.—J. A. Anderson has bought an interest with W. L. McCart, the firm name being McCart & Anderson. They are preparing to build ten new houses, each 20x100, five on each side of a packing shed 12x100.

BUFFALO.

State of Business.

Memorial day has once more passed, and never were we blessed with more perfect weather for the veterans to march, and the florists to hand out their 4-inch geraniums or bunches of flowers. Stock was in good supply to meet a big demand. Carnations, both in quantity and quality, were abundant. We don't look for many costly pieces or designs but almost all who own lots in our cemeteries find their way there on May 30 and, instead of the day declining in popularity, its observance is growing more and more general each year, and with all classes. So the volume of business is large.

D. Newlands & Son, Wm. Legg and the Wm. Scott Co. do the most of the Forest Lawn business. Collins & Forbach have the lion's share of the Pine Hill cemeteries and Mr. Avery has things his own way at the Limestone Ridge district.

Buffalo has lost several of her prominent citizens this past week, which has made a good demand for funeral flowers of the better class. Among those who have passed away is ex-Congressman Daniel N. Lockwood, who nominated Grover Cleveland for mayor of our city, then for governor of New York State, and lastly for president of the United States at the Chicago convention.

ORANGE, N. J.

Harry O. May addressed the New Jersey Floricultural Society upon roses and rose growers at the monthly meeting June 1, making a strong appeal for the American Rose Society. Later in the evening, upon motion of Mr. May, seconded by Jos. A. Manda, the secretary was instructed to address T. C. Platt, of the U. S. Express Co., expressing the disapproval of the society at the exorbitant and oppressive transportation rates just made by that company to shippers of flowers.

The floral display was large and numerous and included fine orchids from the houses of Lager & Hurrell and Julius Roehrs Co. A Cattleya gigas of perfect form and flowers from Lager & Hurrell received 99 points at the hands of the judges, while the interesting collection of Cattleya Mossiæ of Julius Roehrs received the society's first certificate.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The greenhouse establishment for almost a quarter of a century conducted by Carl Rosien has been purchased by Sokol Bros., who intend to remodel the place and grow for the wholesale and retail trade. These young men are Bohemian born and have been brought up in the florists' trade in their native land. They have both traveled considerably in Germany, France, Holland and England. Since coming to this country they have been employed in several prominent places of the east and have all the qualifications necessary for making a success of their undertaking.

POT MAKERS FOR 140 YEARS

A. H. HEWS & CO. INC.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

FLORIST WARE OF EVERY KIND

BANGOR, ME.

May 29 for the first time in five days did we get a glimpse of the sun. We had almost forgotten there is such a sport. Up here we are not safe from frost until June 10. May 29, at noon, the thermometer registered 48 degrees. All the carnations are out in the fields and the sweet peas are just peeping above the ground.

The Memorial day trade was up to expectations. Anything with a flower demanded a good price.

Next week A. Sekenger will have a big force of men getting the rose houses ready and part of the carnations will be planted in the houses instead of in the field. With the addition built last year Mr. Sekenger has by far the largest place in the state, and he will build more this summer. S. J. Stewart also contemplates making improvements this summer.

Frank P. Lane has rented the Morrill greenhouse in Brewer.

John Martin, Jr., advertised a plant free with every 50-cent order and had to make two deliveries.

ROCHESTER.

While the season is really over, quite a number of bedding plants are being sold. This has been a banner year for the plantsmen, and the cut flower contingent has had more than a generous look in. Decoration day for the latter proved a bonanza. An abundance of stock was moved and good quality brought corresponding figures. In the evening there was practically nothing left in the cut flower line, and the florists were joyful. Cannas and vincas are very scarce and are good property at the present writing. Taking all in all, everything has turned out eminently satisfactory for all concerned in the growing of plants. F. S. P.

"GOOD ENOUGH"

is one kind of argument but better still is a still better one. There are a lot of florists hanging on to old forms and ways of greenhouse construction because they are "good enough." We are looking after the florist who wants the top notch of efficiency in greenhouse construction, at a price right for the right thing.

YOU CAN'T GET ALONG

The worm on this gear is machine cut. It's the easiest working, longest lived gear made without ventilating your greenhouse, so what's the use of "getting along" with a clap-trap affair of an apparatus to operate your sash, when we make a thoroughly practicable machine that does the work in a thoroughly satisfactory way? It's never out of order and makes you feel comfortable every time you work it.

It's an apparatus that doesn't work you, every time you work it. Besides, it doesn't cost any more than a lot of springs and levers, and does a lot more—a lot better. Catalog L-V.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A MODEL FLOWER STORE.

The Muir Establishment, Chicago.

To the man brought up in the business the first glance serves to reveal the fact if a room was originally intended for a flower store, or for some general purpose. No reasonable expenditure will refit a store intended for ordinary uses and make it pass for one built by a florist for his own purposes. There is the same difference that is found in ready-to-wear coats, after alteration, if compared with the work of a good tailor. If clothes make the man, as we are often told, the store goes a long way toward shaping the character of the business done in it. The subtle influence of environment is felt by all concerned, from proprietor to customer.

The trouble with remodeling an old store, or fitting up a new one, for a florist's use is that you usually can do little more than move in some fixtures and hang out a sign; you seldom have the right kind of a room to begin with, and you cannot get away from the impression that an equal expenditure would have made, perhaps, a much better looking drug store than it did flower shop.

It was some such considerations as these that influenced John T. Muir, when he set about looking for a permanent location, to determine to begin fitting up his store by digging a hole in the ground; in other words, he figured that to get what he wanted, he'd have to build; he couldn't buy it ready made, or get it through remodeling. Being offered a good "deal" on a piece of vacant property, at Forty-seventh street and Grand boulevard, which is in one of the best residence neighborhoods in Chicago, Mr. Muir put up a building in which is a flower store which will serve as a model for other builders; indeed, it has been visited by many whose purpose it was to gather ideas as to the arrangement of an up-to-date flower store.

The Muir Building.

The building is known as the Kenwood bank building, from the fact that Mr. Muir leased the corner room to the financial institution of that name. The building is two stories high, designed in the later Italian style, with twelve stores in all, the upper floors being devoted to suites of offices of the better class. The building is well finished throughout and only tenants of the best class were admitted, but it is in the north store, on the boulevard side, that our trade interest centers, for this is the room reserved by Mr. Muir for his own use.

Peabody & Beauley were the architects and are to be credited with excellent work, but of course the special conveniences which make the place the best appointed flower store in the west were of Mr. Muir's own suggestion, and, indeed, he designed a good part of the fixtures.

The Flower Store.

The flower store is 30x60, divided by a cross partition so that the salesroom is 30x35. The general features of the room are shown excellently in one of the accompanying illustrations. The display cases on each side are let into the walls. The wide, deep, cool room for stock is flush with the rear wall of the room, standing in the center of the building where access may be had with equal facility from the salesroom or from the workroom. The glass in the doors and all the fixture cases is beveled plate leaded in as small diamond-shaped panes. The beams of the ceiling are reflected in Verd antique in the chip mosaic floor. The deep windows are white tiled, raised only a few inches. Between them is the entrance, with inner and outer doors to prevent strong winds doing damage, narrower than most builders would use.

There are no "counters" in the store; all the fixtures not built into the wall are movable. The tables are solid mahogany, marble topped, with shelves beneath of heavy plate glass capable of sustaining considerable weight, and here is displayed a large line of vases of varying material, including a quantity of the famous Syderol ware from Bohemia. Mr. Muir finds it possible to do quite a trade in these goods at a satisfactory profit; besides, they add much to the attractiveness of the store. The display tables being of varying shapes and sizes, permit of frequent rearrangement of the store. The lighting is from covered incandescents in the ceiling.

At the left, as shown in the view from the street, the entrance being in the center of the picture of the interior of the store, is a conservatory, without which any retail florist suffers more or less handicap, according to the character of the business he undertakes to do. In this case the conservatory is 25x52 feet, set back eight feet from the building line and one of the most attractive architectural features of the place. The house ordinarily shelters the large palms needed for decorations, much of this class of work being done, but at Christmas and Easter it is invaluable for handling the business in flowering plants.

The Workrooms.

At the right at the rear of the salesroom is the office, a handsomely furnished room in which the accounts are handled, with wide mahogany roll-top desk for the proprietor, a big safe, filing cases and a brass railing behind which sits the cashier. A rear door leads to the room where orders are put up. At the left of the office is the cut flower case, which is iced from the rear, and then comes the telephone room for customers. Most of the store talk is done on a phone in the office. Between the telephone room and the cut flower case is a passage to the workroom, from which access is had to the lavatories.

The workroom, as shown in the picture, is about the handiest place possible to imagine. There are four entrances, from the area in the rear, from the conservatory, from the store and from the office. Numerous windows afford good light.

In the middle of the room is the zinc-covered table, with drawers beneath for wire, thread, tinfoil, toothpicks, etc., a handy place for everything, and everything in its place. On a low shelf under the table are made-up boxes ready for use. The stock of boxes is in the cabinet at the left, with the crepe paper, Porto Rican matting and similar articles. Another cabinet holds vases. Near the door to the flower case is an iron pan for hardy cut ferns. The order clips, twine, tags, wrapping paper, etc., are shown in the picture. The sphagnum moss, wire frames and similar articles are in the basement, 30x60, cool enough to serve for storage of cut flowers and often used for holding back lilies, etc. A sink at the rear of the workroom affords a convenient place to procure and dispose of water. Counters supply places for packages prepared for delivery. Not an unnecessary step need be taken.

Perfect order and absolute cleanliness are the rules. There is nothing extravagant, but it is hard to see how another dollar might have been expended and a hundred cents' worth realized. A neat gold sign over the door has been added since the photograph was taken, as it seemed to be the one omission.

Neat window displays always are the rule. A May window was composed of a high bank of marguerites in pots, at the base of which was a slope of Boston ferns interspersed with a few S. A. Nutt geraniums, the bright trusses of which were very effective among the green. Mr. Muir says it was really surprising how many marguerites were sold as the result of that inexpensive window display, the plants being of his own growing.

John T. Muir.

A Bit of History.

The Muir establishment is the second oldest in Chicago, the business having been founded in 1865, by Samuel Muir, himself the son of a Scotch gardener. The first location was at Thirty-third street and South Park avenue, then called Kankakee avenue. Greenhouses and a residence occupied this site, then well outside the city, and here John T. Muir was born, March 26, 1869. In the early days, Samuel Muir had a retail store at 121 Lake street, being burned out in the big fire of 1871. The store was re-established on Congress street, between Michigan and Wabash, where the Auditorium now stands, the Inter Ocean building then occupying the corner of Wabash and Congress. This stand also was destroyed by fire. The next location was on Wabash, but subsequently the store was removed to 2205 Michigan. In the meantime the South Park avenue property had been sold and the greenhouses located at Fifty-fifth and Center. The store at 2205 Michigan was sold to J. T. Anthony, who conducted it a number of years in connection with greenhouses at Thirty-fourth and Prairie.

It was in 1883 that Samuel Muir located at 3530 Michigan avenue, within a few blocks of his first stand. Here he continued until the day of his death, January 12, 1895. In the fololwing year the son, John T., took charge of the estate. The old place on Michigan avenue is still operated, and is doing a steadily icreasing trade in spite of the natural withdarwal of patronage by those living nearer the new and more attractive store. It is a circumstance which speaks well for the general prosperity of the retail trade in Chicago.

It is worthy of note that every move of the Muirs, who have until now occupied leased stores, was in a southerly direction in direct line with the growth of that section of the city, which now stretches miles beyond the new location, of itself nearly two miles south of the site on the outskirts chosen forty years ago. The greenhouses have never been used for the extensive production of cut flowers, but rather for bedding stock and other plants for retail sales. There was a time when Muir sold 4-inch geraniums at $2.50 and even $3 a dozen, and it didn't cost as much then as now to grow them, but nowadays so many more are sold that at less than half the price the profits amount to a greater sum. Mr. Muir is devoting his whole energies to the business and finds it a considerable task to conduct both places. He figures on eventually taking one of the offers he frequently receives for the old store and greenhouses, and concentrating his business at Forty-seventh street, where there is, or might easily be made, all that a man need ask for in the retail florists' line.

SPRINKLING CUT FLOWERS.

Is it best to sprinkle flowers for shipping, or funeral designs, with water before leaving the store? Or is it a wiser plan to omit it? G. F. C.

This question cannot be answered too dogmatically. It is a matter of experience and judgment. For instance, if your design contained camellias, gardenias, or orchids it would be unwise to sprinkle them, especially heavily. Neither do carnations or sweet peas relish a sprinkling. Roses are refreshed and receive no harm by a liberal sprinkling. Maidenhair fern, with which all designs are finished off, is also kept fresh by moisture, so it is evident that while some flowers are unharmed and kept fresh with a slight sprinkling, others when cut will spot and disfigure with careless sprinkling. There seems to be a marvelous difference in the handling of flowers when deprived of life and when growing, sustained by the vital force.

Perhaps the proper answer to this question is that the application of water to flowers, either in a box for shipping or arranged in a design, is to create a mist-like moisture surrounding the flowers. If you have created a moist atmosphere it is about all the flowers can absorb and drops of water on the petals are more than they can absorb. So apply your artificial mist or dew as fine as possible. Try and create a surrounding moisture without leaving drops of water.

There are other ways of packing designs besides sprinkling. See that the sphagnum moss is thoroughly moist and there will for hours be evaporation of moisture even if the stem or base of the flower does not touch the damp moss.

ORIGIN OF PURITY FREESIA.

Rudolph Fischer, Great Neck, L. I., furnishes the following account of the origin of Freesia Purity:

"Freesia Purity is a seedling produced by hybridization. I got it in the following manner: When I started in business about fifteen years ago I received from my former employer several thousand freesia bulbs for planting on my own place. These bulbs were an unusually good strain of the original F. refracta alba. My employer got from Europe a lot of very small bulbs, early in the eighties, before the variety was introduced in this country. He multiplied his stock from these, without buying any more from any outside source, and in this way he kept his stock pure. When I grew them, I started to hybridize between the best, and produced a number of good ones, which were ahead of the general run. These I hybridized again, and among the latter seedlings was Purity. It showed its superiority so prominently that after another year I separated them and grew them by themselves."

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

May flowering tulips, especially Darwins and cottage varieties, are rapidly increasing in favor each year. These tulips are found to grow and thrive year after year in England in almost any ordinary light garden soil, and it has become quite the thing for leading nurserymen and seedsmen to have a full representative collection. Barr & Sons have probably the finest lot in Europe, but there are other magnificent collections, some of the best being those of Hogg & Robertson, Dublin; W. T. Ware, Bath; W. B. Hartland, Cork; A. Dickson, Belfast, and others. At the Royal Horticultural Society's show May 16 no fewer than fifteen firms exhibited trade collections. The May section is particularly useful, either for cutting or bedding, there being little else in bloom at the same time. Some of the Darwins especially are extraordinarily fine in form and deep in coloring. In Lincolnshire some sorts are grown by the acre for market purposes. The sorts grown are Bouton D'Or, a rather small yellow; Retroflexa, a beautiful clear sulphury yellow with ends of the petals turning back; Picotee, a white with red edge; Gesneriana, a purple with black center. These are the sorts used in immense quantities for market, the others being too expensive, although such sorts as Mrs. Moon, yellow; Hobbema, pink; Mark Groff and Admiral Constantinople, both yellow and red variegated, and Gesneriana lutea will soon be sufficiently plentiful to be grown in quantity.

I recently came across a large house containing some thousands of the comparatively new Calla Elliottiana. I hardly thought there was such a large stock in England. They were in full bloom, and the bright yellow gave an unusually fine effect, the spotted leaves showing up well. The grower informed me that they are quite easily propagated and grown from seed and quickly reach a flowering size, the blooms fertilizing themselves naturally; in fact, he said that if the pollen is touched or even the bloom shaken, so as to unnaturally disturb the pollen, it results in a much less percentage of good seed than if the blooms are left alone. The seed is sown in a little bottom heat, and with quite ordinary treatment, ninety-eight per cent will germinate. The yellow blooms realize a fancy price compared with the old white variety.

At the Brussels meeting, in the State Botanic Gardens, thirty 4-inch pots of chrysanthemums were shown, each plant with one large bloom on a single stem, the variety being Mme. Mees. The blooms were fully equal to any seen in autumn and were a decided novelty. We shall soon have mums on the market all the year round.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Stock Requiring Pot Culture.

There are a few important commercial plants that do not lift at all well in the fall; neither do they propagate by cuttings taken from plants in the open ground. The lemon verbena (aloysia) and the lantana are two of these. Give them a small shift and plunge outdoors; then after a few months' rest in the houses during winter they give you the right sort of cuttings.

Fuchsias.

The fuchsias also belong to plants that want this treatment. If you have not already selected a few plants of all varieties that are desirable, you should do so at once and grow them under glass or outside in the shade and produce as large plants as you can, plants that have good strong wood. By August they should be placed where they will get the full sun, so that the wood will ripen. Before hard frost store them beneath a bench, with little water for a month or more, and then after the unripened ends of the shoots are cut back and they are started growing again you will get cuttings that will make vigorous plants.

The principal thing is to select a few of your strongest plants at once. The same old plants that you treated this way last spring will do service as stock plants for several years.

Heliotrope is another plant that neither lifts well nor gives you cuttings in the fall, and a few plants should be carried over in pots. When cut back in midwinter they will give you plenty of cuttings.

Poinsettias.

Poinsettias that were started growing about May 1 will now have sent out plenty of young growths, which root readily, but if you do not want as early plants as these cuttings would make, then cut them off one or two eyes above the old wood and they will break and give you two or three cuttings instead of one. Poinsettias root at any time from spring until fall, provided they are not allowed to wilt from sun or neglect of water. They must be shaded in all bright hours and faithfully kept wet in the propagating sand. In very hot or bright weather, once a day may not be enough. Water the sand copiously twice a day. Don't be afraid.

Another critical time with the poinsettias is just after potting off from the propagating bed. For the first two weeks there must be no neglect. Be as careful with shading and watering as you were while the cuttings were in the sand. After once making roots in the pots they endure the brightest sun and must have it.

The Rambler Roses.

Crimson Rambler and other ramblers want watchful care just now. That is, those grown in pots under glass during summer, the method I still believe the best to make plants well flowered from pot to summit of growth. We often get our hottest weather at the end of June and if the tender and unripened shoots of these roses are neglected for water, mildew will set in, which much weakens the growth and the strength of the eyes, which will now be forming. From these eyes come the trusses of bloom that you are looking forward to next spring.

Copious waterings and daily heavy syringings must be given the rambler roses. By the end of August they will have made all the growth desirable and can then be stood outdoors to ripen their wood. You then have canes and eyes that are bound to give you a truss of bloom at every eye.

Mildew.

Many may think that mildew is produced only by a draught of cold air or sudden change of temperature. Other causes account for it. Any condition that causes a check to the vitality of the plant will account for the appearance of mildew, and surely a severe drying at the root and consequent loss of sap in stem and leaf lays the plant open to the attacks of this minute fungus. The plant's resistant powers are gone and the spores of the fungus find congenial conditions for work.

An illustration of this may be noticed in the attempt to grow the European gooseberry, such a delicious fruit in temperate and northern Europe, especially in the north of England and Scotland. In North America they are attacked by mildew. Cold days of spring are not responsible, but rather the tropical days of June.

Cyclamen.

An important plant that is often neglected at this busy season is the beautiful cyclamen. These plants now are mostly in 2½-inch pots and the strongest in 3-inch pots, growing fast and easily hurt by neglect. They will now be ready to go into 4-inch pots and into quarters where they will spend the next four months. They are, I think safest in a small house facing south, with the bench well elevated near the glass, and above all the pots surrounded by tobacco stems. If this is done there will be little need of fumigation. The house should have an abundance of ventilation.

I am aware that some experts on this pretty plant use mild hotbeds for the sake of bottom heat, while still others employ cold frames. This is all right where the firm makes a specialty of this plant, but there is a risk of neglect where things are not continually under your eye and that is why I recommend the small house for the small grower.

Cyclamens like abundance of light, yet the full blaze of a July sun is too exhausting for them and exposed to it they become stunted and crippled, so no trouble should be spared to shade them during the hot, bright hours of the day, giving the fullest light in the morning and after 4 p. m.

An Easter Basket by Muir, Chicago.

The Workroom of the Muir Store, Chicago.

If the soil is porous and drained, which it should be, the cyclamens like a good deal of water. A severe drying out is ruin to them, and on all bright mornings a light syringing is of the greatest benefit.

Attention Not Trouble.

Speaking of trouble, no real gardener or plantsman will think any amount of attention to his plants any trouble and you will never grow anything to perfection unless your heart is in your charge. You will anticipate the needs of your plants as the faithful doctor does those of his patients. Our business, especially the growing part of it, is not as lucrative as manufacturing sausage or head cheese, but it is working close to our Creator's work and brings us closer to the spiritual and unknown than making motor cars or destroying life. Animal life it may be called, but it is life, and perhaps it has a soul as well as we.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

IT IS TO LAUGH.

The Philosophy of Gardening.

These hints from the New York Sun are intended primarily for the amateur suburbanite, but the practical grower may find herein much that will amuse if not instruct him:

Preliminary Discussion.—Every commuter's garden should receive a proper amount of preliminary discussion, beginning at full moon and continuing as long as thought desirable.

"Well, I'm thinking of planting my garden," is a favorite introduction; or, "I'm tired of eating canned spinach. Did I ever tell you of the spinach I grew last year—three feet high and hard boiled eggs all over the top of it?"

Another accepted method is for the commuter to sit in the smoker and look thoughtful and preoccupied until someone asks him the subject of his thoughts.

"Why," replies the thoughtful commuter, with a pretty candor, "I was just considering my garden." And preliminary discussion then ensues.

Tools and Accessories.—No self-respecting commuter will dig his garden unless he simultaneously smokes a cigar. This gives him his rightful appearance of dignity as a landowner. A box of good cigars is therefore the first essential accessory. Next in importance comes a large pot of cold cream for blistered hands and a set of surgical instruments for straightening the spine. Other necessary instruments are mentioned below.

Breaking the Sod.—To break the sod it is advisable to have a pickax, a cold chisel, a warm chisel, a crowbar, a sledge hammer, a rock drill and a case of blasting powder. Drill a hole, insert the powder, stand in a safe place behind the barn and erupt to suit. The alternative is to hire a man, but he must be watched closely or he will succumb to exhaustion brought on by hard work.

Harrowing.—The remarks of the neighbors who have no gardens will generally be found to be very harrowing.

Planting and Cultivating.—We now come to the important heading of planting and cultivating. To plant, dig a hole, place a seed in the bottom of that hole, sprinkle a few cinders on top and fill the hole with gravel. This makes the plants hardy. Such is the general rule. Modifications follow.

String Beans.—These should be carefully strung by hand and the string securely knotted to prevent migratory tendencies which otherwise might be provoking. The ends of the string should be loosely looped in a draw knot, the object, of course, being to catch the neighbor's hen by the leg. Chicken and string go well together, but the chickens are not to be gathered in until after dusk and an old coat should also be thrown over its head as a further precautionary measure, and to prevent its alarming the neighborhood.

Cabbages.—The trunks of the trees should be whitewashed to make them look nice and the fruit should be carefully plucked by hand. Throwing a piece of wood into the tree or jabbing at the cabbages with a long clothes-pole cannot be too severely discountenanced. Shaking the tree is also unprofessional. Neither should the corned beef be forced.

Scarlet Runners.—These are too nimble for general purposes and are kept to frighten children by suddenly running after them. This is also injurious to the plants themselves. Scarlet runners should, therefore, be securely surrounded by a tight fence and only allowed to walk at a gentle gait in the cool of the evening. This is for exercise.

Stones and Rocks.—It is unnecessary to plant these, as they grow fortuitously overnight. They are of hardy growth and multiply rapidly, sometimes attaining a weight of several hundred pounds. Flourish in any soil, but on account of popular prejudice they do not seem to be much esteemed as a table delicacy.

Beets.—These always grow in profuse crops, but should be sparingly cultivated. Cold water thrown upon them is generally recommended. Dead beets should be hit over the head with the flat of a shovel and sugar beets should be treated with a pinch of salt.

Mushrooms.—The cultivation of mushrooms is a profitable enterprise on account of the high price and ready market. Shrubbery should be frequently sprayed while in flower and the buds carefully protected against frost. When plucked each cluster of fruit should be placed upon a mushroom leaf. This preserves the flavor and adds to their appearance. The pits and seeds should be removed before shipping.

Gas Plants.—Gas plants are a profitable stock, but any possible surplus of water should be avoided.

General Conversation.—This is one of the most pleasurable points in growing a garden, but caution must be exercised. A husbandman should never start off by telling the size of his product. "How large are your cucumbers?" he should cautiously ask his neighbor. "Eighteen inches long," is the reply. Whereupon the first speaker can derive honor and incite envy by claiming a net cucumberial length of two feet. Whereas, if he had led off with the assertion that his cucumbers were two feet long, his neighbor would have claimed a length of thirty inches and the first man would have looked distrait and foolish.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon this point.

PLANTING YOUNG STOCK.

Those who are not already well along with their planting should lose no time with this work. Year after year we find the progressive growers favoring earlier planting, realizing the fact that the early planted stock is the most remunerative, producing more blooms per plant during the season, which are also of a higher grade than those from stock planted later.

That this is true easily can be learned by keeping records of the cuts and sales from the early and late planted houses and comparing these records at the end of the season. This is especially true of Beauty, which it seems necessary to have in vigorous condition with a large development of roots before the short days come.

Requiring a large amount of feeding to develop the buds properly, the reason for having a large supply of feeding roots before cropping season commences is readily apparent and it is only by timely planting that such a condition can be obtained.

By way of caution I may remind my readers that it pays best to plant only the very best grade of stock. All weak and ailing plants should be scrupulously discarded during the operation of planting, as the growing season, bench room and labor required are too precious to expend on stock requiring doctoring, nursing and coddling.

Cleanliness being very essential to the health of the young stock, each house should have a thorough cleaning after being emptied, and all accumulations of dirt under the benches should be removed and the ground given a sprinkling of hot lime. This serves to sweeten the soil and helps to destroy the eggs of insects which are usually plentiful in such locations.

To give the house a smart and clean appearance the sashbars and walls should be cleaned and repainted where necessary.

This is also a good season to inspect the piping, have the apparatus tested and put into condition for the winter's work, as all this work can be done to best advantage while the house is empty.

This is usually the most unpleasant and tiresome part of rose growing, as it frequently happens that these operations have to be conducted in a dry atmosphere under a blazing sun and the labor, being of quite a different character from ordinary greenhouse work, is very trying to the nerves and patience of the help. With the houses in good repair and a supply of well handled soil ready to place on the bench we can again resume our accustomed and more interesting work RIBES.

THRIP ON ROSES.

Kindly advise us what to do with a very bad dose of thrip in our rose houses. Brides and Maids seem to be the worst infested. Red pepper seems to be feed for them, as I have burned as much as seven pounds in six applications in a house of 2,800 square feet of ground space. Will hydrocyanic acid gas kill them and how much will I use in such a space to be effective?

LAKE FOREST.

Where fresh red pepper is used, as frequently recommended in these columns, thrip are certain to be kept in sufficient subjection to prevent their doing damage. This course of treatment must not be spasmodic, but must be persisted in once or twice a week during the whole season to be effective. They reproduce so rapidly in the genial atmosphere of the rose house that it seems as if there were a new brood ready to replace the one destroyed.

This is one of the insects which are easily destroyed by even mild tobacco fumes if these fumes can be made to reach them. Owing to their activity they quickly reach a place of safety, either among the petals or in the soil.

Hydrocyanic acid gas, if applied sufficiently strong, would without doubt cause their destruction, but from personal experience I found that the quantity required to effect the desired result was very injurious to the plants. This has also been the result at several experimental stations where it has been tried.

Some of the foremost Beauty growers have been using a mixture of Paris green and sugar in solution as a spray once or twice a week, and claim that this treatment, if persisted in, will sufficiently thin their ranks to make it possible to produce good blooms even in the worst infested districts. This is the method adopted in New Jersey and from reports from L. M. Noe, of Madison, it seems to be quite effective. RIBES.

ARSENIC NO GOOD.

Referring to recent comments in the REVIEW with regard to the use of arsenic for fumigating, I will say that I have used arsenic for the last two years in an endeavor to keep my stock clean and have come to the conclusion that it is of no value for fumigating for insects on roses.

THOMAS ALLEN.

ROSES NOT BLOOMING.

We have two plants of Beau Brummel which have not been moved for three years. They have grown finely and have made nice large bushes, but have not had a bloom for two years. What is the matter? What can we do for them to make them bloom? W. G. T.

I am not acquainted with this variety of rose. If it is a tea it would flower in six months. We can only account for its not flowering by having too much root room and growing too vigorously, and that is the reverse of flowering with most roses, or any other perennial plant.
W. S.

GROUND OR RAISED BEDS.

Will roses do as well on the ground floor as on a bed raised eighteen to thirty inches? The location is in Texas.
G. W. T.

The question is one on which there is considerable difference of opinion and much will depend on the style of houses and arrangement of heating pipes, as well as the soil beneath your beds. We know of one successful man in central New York who plows the natural soil, or floor, over which his greenhouses are built, working in lots of manure and on that putting up a 6-inch board for the edge of the bed and filling in with a good yellow loam. He is eminently successful. His houses are six or seven in a block, equal span, having no partition between the houses. Had we such a surface soil we should be tempted to try the plan, for there is an immense saving in bench building, repairs, etc.

Yet it is safest to adhere to the old plan, by which so many millions of fine roses have been grown, viz., legs of about eighteen inches, with 2x4 joists every four feet and cypress floor of 2x6 boards. There is better all around light when the bench is two feet above the floor and a better circulation of heat and air, and for the majority of winter months when roses and carnations bring their best prices the raised wooden bench is all you desire. In the writer's opinion the semi-solid bed is near the ideal, reference to which is made in last week's REVIEW. Beds on the floor are more undesirable for carnations than roses.

ILEX CRENATA.

As a neat growing hardy evergreen shrub this little Japanese member of the holly family is certainly less known than it should be, and for gardens of limited extent, where vigorous growing subjects would soon outgrow their allotted space it can be recommended, says the Gardeners' Magazine. In appearance it is widely removed from the generally accepted idea of a holly, being, in fact, more like box. It has a close, much-branched habit of growth, and the somewhat spreading shoots are clothed with narrow, pointed, spineless leaves about three-quarters of an inch long, and slightly toothed. In color they are of a very dark green, against which background the rich golden splashes of the variety variegata show up most conspicuously. A second variety, Fortunei, or major, has larger and rounder leaves than those of the type, while the growth is also more robust.

A very noticeable feature of Ilex crenata is the readiness with which it can be raised from cuttings, for hollies, as a class, are seldom increased in this way. Even with these desirable features it is not met with to any great extent in nurseries, the great drawback to it, from a commercial point of view, being its slow rate of progress, as it takes a long time to attain a salable size. In Japan it is a favorite subject for topiary work, as the box is with us.

Concerning this pretty little member of the holly family, Professor Sargent, in his "Forest Flora of Japan," says: "Ilex crenata is the most widely distributed and the most common of the Japanese hollies, with persistent leaves; I encountered it in nearly every part of the empire which I visited. It is usually a low, much-branched, rigid shrub, three or four feet high; but in cultivation it not infrequently rises to the height of twenty feet, and, assuming the habit of a tree, is not unlike the box in general appearance. The leaves, which are light green and very lustrous, vary considerably in size and shape, although they are rarely more than an inch long, and are usually ovate acute, with slightly crenate toothed margins. The black fruit is produced in great profusion, and in the autumn adds materially to the beauty of the plant. This is the most popular of all the hollies with the Japanese; and a plant, usually cut into a fantastic shape, is found in nearly every garden. Varieties with variegated leaves are common, and apparently much esteemed. Ilex crenata and several of its varieties with variegated foliage were introduced into western gardens many years ago, and are occasionally cultivated, although the value of this plant as an under shrub appears to be hardly known or appreciated outside of Japan."

A NEW TROUBLE.

It is reported from England that a florist and gardener has appeared before the Cheshire county council with an application for the payment of damages because his place was rendered untenable for business by dust raised by passing automobiles.

IBERIS SNOWFLAKE.

The iberis, or perennial candytufts, include several very useful and beautiful spring flowering plants, but for general cultivation I. sempervirens and its varieties are perhaps the best on account of their excellent constitution and free flowering qualities. For clothing good spaces in the rock-garden or planting on the front of the flower borders, few plants surpass them; they are easily cultivated in almost any soil, and their evergreen character is also an advantage. The variety Snowflake has not been in commerce many years, and it is but little known at present; its merits, however, entitle it to a place in all collections. The flowers are individually large, of the purest white, and produced with great freedom, so that when a plant has become established a fine mass of bloom results, the purity of the flowers surpassing anything with which I am acquainted. Cuttings are easily rooted if taken off at any time during the summer and kept close for a few days in a frame. Where effective spring bedding has to be carried out this plan should prove of great value on account of the uniform growth and the length of time the variety lasts in good condition.—Gardeners' Magazine.

WATSONIA ARDERNEI.

Of the watsonia, Peter Henderson, in his "Hand Book of Plants," says: "A genus of half hardy bulbs from the Cape of Good Hope, formerly classed with the gladiolus, to which genus they are closely allied and to which they bear a close resemblance. They require the protection of a frame during the winter months, or they may be successfully grown in the greenhouse, where their long spikes of brilliant flowers make a magnificent appearance."

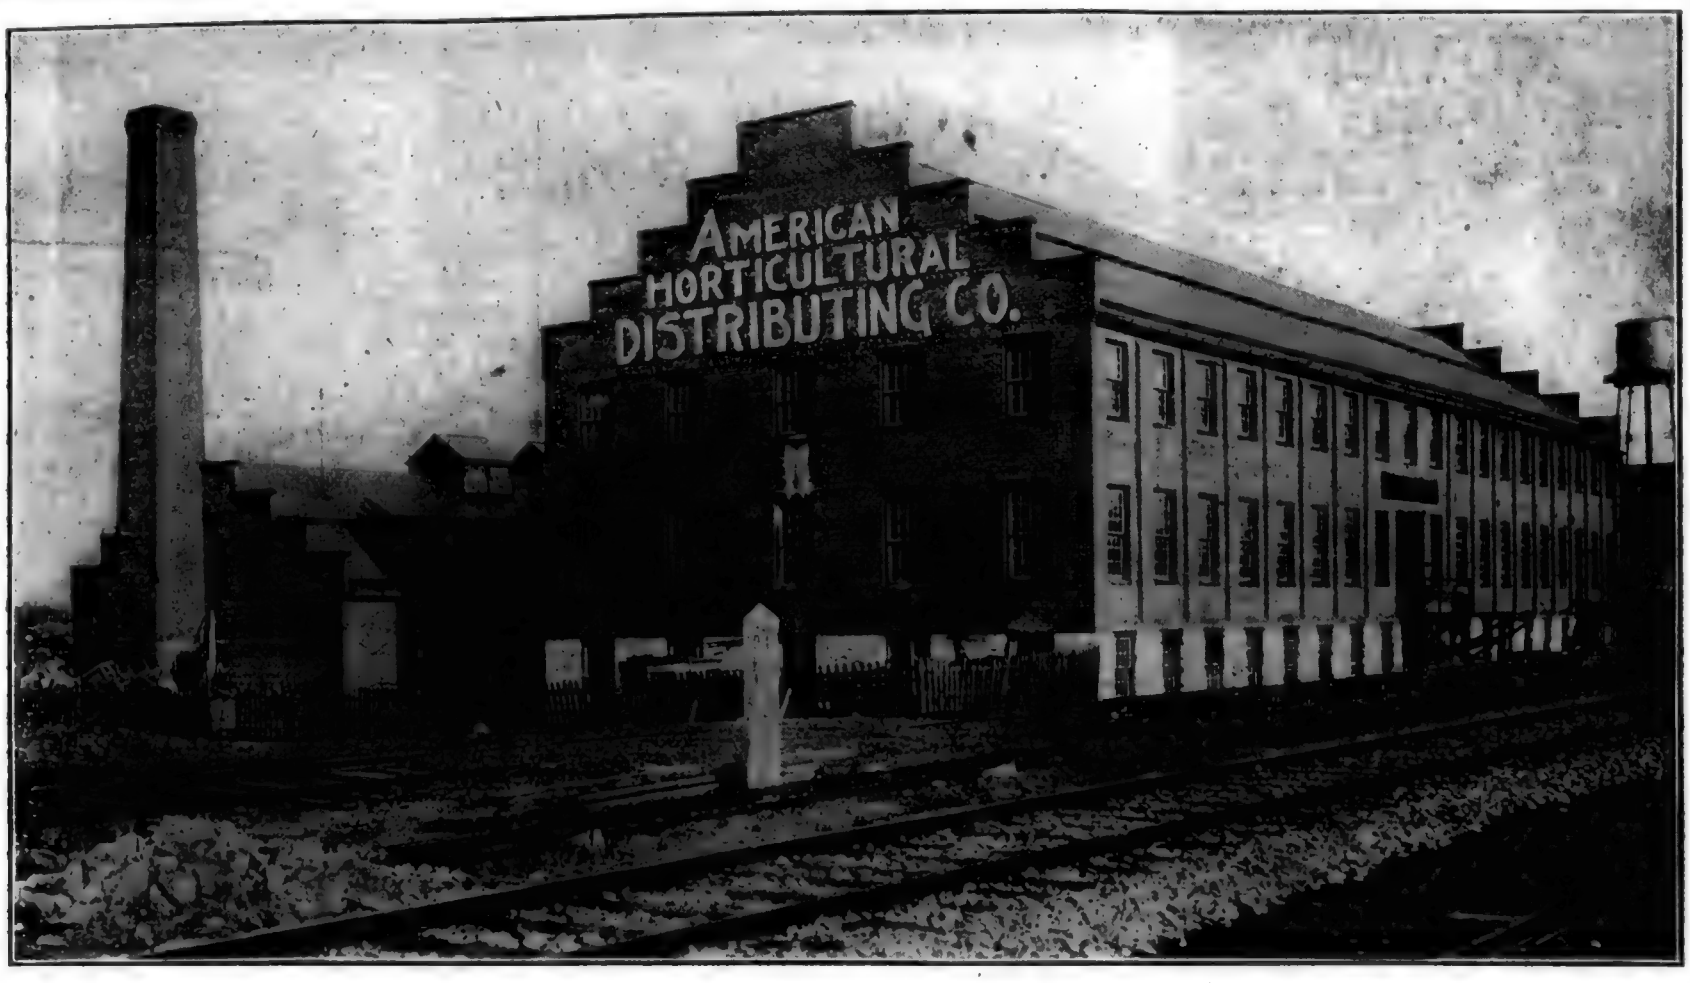
This family seems to be neglected in this country and very few florists of the present generation are acquainted with them, although fresh interest was aroused through the discovery and introduction of a pure white variety. This was sent out from South Africa about a dozen years ago, under the name of Watsonia iridifolia O'Brieni. This splendid variety has flowers up to three and one-half inches in diameter, and reminding us very much of a eucharis in its purity. The funnel-shaped tube is slightly curved, which gives to this family the popular name of bugle lily, and is about two inches long. The segments, usually six, are an inch or more in length and almost three-fourths of an inch in width. In California the flower stems grow from four to six feet in height and branch freely. The main stem, with its several branches, when grown from strong bulbs, will produce close to 200 flowers, and will remain in bloom from six to eight weeks. The accompanying illustrations taken from photographs will better show the flowers cut for work and will also show the habit of growth and freedom of bloom in the field or garden.

The variety known as Ardernei is of more recent introduction and differs from the above in that the tube is less curved and the segments somewhat shorter, and more rounding at the point. Like O'Brieni it is of the purest white, and both keep well after being cut. In California these varieties have been grown ever since their introduction, the original stock having come from Natal, South Africa, and for some years holders of the original stock refused to dispose of any, believing it would have a great future as a cut flower.

Watsonia Iridifolia O'Brieni.

In California it usually begins to grow naturally in September and is usually in bloom late in March, continuing through April and May. A few winters ago it stood 8 degrees of frost without injury, showing it to be more hardy than gladioli growing beside it. It can be had in bloom without forcing under glass in the late winter months.

The individual flowers can be used, or the entire branch can be cut; hence it will readily be seen how profitable it will be for winter blooming. It makes up beautifully in all floral work, as it is not large enough to appear coarse, and I have no doubt but that eventually it will be as largely grown as the Bermuda lily. I believe it can be grown under the same conditions as Gladiolus Colvillei alba and if not forced the bulbs can be cared for and used for years.



There is also a great future for these watsonias for summer blooming. As I have said, they start to grow, in California, in September. From what I have read concerning the genus I have no doubt that in the east the bulbs can be kept dormant until spring and will then bloom during the summer. In fact, as an experiment, I kept some dormant until April, when they were planted and bloomed in August. For outdoor planting in the south or on the Pacific coast they will become very popular and will make grand displays for two months. For this purpose some varieties with colored flowers will be in demand. Watsonia Augusta is grown for decorative purposes. This splendid sort has brilliant scarlet flowers and blooms freely all summer and is one of the handsomest of all those with colored flowers.

GERMAN IRISES AND SHADE.

There are so few really bright-flowered plants which will thrive in the shade that any addition to the list is generally welcome. My addition will be the German iris, though, of course, it may be no addition to the list possessed by some growers. Be that as it may, I wish to put on record that the German iris will grow and flower magnificently on a shady north border, which scarcely gets a sunbeam on it the whole of the year around. Not only so, but the particular irises I have in mind grow on a bank that is wreathed in close growing ivy, the irises standing out as light green oasis against a desert of darker green. Thus planted, the irises have a maximum of moisture, and are somewhat late in flowering. The picture they make, however, when in bloom, is one not readily forgotten. As these irises transplant well immediately after flowering, the present note should enable anyone to try them in shade. —Gardeners' Magazine.

BIG INSECTICIDE MAKERS.

The attention of the trade, and of seedsmen in particular, has recently been attracted to the American Horticultural Distributing Co., of Martinsburg, W. Va., through the selection of Paul F. Richter, well known through his years of connection with the Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, who recently resigned to accept the management of this company's business.

Inquiry develops the fact that the American Horticultural Distributing Co. is the largest institution of its kind in the United States. It has a large establishment in the West Virginia fruit growing district and is devoted exclusively to the making of horticultural insecticides. Hitherto the business of the concern has been directly with the orchardists, but appreciating that large quantities of insecticides are used by people who individually require only small lots, the business is to be broadened by placing the commodities with seedsmen, nurserymen, florists and others who issue horticultural catalogues, and are able to reach the small buyers.

Mr. Richter is a man well experienced to carry on business along these lines. For twelve years he was prominently identified with Michell's and for five and a half years, commencing before he was of age, he was the manager. During that period, sixteen and eighteen hours often constituted his day and he felt the necessity of getting into something a little less strenuous, but the ambition and energy which made his following in the seed and florist business so large, will be no less in his new situation.

The American Horticultural Distributing Co. was organized primarily for the manufacture of a preparation for the destruction of San Jose scale. For a series of years the promoters had been experimenting with soluble oils and were finally rewarded with the discovery of a preparation which they copyrighted as the Target Brand scale destroyer. It is on this commodity they have built the largest portion of their business, shipping many solid carloads to the Florida orange groves and the peach belts of Georgia, Delaware and Michigan. The county of Berkley, in which Martinsburg is located, is said to contain the largest single apple and peach orchards in the world and the company maintains an orchard of about 12,000 trees in which its experiments have been conducted. The scale destroyer is entirely soluble, non-penetrating preparation of mineral oil, which for use is simply dissolved in from twenty to twenty-five gallons of water for each gallon of material. It is said for it that it is entirely harmless and owes a large part of its popularity not only to the fact of its efficiency but to the fact that it will cover, gallon for gallon, twice as much space as the salt, sulphur and lime preparation. Among other items is an arsenate of lead, a quick Bordeaux, several other insecticides, each of which has its own special field, and a weed destroyer.

Upon leaving Philadelphia Mr. Richter was given a farewell party by a number of his friends in the trade and since assuming his duties at Martinsburg he has been in receipt of a number of letters which show that he will not fail to remain in touch with the associates in his old line of business.

The officers of the American Horticultural Distributing Co. are J. P. Wickersham, president; C. W. Tabler, vice-president, and J. W. Stewart, secretary and treasurer.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The unwieldy oversupply continued throughout last week. There was no let-up in the receipts until Saturday and the market was stocked on almost every item far beyond the possibility of any satisfactory sale and, indeed, more stock went to the dump last week than in any previous seven days since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary. One wholesaler remarked that it seemed a shame, when one was unable to get express charges out of a shipment, to be called upon to pay $2 to get the stuff hauled to the dump. The hospitals had more flowers than they could use and growers' averages were certainly the lowest of which anyone has recollection.

Of course there was a large business, money receipts aggregating a very respectable sum. The demand was invariably for the best of stock, so that the grades suitable for shipping requirements brought fair money. It was the picked over stock, left after legitimate needs had been supplied, which was practically valueless.

We are very well satisfied with the results of our advertising in

The Weekly Florists' Review

We find also that it is necessary to advertise to get orders, or in fact a market, and then back it up with good stock.

STOVER FLORAL CO.

Grandville, Mich.

June 10, 1906.

The trade seemed to call principally for Beauty, of which there was hardly enough good stock to meet the demand. The houses with the summer roses also did a good business, as Brides and Maids were pretty well finished by the severe heat. Valley and adiantum also sold well. Good sweet peas are in demand and daisies do nicely because of wedding work.

This week found supplies considerably shortened by a return of cool weather, but still ample for all requirements, except possibly the calls for roses are more than can be filled with satisfactory stock. There are still plenty of tea roses, but the quality will not do. Beauties are in strong demand and scarce. Carnations are abundant but small in flower.

Smilax is plentiful, but asparagus strings are not in large supply. For a couple of days this week new ferns were hard to get, but the shortage was only temporary. There are old ferns still on the market, but hardly in salable condition. All the ferns that had kept well cleaned up in good shape, but without the usual advance in price.

Peonies.

This market originated the practice of storing peonies, now employed in many places. In no previous year has the local crop come in so quickly as it did this year. The cut was on for hardly more than five days. During that period the glut was something tremendous and the open stock had little value. The material caught in the bud was put into cold storage. More houses have stored peonies this year than ever before. The aggregate in storage runs into many thousands, for one house confessed to having 12,000 dozen peonies on hand June 11. The cut is over and there is again a good demand for peonies at fair prices. By Monday the cold-storage stock was coming on the market and selling fairly well.

R. E. Kennicott, of Carbondale, has been in town the past week helping out the Amazi Kennicott crop of peonies.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has the peonies of the Jewell Nursery Co., Lake City, Minn., again this season and has the bulk of them in storage.

Growers' Losses.

In view of the unprecedented amounts of stock which went to waste last week, growers feel that they have been compelled to bear a loss out of all proportion to what anybody gained by driving the fruit and flower stands off the streets inside the elevated loop. Had the stands been operating it is not likely that prices would have been noticeably stiffened, for the overstock was too great, but a certain part of what went to the dump would have been sold on the streets. Several houses report missing Greek trade to the extent of $30 to $50 a day last week and a conservative estimate would be $500 a day for the whole market. And in every case at least eighty-five per cent of this was money directly lost to the growers, without any recompense thus far apparent.

Hail on South Side.

On June 7 quite heavy hail fell on the south side. At the Muir establishment, 3530 Michigan avenue, about 800 lights of glass were broken. He was insured. J. F. Kidwell & Bro. lost about 500 lights, and others suffered to a slight extent.

The Building Boom.

Both the John C. Moninger Co. and the A. Dietsch Co. are figuring on enlarging their factory facilities for next season. The latter had a new building for this year, but both concerns have had all they could do with the present factory equipment. The Foley Mfg. Co. concurs in the opinion that next year is likely to see still another increase in the demand for structural material, and all three firms propose to be so fixed in 1907 that no matter how big the business grows, everything can be turned out by the day wanted without special effort.

N. J. Rupp says that one of the notable features of the present season is the number of inquiries received from bankers and other capitalists whose attention has been attracted to the florists' business as a profitable field for investment. Mr. Rupp says a number of these inquiries are likely to develop into orders in time, but he does not consider it a tendency worthy of special encouragement, for when the man who controls the finances has no knowledge of the special needs of the business it is

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club meets tonight. Vice-President Leonard Kill will preside in the absence of President Hauswirth, who is in California. The club picnic takes place June 24 at Joliet, and the committee plans to get out a big crowd.

E. C. Amling has had for the past week a nice supply of auratum lilies of excellent quality.

John Prochaska, formerly a section foreman for Wietor Bros., is now in charge of the plant of the Chicago Rose Co., having succeeded D. J. Murphy, who resigned June 4.

F. F. Benthey is enjoying a box of cigars this week as the result of his efforts to induce a Greek to restore a purse and contents which a customer dropped in the Benthey-Coatsworth store a week ago.

Miss Ethel Curran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Curran, will be united in marriage to Mr. J. Edward Simpson at the home of her parents, West Peterson and North Forty-eighth avenues, Thursday, June 14. Mr. Simpson is a nephew of Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J. The wedding will be a quiet affair, only the immediate relatives being in attendance. After a few weeks spent in Milwaukee and nearby points, the young couple will return to this city to the home of the bride's parents.

A son of J. F. Kidwell, accompanied by three other lads, none of them more than 14 years old, started for Panama June 9. They had proceeded as far as Pullman when the Kidwell lad thought better of it.

Bassett & Washburn report excellent business, as is usual with them in June. One order from a small Illinois city last week called for 1,700 valley, 2,500 daisies, 900 select Chatenay and enough other stock to make the bill foot up to $300. They required 5,000 daisies in two days for their shipping trade.

Jos. Brooks last fall leased a half of the Geo. Harrer plant at Morton Grove and filled it with carnations. This season he is taking on the rest of the glass.

Frank Beu reports an excellent spring business. He had a large stock of vincas and sold out nicely.

Anton Kill died Wednesday, June 6. He was 63 years of age and well known to the florists of the Bowmanville section. His only son is Leonard Kill, whom everybody knows. There are four daughters. The funeral was held on Sunday.

Bay trees have sold unusually well this spring. Local importers have received a total of several carloads and nearly all are now doing duty in front of flower stores, restaurants, theatres, etc.

J. F. Kidwell & Bro. report that in May they did much of the bedding done in June last year and the work of the last fortnight, and still coming, is practically clear gain. Others make similar reports.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. had a strike on its hands last week, called at noon on Wednesday. The boilermakers had no grievance. The business agent of the union called them out all over town because the Employers' Association was asking every applicant for a job to give his pedigree, which was recorded in a card index. It was quickly settled and will not interrupt deliveries.

give an idea of the extent of their needs, they try to keep at least 5,000 large Bostons at the service of their decorating department.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

After a week of very hot weather we are now having it cool, which we hope will tend to give business a new lease of life. Business is moving along quietly, but taking all things into consideration I believe it to be fully up to other years, if not better. The past week brought forth a nice demand for stock of all kinds and nearly every afternoon found the market well cleaned up. Beauties head the list in demand and there are not enough of them to fill orders. Bride roses are a close second and sell out as fast as they are received at the wholesale houses. Maids do not do quite so well. Carnations of all but the poorest grades are disposed of at good figures. Sweet peas, lilies of all kinds, and other kinds of flowers have sold well and at good prices. There are still some good peonies to be seen, mostly cold-storage stock, but the end of them is in sight.

There are some wedding decorations of good size booked by the local retail men for the latter part of this month, together with a number of commencements, which ought to bring a very good demand.

Club Meeting.

The annual election of officers of the Florists' Society took place June 9 and quite a number of members were present when the meeting was called to order. The following were elected to serve as the board of directors of the society for the ensuing year: President, Wm. Murphy; vice-president, Ben George; secretary, C. J. Ohmer; treasurer, D. Rusconi; trustee, R. Witterstaetter. Thus the entire board was re-elected. Officers will be installed at the next meeting of the society, which will be held July 14.

After a general discussion it was decided to hold the usual outing, and Henry Schwarz was appointed chairman of the committee. He promises us something entirely new and the florists of this city and vicinity can look forward to one of the best outings we have had in years. The date has not yet been set, but it will be about the third Thursday of July.

The S. A. F. meeting at Dayton was one of the interesting subjects that was talked over. Every-one expressed a desire to go, if not for the entire convention, at least for the opening day. It looks very much as if we will have 100 or more in our delegation and if possible we will go in a special train. C. J. Ohmer was appointed chairman of a committee to work the matter up, get the best possible rates from the railroads, and also get together as large a delegation as possible.

Geo. W. Loeber, of the Lockland Lumber Co., was elected to membership.

Various Notes.

Chas. Hoffmeister has accepted a position with Weiland & Olinger, at New Castle, Ind.

Ben George had a narrow escape from serious injury last week. During a severe storm he was standing near the telephone when the wire was struck by lightning. He was knocked flat, but escaped without injury.

C. P. Dieterich & Bro., of Maysville, Ky., are building a house 22x150 feet. They intend to devote it entirely to roses, mostly Beauty.

It was with sincere regret that we read of the death of C. H. Kunzman, of Louisville. Mr. Kunzman was a frequent caller in our city, where he had many friends. Scarcely more than three weeks ago he stopped to see us one afternoon. He was in his usual good spirits and spoke with a great deal of enthusiasm of the coming S. A. F. convention. His genial presence at that meeting will be greatly missed.

Visitors were Chas. Dieterich, of Maysville, Ky., and John Evans, of Richmond, Ind.

BOSTON.

The Market.

While there has been a fair demand for wedding and funeral flowers during the past week, there was far too much material placed on the market and much had to be cleared at very low rates, while some could not be sold at all. Both roses and carnations felt the slump and it is hard, owing to the erratic nature of the market, to give exact quotations. It is hoped that commencement and class day exercises will tone up the market within a few days. Good sweet peas and peonies of white and soft pink shades have been in good demand and there has been a nice call for green goods. Flowers other than those named have not been much sought after. The first outdoor hybrid roses are arriving, but the quality will be better in a few days. Outdoor Spanish iris is also coming in, while there are a few sweet peas from the open from one or two growers.

Various Notes.

There is every indication that the coming meeting of the American Peony Society on June 15 and 16 will be a record-breaking one in attendance, as well as exhibits. Ideal weather for the blooms has prevailed in this section of late, abundant moisture and not too much sunshine, and the quality promises to be unusually high. Cottage Gardens will probably be the largest exhibitor, but there will be many other large commercial and private exhibitors. In addition to peonies, quite a number of interesting flowers will be staged.

Members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club are asked to meet at the Soldiers' monument, Jamaica Plain, at 3 p. m. June 19 for the field day at the estates of Larz Anderson and Mrs. W. C. Brandegee. Cars will return for Horticultural hall at 6 o'clock and refreshments will be served at 7:30, after which the regular club meeting will be held.

J. A. Pettigrew and J. W. Duncan are among those attending the Association of American Park Superintendents' convention at Washington this week.

Edwin C. Holmes, proprietor of the Somerville Nursery, Broadway, East Somerville, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy on June 5, with liabilities scheduled at $51,245 and assets of $9,372. The liabilities, of which $50,745 is unsecured, are composed chiefly of advertising claims.

Prof. C. S. Sargent threw open his estate to the public on June 9 and 10 in order that they might see the grand display of rhododendrons, azaleas and other choice subjects in bloom. Some thousands availed themselves of the invitation.

Rhododendrons are blooming magnificently here this season. Even the sorts of doubtful hardiness are flowering profusely. W. N. Craig.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Plantsmen are finishing up their season in good shape and all say it was a very satisfactory business. No one has anything left except odds and ends, and some small stock which is gradually being worked off.

The cut flower business was excellent the past week. Everyone seemed busy, a number of large weddings helping to swell the volume of trade and the retailers were happy. However, I cannot say as much for the wholesalers. They were busy and doing a good business but, work as they would, they could not make a hole in the immense lots of stock coming in.

Peonies were never more plentiful or finer. These with quantities of Spanish iris and thousands of bunches of sweet peas kept the counters full and the clerks hustling in the endeavor to get rid of them. As a result carnations, which had been scarce the week before, became plentiful, with no demand. Roses arrived in an avalanche, but much of the stock was so poor that there was trouble to select enough to take care of orders. The peonies are now about done and a day or two more will ease things up and no doubt stock of all kinds will be scarce enough.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met June 5. Peonies were up for discussion and the members found a very fine display awaiting them at the club rooms. Among the exhibitors was C. Betscher, Canal Dover, O., who showed Edulis superba, Floral Treasure, grandiflora, Lady Bramwell, Duc de Orleans, Jenny Lind, Festiva maxima and many others, all of which were very fine and came in good shape.

H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, showed Couronne d'Or, Charlemagne, Marie Lemoine and a number of others. Thos. Meehan & Sons, Dreshertown, Pa., showed Delicatissima and a number of other varieties, but for some reason this shipment arrived in bad shape. It contained some varieties we would have liked to see in good shape and beside this Meehan & Sons have been so kind to us that we seem to look for their exhibit. Schenley park also had a nice show of peonies and other hardy things.

The Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co. showed several handsome vases of white, pink and red peonies.

One question was, "Are peonies a good thing for the cut flower people?" The answer of one man was: "Granted it is one of the handsomest garden plants, and no garden should be without it, and that it is fine as a decorative flower, as far as the grower is concerned he would be better off without them. During the few days they last, they sell so cheaply that they take the place of so much stock and the price realized on peonies is so small that he is on the wrong side financially; but certainly we still will have peonies."

A committee was appointed to stir up matters pertaining to the convention and secure rates and any information that will be of use to those who wish to attend.

E. C. Reineman was appointed chairman of a committee to arrange for a picnic or outing of some kind, with full power to act. This is the one feature of the club in which wives, children and sweethearts can participate and is becoming more popular each year.

Various Notes.

An immense water tank on top of the building in which J. B. Murdoch & Co. are located gave way June 8, and came crashing through the third and second floors, bringing everything with it and burying fourteen people in the debris. All were injured but none was killed. Murdoch received no damage, although a single partition was all that was between them and the wreck.

Al Sheapard, who came to Pittsburg some years ago from New York, to work for A. M. Murdoch, but had been with Randolph & McClements the last few years, died June 6. He had been confined to his bed since shortly after the holidays. He was 57 years old and with his large experience was considered one of the best men in the city.

Lee Riley, of the Pittsburg Florists' Exchange, played ball Decoration day and had a little finger almost torn off. He has been nursing it ever since.

Miss Geib, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., is the first on record to start the vacation racket. She is "up the Hudson."

Sweet peas could have been bought in large lots last week as cheaply as a penny a bunch. Peonies went at buyers' prices.

NORFOLK, VA.—In the federal court the creditors of the Hugh L. Aumann Co. of 117 Granby street, were cited to appear June 18 to show cause, if any, why the stock in the store and in the four greenhouses of the concern in Norfolk county should not be sold.

COPYRIGHT BILL GOES OVER.

Word comes from Washington that the house committee on copyrights and patents has closed its hearings and will not be authorized to conduct any during the recess, but will be ready to resume the first Monday in December. Consequently the copyright bill, under advisement, goes over. The bill includes that published some months ago providing for the control of horticultural novelties.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market the past week was again badly overstocked with a poor quality of flowers, which brought little. The commission men who had first-class stock sold out at fair prices, as the demand for this quality is good. The retailers complain as to dull business the last week. Even funeral work was scarce. A few small weddings were about all that was going on. The greenhouse men are about through outdoor planting and are beginning to pull out and replant the houses for the fall season. This week will finish up the social season and school closings, and then the summer dullness will be upon us.

At the commission houses carnations were extremely plentiful all of last week, and of fair quality, but sold at very cheap prices in 1,000 lots. It seemed that the buyers did not care for carnations. Roses were in so much better demand that even the poor quality which was offered sold well. Most of the rose stock is badly mildewed.

Sweet peas are coming in with longer stems and are in big demand where quality is good. There are plenty of daisies, candidum lilies and cornflowers in the market. Valley holds out well. All greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Frank S. Mills, shipper of greens and Christmas trees, from Rhinelander, Wis., was in town last week. J. J. Nussbaumer, of San Angelo, Texas, also called, and A. M. Augspurger, of D. U. Augspurger & Sons, Peoria, Ill., was down. Meyer, the Boston silkaline man, also was a caller.

F. A. Weber, C. C. Sanders and J. W. Schuette, our local nurserymen, left Monday night for Dallas, Texas, to attend the nurserymen's convention. Before returning Mr. Sanders will visit Galveston and other points in Texas.

Charles Holzborn, who has his place at 3150 Oak Hill avenue, had a narrow escape from death on Saturday, coming in collision with a street car. The horse was so badly hurt that it had to be killed. Mr. Holzborn came out without a scratch.

Martin Reukauf, who represents H. Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia, Pa., left Monday night for Louisville, to be with the home-comers there this week.

Arthur Ellison is now in the employ of the Union Electric Light Co.

Gus Miller, who has greenhouses at Bowbrink Station, will this week open a store at 7718 South Broadway, where he has the field to himself.

Samuel R. Young, who was agricultural and horticultural agent for the Missouri Pacific & Iron Mountain system, has resigned his position to take up fruit farming in Arkansas.

The Ayers Floral Co. has the hall decorations for the two largest school closings on Thursday and Friday.

Chas. Ducher, landscape gardener at the Chain of Rocks, was shot by an unknown man last week. From last accounts he was out of danger.

George Ostertag, superintendent of parks, has made good from the jump. All the parks certainly look beautiful.

Bowling.

The florists' bowling club wound up its season in the city league last week Thursday and came in last in the race. A total of 102 games were played during the season. The seven florists who comprised the team made the following averages:

Name—	No. G.	Total.	Av.
Ellison	102	17,780	174
Beyer	71	12,001	169
Meinhardt	66	10,911	165
Beneke	102	16,836	165
Kuehn	102	16,664	163
Schreifer	33	5,084	154
Lohrenz	46	6,749	146

Beneke made the three highest games, 645, also highest single score, 257. Ellison made the most strikes, 463, and Beneke the most spares, 466. J. J. B.

There's the outing and the Dayton convention to stir up things in the interim, and everybody needs a little rest. Eternal distribution of flowers even would grow monotonous. It has been on the whole a most wonderful year for all interests, the best ever known in cut flowers, supplies, seeds, bulbs, nursery stock and bedding plants. The average gives no cause for the grower's complaint, if he does complain, and we haven't heard him except about the injustice and arbitrariness of express monopolists. Everything the grower grows has been sold, and usually well sold, and prosperity never was so universal in the trade. The wholesale cut flower men are philosophical and willing to look on the bright side of things and are quite as generous and good natured as ever.

Last week was certainly a terror. Little stock was first-class. When it was, it sold quickly and at fair prices, but the bulk of everything was closed out at fearful reductions. Mildewed roses would not sell at all. Some wholesalers could not give them away, and of carnations I saw boxes two or three days canned that even the Greek sidewalk element could not be coaxed to accept without money and without price. Shoals of carnations were sold on Saturday at 50 cents a hundred and less.

And peonies, where did they come from? One whole wagon-load of them went for $10, Jersey grown and of fair quality. This week will probably see the end of the flood. The late comers, if the quality is good, will do better. Some from the west of the state will be in, retarded by the cold and, unless injured by the big storm of Sunday, should command fair prices.

Orchids hold fairly steady and there are plenty of them. The June weddings are increasing in number, and all the bon-ton retailers are getting a share from the strong boxes of the millionaires who have marriageable daughters.

Club Meeting.

The New York Florists' Club on Monday evening held its last session for the season. The ladies came in large numbers and received a warm welcome, abundant floral recognition and an excellent dinner. The gentlemen, too, were not forgotten. The musical and literary program included songs and instrumental music by Mrs. Kelley and Mrs. Fongey and declamations by Mr. Kelley, Several of the club's members also contributed of their talents.

The peony exhibit was not large, but the display was of the best in color and variety. The Columbia rose was again on exhibition, also Nephrolepis Whitmani and a beautiful collection of orchids from Lager & Hurrell. A cultural certificate was given and the thanks of the club accorded all the exhibitors. The peonies were sent by the Cottage Gardens and Chas. Lenker.

The outing committee reported everything in readiness for the excursion July 2 and tickets selling rapidly. Great preparations for the enjoyment of a record crowd are completed.

Resolutions on the death of the sister of John F. Nugent and the father of Peter Devoy were read and adopted.

Mr. O'Mara reported for the committee appointed to secure lower express rates and read a letter from the United States Express Co. that was very independent and unsatisfactory in character. The committee was continued. Mr.

O'Mara also reported for the special committee on the San Francisco disaster and the club's secretary was instructed to communicate with the secretary of the San Francisco club to ascertain what help the New York club can render.

W. F. Ross, Arthur Withers and Jos. Hoffmeir were elected members of the club, and H. H. Barrows, of Whitman, Mass., was proposed.

A letter was read from President Kasting regretting his inability to be present. The transportation committee has full power to make all the necessary arrangements for the trip to Dayton in August.

The attendance was large and enthusiastic, the meeting and banquet rooms being comfortably filled. The club adjourned at midnight until the second Monday in September.

Various Notes.

They say the Newport season does not promise as well as expected, some of the dukes, duchesses and the like having cancelled their dates. This is hardly fair to the New York florists, who have made such extensive preparations to entertain them, and who have already opened their summer stores there. Siebrecht & Son, Wadley & Smythe, Leikens and Hodgson are all open for business.

School commencements here next week and up to June 30 will give the month a lively ending for the retailers.

July 2 everybody will be ready for the outing of the club. Retailers are joining in the movement to make it a success. Special prizes are set aside for that branch of the trade. Special gifts and enjoyments are provided for the children and every handsome baby is to receive a prize. All florists' babies are so handsome it is impossible to pick one that the other mothers can accept. It was so last year, and the judges have not slept well since.

Joseph Rolker and Winfrid Rolker have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of their brother, Herman, who died May 26 at his home in Brooklyn, from heart failure. Mr. Rolker was at one time a partner in the firm of August Rolker & Sons.

Next week Wednesday J. P. Cleary will sell at auction the entire stock of plants in the greenhouses of Geo. Lorenz, of Astoria, L. I. Mr. Lorenz has sold his property advantageously to the Long Island real estate boomers. Land within twenty miles of New York in every direction has quadrupled in value and is still ballooning. A little two-acre plot at Farmingdale I owned fifteen years ago and sold for $500 in connection with Grover Cleveland's election sold last week for $5,000.

Alex McConnell moved June 8 into his splendid new store on Fifth avenue, in the Arcade building, corner of Forty-seventh street, after sixteen years spent in the old building at Forty-fifth street and Fifth avenue. The new location is one of the best in New York and the store is seventy-five feet deep, with basement to correspond, and wonderfully light and convenient. McConnell's old store was one of the landmarks on Fifth avenue. Some of the best people in America have depended on it for their flower supply. Mr. McConnell says "right goods means custom, no matter where the location." Some have dealt steadily with him for a quarter of a century. The new store will be fitted out with every modern improvement and elaborately decorated. Business has already begun and the change has been made without rippling the surface of the flow of trade.

Many of the florists are already located in their summer homes in the mountains or by the sea or sound. Walter Sheridan is near Stamford, Conn.; Wm. Ford is away for a two weeks' rest; Sigmund Geller will be home from Europe Saturday, and several of the wholesalers have country homes in Jersey or on Long Island.

The general acquiescence in early closing is encouraging. Many think that by July 1 the movement will be almost universal. It ought to be. Just as much will be sold and employees would get much needed rest.

The Horticultural Society of New York has summer weather for its summer show Wednesday and Thursday, but nothing seems to wake New York in flower exhibits and no very large attendance nor enthusiasm is hoped for.

Jno. J. Perkins & Son have rented part of the new store of Cotsonas & Co., 50 West Twenty-eighth street. The general desire of the wholesalers seems to be concentration and Twenty-eighth street is the Mecca. West Twenty-ninth, however, holds firm and the majority of the old houses remain and are likely to do so. Chas. Millang, Saltford and Gunther are veterans of wholesale cut flowerdom.

The Market.

Last week closed poorly. The demand, which had been wonderfully strong up to Thursday, fell away on Friday and Saturday, the market dragging badly. Carnations suffered most. This is due partly to the weather, which is certainly not carnation weather, and partly to the fact that the divine flower is not in especial demand for weddings or commencements. The supply has been enormous, the average quality rather poor, and prices are away down.

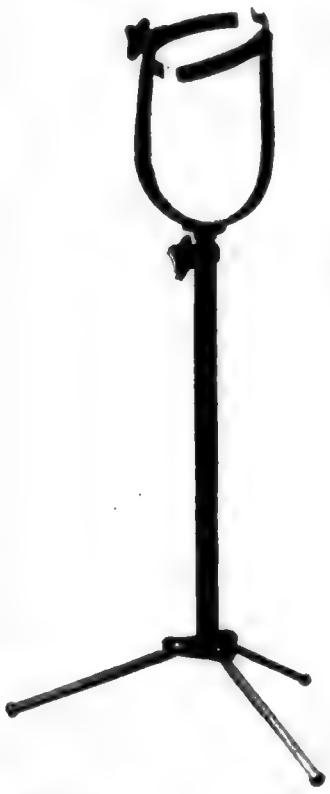
This week opened auspiciously. While business is not as good as it was a week ago, there is considerable activity, owing to some more commencements and weddings. The supply of fancy roses is rather limited, all the good stock offered realizing satisfactory prices.

Peonies, locally grown, are over. We are receiving some out-of-town stock, and will soon be dependent on E. W. Gaehring and his followers, for cold storage stock, which promises to last quite as long as the weddings. Sweet peas are abundant and the quality of some is excellent. Cattleya Mossiæ and valley are both fine. Centaurea is in strong supply. Phil owes the Flower Market and S. S. Pennock an apology for saying that Easter lilies are over. They are not, and the quality is excellent. Coreopsis is abundant and very good. Water lilies have made their appearance.

Various Notes.

Edward Biester, of Broad street and Susquehanna avenue, will build a handsome new store on the property adjoining his present location, renting the latter as a dwelling.

Miss Rigby, for many years in charge of the books of J. J. Habermehl's Sons, Twenty-second and Diamond streets, has resigned her position. She will be married this month.



Wm. Wunder, of Pittville, is sending fine Harrisii lilies to the Flower Market.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Eschner have gone over to New York to meet Mr. and Mrs. Rice, who are expected home on Saturday.

Alphonse Pericat, of Collingdale, is sending very fine Cattleya Mossiæ to Samuel S. Pennock.

Jos. Bevis & Son are building two new houses about 16x125 feet each. They are growers of Brides, Maids, Liberties, and, this year, Richmonds.

The rose show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held on Thursday evening, and was kept open on Friday at Horticultural hall. It was for outdoor roses only.

Among the visitors to the June meeting of the Florists' Club were Antoine Wintzer, vice-president of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., and Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.

A bowling tournament to decide upon the team to represent this city at Dayton next August was begun on the Florists' Club's alleys this week. Each competitor will roll twenty games. Then the twelve highest scorers will roll a deciding contest for places on the team.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., took time to show a few of the firm's sterling novelties recently. Among them were the new crystal glass bowls, with handles. They come in a variety of styles, suitable for table decoration. Then there was a strong green twine, the balls hollowed to fit on a neat stand that would make an attractive addition to any florist's shop. Mr. Berkowitz speaks highly of the adjustable plant stand, which is in brisk demand.

The idea of giving gold medals for achievements in horticulture is favorably received here. Would it not be fine to see our government's medals on the breasts of Wm. Warner Harper and Thos. B. Meehan?

Fred Ehret has completed moving to the store next door on Fairmount avenue. His new place has the advantage of a nice greenhouse in the rear.

Answers to Correspondents.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia, to Phil, in care of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

49.—What is the flower that resembles wistaria, that I have seen in Mr. Battles' showcase? The color is pink and pale blue, not purple.

Probably lupinus, an annual. It is a cluster flower, but unlike wistaria is erect, not pendant. The colors are white, blue and pink.

50.—In your article on the seasaw system, published May 31, you opposed the division of shipments. Is not this absurd?

I do not oppose a division of shipments. In large places, this may be advantageous. I oppose the unnecessary fluctuation of shipments.

51.—Why do you not give us more cultural notes in your column?

Were I as good a grower as you are, I would not be a newspaper correspondent at all. PHIL.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at Toledo, O., June 26-28, 1906.

THE bean fields in many sections are too wet and the onion set fields too dry.

IT looks bad for the canned tomato industry at present. The dry weather and the unusual shortage of plants is likely to make the harvest short.

THE pea crops continue to do well. Some of the early sorts are in bloom and the stand throughout the central growing section is uniformly good.

THE injury to the Italian crop by the eruption of Vesuvius is reported to be resposible for the latest advance in the price of Paper Whites for fall shipment.

E. C. HOLMES, doing a mail order seed and plant business at East Somerville, Mass., using half a dozen names, filed a petition in bankruptcy June 5, with liabilities of $51,245.

THERE is a dearth of news from the Nebraska growers. It is likely that all their energies are bent on getting out a good acreage of vine seeds and sweet corn, and that reports will follow in due course.

THE lack of demand for sweet corn was something of a disappointment. The usual acreage is supposed to have been planted, but the source from which the seed to do this with was drawn is a sort of conundrum.

THE cabbage growers are about ready to set out plants for their main crop. There seems to be no shortage of plants, but the weather has put the land in poor shape. There are two weeks yet, however, if the plants will hold.

MARKET gardeners are complaining about the low prices at which they are forced to sell green stuff. The weather is against good crops and the combination of low prices and short crops is something that does not look right to them.

C. P. BRASLAN, San Jose, Cal., writes under date of June 9: "The onion crop during the past ten days has had a severe dose of mildew and the crop has been reduced fully fifty per cent. The stalks are yellow, giving the crop the appearance of having jaundice. The onion crop in California promises to be the shortest in many years."

POSSIBLY fearing that some of the seeds it mails under congressional franks were failing, through the ignorance of the recipients, to achieve the purpose for which nature intended them, the department of agriculture issued a bulletin entitled "The Home Vegetable Garden," with forty pages of cultural directions and elaborate planting tables. Then surely nothing remained for the department but to issue a cook book, and it is now being distributed, just as the early vegetables are ready. It is "Preparation of Vegetables for the Table," Farmers' Bulletin No. 256—or perhaps this is only another slap at the beef trust.

THE onion maggot has been more in evidence this season than for many years. It has done considerable damage to the crop of large onions and its ravages in the fields for sets has been serious.

SOME washouts from heavy rains are reported from the cucumber seed sections of Michigan. Some of the pickle men report replanting necessary from the same cause. It is not too late to replant in either case.

ROCHESTER seedsmen have had an uneven season, because of unseasonable and changeable weather, but the same factor has required second, and even third plantings, in some cases, and has contributed to bring the aggregate business to a quite satisfactory total.

THE end of the seed season finds all of the trade in good spirits. The profits of the season are satisfactory and reports in general indicate that little surplus will be carried over. The fact that there is complaint in several sections that one or two good bunches of onion seed did not show up after it was planted may be taken to mean that good onion seed was well cleaned up. It is stated that some field corn has been carried over. This being one of the less important items, causes little uneasiness. The important thing from now on is the condition and probable outcome of the growing crops. It seems to be generally felt that there will be need of all that may be harvested.

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

Further reports of the bad keeping qualities of mangels and beets, and the injury from frost, are to hand. I hear from one or two European growing districts that the plants are not breaking away as regularly as might be desired and, owing no doubt to a touch of rot in the bulbs, many patchy crops are predicted, especially in France, but still if some ideal weather conditions would now prevail and continue, the defect might still be made good.

All over Europe the weather has probably never been so unseasonable. Western Europe has been deluged with rain the last week and much damage to all sorts of crops is resulting. With it all the temperature is severely cold. Peas growing both for seed purposes and market have suffered the most, in some cases entirely killed by frost, and in consequence the pea crop all over Europe will be much reduced. This will have the effect of making trade in this line still worse next season. Growers will not plant an article that is subject to such damage by weather as the pea crops have suffered the last few years.

A lot of complaint is heard this year of the tulip mold, Botrytis parasitica, and it will considerably affect the number of first grade bulbs in Holland in the coming crop. It is a very annoying trouble, for the seedsmen who buy for bedding and private retail trade. The trouble cannot well be detected when bulbs are received from Holland in the autumn, but when they bloom it makes itself known by spoiling the growth and thereby causing the retail customer to come back on the seedsman for having sold bulbs of inferior quality. There does not appear to be any remedy except burning the affected bulbs.

PURITY

A grand magnificent white, of very large size, and great length and strength of stem, of unequaled beauty and substance. A bunch of a dozen sprays makes as good a show as a dozen of the best white carnations and can be used wherever carnations are used. Bulbs will be ready by the middle of June. Price of bulbs, first grade (composed of mammoth, large and first size bulbs), $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000. Second grade bulbs, $2.50 per 100; $20.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate. Cash must accompany all orders from unknown parties.

Further reports of disaster caused by Vesuvius to seed crops growing around the fertile base of the mountain are to hand. Many sowings of annuals, such as asters, stocks, zinnias, etc., are ruined. Fortunately, it occurred early enough for a second sowing to be made and the harm in that case will be that the harvesting will be slightly later and of course lighter in consequence. B. J.

WEED KILLER

"TARGET BRAND" WEED KILLER is the result of exhaustive experiments and can be truthfully claimed to be the most economical as well as the most effective killer ever offered. One gallon makes 50 gallons of treating liquid, sufficient to cover a space 450x450 feet. It is far cheaper to use than labor for weeding. Try a sample gallon and convince yourself. Our reputation and guarantee stand behind every package. When properly applied and used according to directions, weeds are scarce after the first application, and remain so all season.

WASHINGTON.

State of Trade.

While the solons tarry at the national capital there will be dinners—consequently decorations. Good stocks of Killarney, Liberty and Bridesmaid are being used. The inferior grades of roses are a drug, sweet peas, sweet williams and other outdoor flowers being taken in preference. Cut rambler roses sell better than the common grade of greenhouse roses. Snapdragon, coreopsis and water flowers are in quantity. Though low prices prevail, it is really surprising what a great amount of outdoor stock is being sold. There is considerable movement in rose plants for summer planting.

On June 9 the city was visited by an unusually heavy wind storm, with great rainfall. Many trees on the capitol grounds and in the street parking were broken off or damaged. No great loss was sustained by any of the growers, though several acknowledged that they got a scare. SCOTTY.

PETERBOROUGH, ONT.—Frank Mason, is clearing land for an addition to his place, 22x40 feet.

SEDALIA, MO.—Chas. A. Pfeiffer reports a heavy Decoration day business and several fine rains which have revived interest in outdoor planting.

Chiffon Band Ribbons

The most attractive Ribbons for Summer Decorations. These light-weight ideas help wonderfully in getting everything just right.

SHENANDOAH, IA.—O. B. Stevens has 5,000 feet of glass in greenhouses, with about an equal area in hotbeds. He has quite an area of hardy stock of various kinds, and finds the business pushing him all the time, demand is so good.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D.—Joe Tosini is rebuilding two houses 16x80 and four houses 20x61. He has 18,000 feet of glass and six acres of ground. A very good increase in business is shown by comparing this year with 1905, and he is planning for another increase next season.

NEW ORLEANS.

The organization of the Southern Florists' Society at Chattanooga on May 22 is nothing new, but the subject is of importance enough to call the attention of the trade again to the new departure. Every florist in the south ought to send in his application. Once a member he will surely sometime feel the advantage of the society. It is very encouraging to see the enterprise represented already by five or six different states and everything from the start points to a bright future.

Dry weather and dull times are all that I can report. Our Memorial day is not much in New Orleans. November 1 is the day we remember our dead. It is too warm now to think of decoration, still a few soldiers' graves and Grand Army tombs were well remembered. It gave some work to a few florists, J. H. Menard seeming the busiest of all.

M. M. L.

WESTBURY STATION, N. Y. — Wm. Stuppe has discontinued business and removed to Woodlawn, New York City.

SOUTH BEND, IND.—Irving Gingrich and Miss Edith Maria Studebaker, daughter of Mrs. Henry Studebaker, were married June 6. The wedding was one of the largest of the season and the floral decorations were profuse.

PACIFIC COAST.

GOOD GROWING SEASON.

The peculiar climatic conditions which have prevailed in the vicinity of the Bay of San Francisco will result in a splendid line of nursery stock for the coming winter. It has been the custom from time immemorial to irrigate all such articles during the month of June to keep the roots in touch with the warm growing weather. This has not been necessary this season, and nursery stock of all descriptions, owing to the quantity of moisture in the ground, looks better than I have ever seen it at this time. Irrigation serves a purpose, but it is not to be compared with an easy rainfall, which, when falling on the dry ground, is entirely absorbed and made use of by the growing crop.

On the other hand a great deal of damage has been done to the early fruit crops in this section. The first crop of cherries was almost entirely spoiled, to say nothing of the harm done the growing wheat and barley. In many cases owing to the fact that the heavy rainfall caused it to lay down, it will be a complete loss.

As to the demand for nursery and ornamental stock for the coming season, it is yet a little early to get much definite information regarding what will be done. Some seem to think that California has received a black eye and it will take several seasons to restore this branch of trade to its normal aspect. I have not seen many of our large growers, but will make an effort in the near future to find out what the chances will be for the disposal of nursery stock in the coming fall and winter. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

State of Business.

Following the great San Francisco calamity business suffered a severe attack of "quietus," which became general. Excitement ran high, for seers and prophets predicted a similar fate for Portland and for two weeks we slept in our working clothes with one eye open toward the hills. But everything must have an end. Conditions changed, business assumed a most healthy tone and we have not witnessed one really dull day for a month.

Trade during May was so far ahead of the same month a year ago that there was no room for comparison. The reasons may be ascribed as follows: Tropical weather two months ahead of the scheduled date resulted in an overabundance of everything and one could almost hear the prices drop. But when heavy rains came and cooled the atmosphere the quality of stock improved and the public got busy.

The demand for flowers for Memorial day was unprecedented. Never was there such a clean sweep. We could have used twice as many carnations and roses, and when their supply was exhausted the limited variety of outdoor stuff sold almost as readily. Even bachelor buttons and their country cousins, the field daisies, joined in the solemn march to the cemeteries. We disposed of thousands of them in bunches of 100 at 50 cents a bunch. So complete was the sale of everything available that our local press made note of the fact.

And now come June weddings and school commencements, which are already much in evidence. The recent long cool spell having checked the progress of outdoor flowers, the demand, both local and out of town, is unusually large this year. We are prepared for all emergencies, as everything under glass is clean cut and of the highest quality. H. J. M.

SPOKANE, WASH.

W. S. Van Doren, who was recently made defendant by the Spokane Florist Co., which alleged in complaint against Van Doren that he failed to live up to a contract by which he was to sell to said company all roses of a certain variety grown by him, filed a counter complaint against the company May 31. Van Doren asserts in his complaint that the company failed to place the roses which he sold them in the hands of competent agents, and that as a result, large quantities of the roses were not disposed of, but were permitted to spoil and were given away. Mr. Van Doren alleges that owing to this procedure his business was damaged to the extent of $1,500. He sues for that amount.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are now enjoying the first really good weather we have had this summer, but Decoration day has come and gone and we are now in the midst of our quiet season. There were probably not over a dozen retailers in town who enjoyed the Memorial day business, but they all report that they were well satisfied, considering the difficulties under which the town is laboring.

There have been no new stores opened during the past week, but from the prospects we have retailers enough to supply the wants of the public. Since Decoration day there has been a very fair amount of funeral work, both for designs and sprays, as well as some few wedding decorations. The dealers did well for the first few weeks after opening, and in many cases old customers, although far removed from their old locations, are depending regularly upon their particular florist to accommodate them. The telephone service has again been restored, which is a great help to the retailers.

I made a tour this week among some of the sweet pea, aster and chrysanthemum growers in the neighborhood of San Mateo and Burlingame, to see what change had taken place on the hundreds of acres devoted to the growing of these flowers. I found in many cases the owners had taken advantage of the June rains and were marketing many thousands of bunches daily. They complained that it is not a paying proposition to cultivate and artificially water their stocks after this time, owing to the fact that the market is so limited and the prices received so low. From 35 cents to 50 cents per dozen bunches is the price received at present.

With asters, as far as I can learn, there will be marketed about half a crop; certainly not more than that. The heavy rains have again in this instance been a godsend, as it saved the watering of growing plants for a space of a month at least. I can say the same about the chrysanthemum crop, regarding quantity that will be grown. Fully half the acreage has been abandoned and the balance looks well and will undoubtedly be handled for the fall and winter trade.

For indoor stock, both roses and carnations are in poor demand this week. There was a very fair call for them for Memorial day, both for shipping and for local trade, but since then the prices asked have dwindled so much that the sum of $5 will easily fill all the vases in an ordinary sized floral establishment, and fully equip the retailer for the day's business.

Many of the growers who immediately after the fire concluded to let their houses dry up have reconsidered and will be in line with a good lot of stock for the fall, no matter what the summer business may amount to. I hope they will be well repaid for their faith in the readjustment of business matters in the town of Frisco.

Various Notes.

D. Gruettner, of Vallejo, was in town this week. Mr. Gruettner has given up his store and will in future devote himself to his nursery trade.

R. D. Hunter, of the Germain Seed Co., Los Angeles, spent several days here and will depart for a trip in the northern part of the state in a day or two.

The Cox Seed Co. has completed the first seed warehouse on the Glen Echo grounds. It is 35x150 feet and will be devoted to vegetable and grass seeds.

C. M. Robinson, of Rochester, N. Y., the well known horticultural engineer, has submitted to the city council of Oakland his recently completed plans for the beautifying of the city.

M. Theodore Kearney, of Fresno, recently deceased and well known as one of the most enthusiastic patrons of the gardening interests, has willed to the horticultural and viticultural departments of the University of California about $750,000.

Considerable money has been lost by the growers of Lilium longiflorum this season. There is usually a good demand at this time and many of the wholesalers had large plantings ready to market. The extremely low prices have played havoc with the profits.

The town of Alameda supports about half a dozen floral establishments. There has been a good demand for funeral work and several of the dealers report that the business done during the month of June was the largest in the history of the town.

The Misses Lacy, of Fruitvale, have a magnificent showing of gladioli and Japanese iris on their grounds. G.

LOOMIS, CAL.

A. Mitting sold his interest in the California Carnation Co. June 2, to his partner in that enterprise, H. L. McGowan.

Mr. Mitting has removed to Soquel, Cal., and is establishing there the Western Carnation Co. At Santa Cruz he is interested in the California Wholesale Florists Co. He expects to do a large business in the course of time at these favorable locations.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June 13-15, 1906.

A SCARCITY of first grade two-year cherry trees is predicted for next season.

THE first delivery of stock of the Spencer seedless apple is announced for fall of 1906.

NURSERYMEN on the Pacific coast, especially in central California, are enjoying a splendid growing season.

THE Harrison Nursery Co., York, Neb., reports a very prosperous season and has a dozen agents in the field for fall.

THE Schroeder-Son Nursery Co., formerly at Boulder, Colo., has not removed, but receives its mail from Lafayette, Colo., because of a change in mail routes.

DEAN & BILLINGSLY, Greenwood, Ind., have dissolved partnership, Mr. Billingsly to continue the Greenwood nursery. Mr. Dean will go into the nursery business at Indianapolis.

J. A. YOUNG, of the Aurora Nursery Co., Aurora, Ill., was at Indianapolis June 9. He reports an excellent season's business, especially in shrubbery, and will extend his operations next year.

J. WILKINSON ELLIOTT, Pittsburg, found it impossible to get away for the nurserymen's convention this week, and his address will therefore not be presented as announced. C. J. Brown has also withdrawn from the program.

SOME of the retail nurserymen in Iowa and other western states make more than the usual complaint of the competition of itinerant dealers, who have offered apple trees, etc., at one-half or even one-third the prices asked by the local man who must stand back of the stock.

THE Crowder City Nursery Co., Crowder City, I. T., has filed articles of incorporation. Harry R. Russell, Chas. M. Smith, Lewis A. Hollis, James B. Henderson, Horace W. Murry, John R. Banks and Redmond D. Hooser are the incorporators. The capital authorized is $25,000, of which $2,300 is paid in.

NURSERYMEN CONVENE.

DALLAS, TEX., June 13.—The thirty-first annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen was called to order at the rooms of the Commercial Club at 10 a. m., with an attendance which caused President Albertson to express his pleasure. The total is well up to the best previous records, all the old-timers being present, while many new faces made the badge-book unusually useful. Most of the members from a distance came in last evening on a special on the M. K. & T., which had picked up the Rochester car, the delegation via St. Louis and the good delegation from Kansas City, where the Western Nurserymen's Association had held its semi-annual session June 11.

The addresses of welcome were followed by the president's address, the reports of officers and committees, the routine work being well cleaned up before adjournment for lunch. The afternoon of Wednesday is given to the protective associations. Essays and new business will occupy the mornings of Thursday and Friday, the afternoons being open for entertainment and trading, the prospects being that more orders than usual will be booked between the members.

Following adjournment most of the visitors from the north and east will proceed to Houston and visit a number of the principal orchards en route home.

The Market.

While business remains about the same, there is a very decided difference in the market conditions as compared with last week. Good long-stemmed roses are just about equal to the demand. Of short stock there is a considerable surplus, there being seemingly no outlet for this grade. Short Kaiserins in particular are being thrown away by the hundred.

Carnations also have dropped from $3 to $1.50 for the best, and unless something unexpected happens will soon follow close on the heels of the short grade of Kaiserin. Sweet peas are very soft and have seen their best days for this season. Several thousand longiflorum lilies are also awaiting a buyer. Peonies are arriving in large shipments.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club's regular meeting, held June 6, brought out but a small attendance, owing to the extreme heat. Aside from several warm arguments on price cutting, nothing of particular interest took place.

Thousands of rose bushes at the Windemere gardens, Highland park, are in full bloom.

A terrific hail storm passing over Northville, Mich., broke about 4,000 square feet of glass at J. M. Dickson's place.

Visitors: Mr. Smith, of Smith & Fetters, Cleveland. H. S.

WAUSAU, WIS.—Christ Lund has the sympathy of the community and of the trade at large in the death of his only son, aged 9 years, who was drowned here recently.

OWATONNA, MINN.—The recent addition of 8,000 feet of glass to the establishment of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co. has been completed and planted to Kate Moulton and Richmond roses. Trade has been exceptionally good the past season and good prices have prevailed.

FORT WAYNE, IND.—The marriage is announced of John J. Lanternier and Miss Laura C. Schuckman. The service was solemnized at St. Mary's Catholic church and was followed by an elaborate wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Lanternier are now domiciled at 2508 Fletcher avenue.

DENVER.

The fishing season opened June 1 and a number of the craft took advantage of it. J. A. Valentine, N. A. Benson, E. S. Kennedy and others went up the Platte to Decker's. Mr. Benson catching the largest rainbow trout, weighing nearly six pounds, was declared the champion.

E. J. Reynolds, of the Scott Floral Co., has returned from the east, reporting a very pleasant trip.

W. W. Wilmore is bringing in some of the finest white, pink and red peonies seen in some time, and the select ones retail for $2 per dozen.

The usual number of June weddings are now on, while graduation day calls for many flowers. Business since Decoration day has kept up remarkably well. E. S. K.

TAUNTON, MASS.

Taunton Greenhouses report that Memorial day business far surpassed all previous years' records. Every flower procurable was sold and many late orders could not be executed. Trade in bedding plants since Easter has been very good. At present wedding and funeral orders use a good deal of material and prospects are bright for excellent trade all through June.

ALLENTOWN, PA.—Kroninger Bros. have bought twenty-three acres of what is known as the Jesse Keck tract for $14,000. It adjoins their property and will be used for the extension of their business.

FORT SCOTT, KAN.—I. Parker & Son have bought the Roselawn Greenhouses from Alma S. Patterson. The establishment will be consolidated with that already owned by them and located at South Horton street. They will drill for gas for heating purposes.

VIRDEN, ILL.—J. W. Garner, who has been reported as starting in the greenhouse business, is closing out his other interests. Material has been ordered for a house 17x80 and another 10x80. Steam heat for 2,500 square feet will be provided and the plant is to be in operation by September 1.

MCKINNEY, TEX.—It was eight years ago that G. W. Taylor started in the greenhouse business with a few cold frames. He now has one of the most up-to-date plants in northern Texas. A new windmill and steel tower costing $1,200 has just been added. A considerable line of nursery stock is also handled.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Concerning Photographs.

There is one matter to which I should like to call the attention of the readers of the Review, and especially of those who have photographs taken. I would also like to ask consideration of the matter of, as I think, marring the beauty of a fine photograph of a house of roses, carnations or other stock with employees and others in the same photograph. Now, in my opinion, when a florist wishes to show a specimen plant or a fine house of something, people certainly ought to be left out, or taken in a separate picture. Not very long ago a fine photograph of a house of carnations was printed, which was almost wholly obscured by men, women and children, twelve in all, and it is seldom I find a photograph of this kind but what there are one or more persons in it. This may be a peculiar notion of mine, and no doubt I may run up against something hard, but I certainly would like to know what others think about it. N. B. Stover.

PRESERVATIVES FOR BENCHES.

Will it be of any advantage to cover the bottoms of the beds, where I aim to plant some mums and carnations, with a coat of tar? Will it help to keep out some of the little ants, bugs, etc., which infest the soil so much here? Would I get any bad effects from putting the tar on the wood before laying the dirt if I should let the tar get thoroughly dry? G. W. T.

With the tar put on new boards and allowed to get perfectly dry it would have no bad effects on the plants and would preserve the wood, but would not be congenial to the roots of the plants when they reached the boards, which the roots of all healthy and vigorous plants are sure to do. I would much prefer to give the surface of the boards a heavy coat of crude petroleum. It will preserve the boards better than the tar and there will be not the slightest danger of any injury to the roots, and it will quite as effectively destroy any of "the little ants, bugs, etc." W. S.

Moline, Ill.—The Tri-City Florists' Club met June 7 with Wm. H. F. Knees. The feature of the afternoon was the laying of the cornerstone for a new greenhouse 27x110 to be erected this season by Mr. Knees.

GREENHOUSE PAINT.

The Lord & Burnham Co. has made a long series of exhaustive experiments with painting in greenhouses for the purpose of finding a white lead and method of mixing it that will make it free from cracking and less liable to mildew or peel off.

It seems that in all pulp-ground lead, that is, ground in oil, there is an excess of moisture. This moisture causes it to peel. By kiln-drying the lead the Lord & Burnham Co. expels practically all the moisture. Then the lead is ground finer than the finest flour. This grinding makes it incorporate thoroughly and easily with the oil. This lead will then take twenty-five per cent more oil than other leads and for the same reason will go just that much farther.

All the oil used is first tank-settled for at least four months. This not only purifies the oil, but cures it in a way that increases its elasticity and binding powers.

In a series of experiments with the introduction of zinc, with the idea of protecting the paint against the disastrous effects of salt air, as experienced by the Long Island florists, it has been found that ten per cent of zinc greatly increases the life of the paint, while an excess of ten per cent, because of its extreme hardness, causes disastrous cracking.

EASTON, PA.

A. L. Raub & Co. recently had a large decoration for the Warren Foundry & Machine Co. banquet at Phillipsburg, N. J. The large building was draped with flags and bunting. Seven long tables were handsomely decorated with Beauties, Gates, Brides and sweet peas. The work was done by Paul Kaffke.

A. L. Raub & Co. are getting bids for a house 40x200 in which they will grow American Beauties.

Chas. Buenning says he never had a Decoration day like that of this year. He sold out and had to refuse orders.

Mr. Freyhardt has sold his greenhouses to Henry Wieskopf, formerly with Charles Buenning.

Arthur Kleinhanz's carnations are looking fine for this time of the year. They are the best seen in this section for years. He is putting the finishing touch to his new house.

DALLAS, TEX.—The Green Floral and Nursery Co. has put on the street a new white wagon trimmed with gold.

EAST ORANGE, N. J.—Some one broke into the greenhouse of George Perkins on the night of May 29 and cut down a quantity of stock as with a sickle.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Business last week is reported by most of the trade to have been very good. The planting season was in full swing and on that account all of the dealers are kept going at a lively rate. It appears that there has been more planting done this year than in any previous season. Geraniums in 4-inch pots have been wholesaling at $1.25 a dozen. It is evident that a great many more were grown this season than last year. Outside of geraniums there is not a great deal on hand. Nearly every order from outside calls for a number of Baby Rambler roses, we presume on account of the fact of it being so heavily advertised.

The cut flower trade is slow. The annual meeting of the Federation of Women's Clubs created some demand, especially for American Beauty, but it did not last long enough to give the dealers a chance to make much. Roses are now plentiful, whereas a week ago they could not be bought for any price. Carnations are back to 75 cents a dozen. Decoration day they were sold quite readily at $1 and $1.50 a dozen, and it was not a matter of price, but a question of getting them.

St. Paul.

L. L. May & Co. report good business in the planting line. Retail business has been somewhat quiet, but funeral work keeps up.

Holm & Olson are busy getting their new store in shape, which they intend to occupy about July 1. They are having a skylight in the rear, which will act as a conservatory and will no doubt present a good appearance.

C. F. Vogt says business is good, but the trade is mostly in the plant line.

H. Puvogel says that this is the best plant year he has had, and that he is still buried in orders.

Minneapolis.

The Whitted Floral Co. now has one of the prettiest stores in the city. The display windows are large and give ample room to make a good showing.

Carl Johannsen, with the Powers Mercantile Co., says trade is keeping up fine. He says Saturday is his day, as he sells carnations almost by the thousand.

Rice Bros. are doing a nice business, shipping considerable stock into the country. They also report a good city business.

Will & Son are busy building their new range of houses, which when complete will be one of the finest in this section. FELIX.

SIZE OF STEAM LINE.

What size steam line will it take to supply three houses each 18x200 for carnations and one house 21x200 for roses and what size opening will it take in the boiler to supply the size line that is required? The houses are five feet to the gutter and ten feet to the ridge.

T. W. C.

To supply the four houses in question with steam the main supply pipe should be a 6-inch. If the boilers are provided with 4-inch openings and are worked in a battery of two or three, better satisfaction will be secured than from using one large boiler. The boilers can be yoked together by a cross line of 6-inch pipe fed from the boilers through 4-inch ripples.

L. C. C.

PIPING FOUR HOUSES.

I am building four houses 15x112, running east and west, glass in the west end, south wall three feet high, with two feet of glass. I have two No. 1 Kroeschell boilers rated to heat 6,000 feet of glass each, also some 2-inch pipe. How shall I pipe the houses to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in 15 below zero weather?

F. E. K.

As it is not stated, I assume that the four houses are separated by division walls. If so, the following amount of piping will be required. One 3-inch flow pipe running under the ridge to the far end of the house and returning by nine 2-inch pipes in each if they are detached and separated by alleys. If separated only by division walls use nine returns in each of the outside houses and eight in each of the protected houses. If the houses are built on the ridge and furrow plan and the space under the roof forms a single room, the last plan should be followed.

L. C. C.

TOO FAR AWAY.

I have a greenhouse 18x100, the hot-water heating plant being located at one end. I wish to add another house 9x32 at the farther end. This house will have a double boarded wall four and one-half feet high on the north side, the south side two and one-half feet boarded and eighteen inches glass. The west end will be glass above two and one-half feet. The sashbars are seven feet on one side and six feet on the other, the ridge being seven feet high. The flow pipes are 2½-inch and the returns 2-inch. Under the center bench I wish to run a 1½-inch pipe for the flow for the new house, or would you run 2-inch? What size pipe for returns will be needed and how many to keep the small house at 40 degrees in zero weather?

E. L.

The amount of piping necessary for your house 9x32 should be as follows: A riser or flow of 1½-inch pipe will be ample to supply heat for the house provided the water is at a temperature of 170 to 180 degrees. With water at this temperature nine 1¼-inch returns through the house will be adequate. If the boiler is at one end of the house 18x100 feet and the new building is at the opposite end, there may be some difficulty in heating this house during severe weather, but under ordinary conditions it should not be difficult. The chief obstacle to success in heating this house will be found in the length of the flow pipes, if they are as I have assumed in the above statement.

L. C. C.

FLOWS AND RETURNS.

The main house is 17x80 feet and nine and one-half feet to the ridge, with three benches; bottom heat. I have figured on three lines of 2-inch flow pipes the length of the house, with twelve lines of 1¼-inch return pipes. Also two lines of 2-inch and six lines of 1¼-inch to heat a small house which is connected to the larger one. The small house is 10x80. My heater is a Wilks 30x42. Will one 2-inch flow and one 2-inch return be enough for all the water pipes, or shall I use two of each? The heater has two 3-inch openings at top and bottom. I will want a temperature of 60 or 65 degrees with zero weather.

J. W. G.

The house 17x80 feet requires 550 feet of radiation. This can be supplied by the use of one 2½-inch flow pipe and fifteen 1¼-inch returns, five under each of the three benches. The small house requires 340 feet of radiation, which can be cared for by using a 2-inch flow from the boiler to the distant end of the house and nine 1¼-inch returns. If your heating plant is so arranged as to permit carrying the 2½-inch flow direct from the boiler through the large house and the 2-inch flow from the other opening in the boiler direct to the smaller house, I think the results will be more satisfactory than to attempt to heat both systems from a single flow. If one flow were to be used it should be 3-inch at least. L. C. C.

DEFECT NOT APPARENT.

My boiler is a No. 4 Kroeschell, thirty-six inches wide, thirty-four inches high, nine feet long; the grate is thirty-six inches long and the boiler has fourteen 3½-inch flues seven feet long. The house I am heating is 30x101 feet, five feet to the plate, thirteen feet to the ridge. I have the up-hill system, all pipes under the benches. I use 4-inch boiler flues. There are two flows out of the boiler. They lead out one and one-half feet above the top of the boiler. The front flow goes across the house, rising two inches to the other side, and eight inches to the farther end of the house. The returns come back about four inches below the flows. To every flow there are two returns, with the exception of one flow and one return I put in later. I have fourteen strings in the house, five flows and nine returns. It is hard to keep it up to 50 degrees at night when 10 degrees below zero outside. What is the defect?

C. H. T.

I can not detect any defect, either in the installation of the pipe or the amount supplied. In fact, the house should be heated with fewer pipes. If the water can be heated to 180 degrees and the circulation is good there should be no difficulty in carrying this load. You have only about 1,500 square feet of radiation and the No. 4 Kroeschell is rated to carry 3,500 lineal feet of 4-inch pipe, or about 4,100 square feet of radiation. L. C. C.

CARE OF APPARATUS.

Should the water be removed from a hot water boiler during the summer? Should hot water pipes be emptied also? If they are not emptied, what is the damage done? Should a small fire be started when the pipes and boiler are empty to dry out the boiler? What causes the pipes to sweat in summer? Should the pipes be painted to preserve them? How long does it take hot water pipes to rust through? Should a Furman steam boiler be emptied in summer?

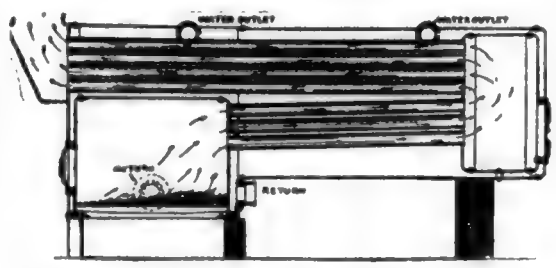
H. & C.

At the close of the season, and several times during each season, the boiler and heating pipes in either a steam or hot water heating plant should be drained and washed as thoroughly as possible, but never should be left empty. If after draining as above noted, the plant can be filled with rain-water there will be less deterioration than with the use of well or spring water. Before starting the fires in the fall drain off the water that has stood in the plant during the summer, refill with fresh water and go ahead, if all joints are in good repair.

Never make a fire of any kind in an empty boiler, whether it be a steam or a hot water boiler unless you wish to ruin it.

The so-called sweating of water pipes is due to the fact that they have a lower temperature than that of the surrounding air, which causes the moisture of the atmosphere to condense upon their surface.

Although some growers paint the pipes to preserve them, I believe it is false economy, and pipes should never be painted. A rusty pipe is a more efficient radiator than a painted pipe. In other words, more heat can be recovered from a given amount of coal with rusty pipes than with painted ones. You lose in fuel more than you save in pipes that are painted. L. C. C.



A NEW ESTABLISHMENT.

I am a beginner and have just arranged to erect two houses and ask you to help me in regard to heating them. The two houses are connected, of wood construction, each 20x75, eleven feet to the ridge, and side walls five feet. One wall has two feet of glass, the houses running east and west, with the boiler shed butted against the east end of the houses. The west ends are glass. These houses are for growing a general line of greenhouse plants, to be heated with hot water. What size boiler will I need? How will I place it and how will I pipe the houses to a temperature of about 60 degrees where the outdoor temperature gets down to 20 below zero at times? The glass is 16x24, double strength. Had I better get a boiler of twice as much capacity, as I intend to add two more houses next year? E. H. O.

Since you have asked for suggestions in addition to the question regarding the heating of your houses my first is, if not too late, that you change the direction of your houses from east and west to north and south and that you place your boiler pit and potting shed at the north end of the houses. North and south houses get more sun during winter than east and west houses when built even-span, and the potting shed at the north is a decided protection in sections where the temperature falls below zero and winds are prevalent, as in your state.

I would further suggest that you get a boiler that can be used as a steam boiler, pipe the houses on a steam basis and run them with hot water during mild weather, but change to steam during severe weather. With a large plant this will be a decided saving in first cost and will be an advantage, as the temperature of the houses can be held more uniform during severe spells with steam than with hot water. If the houses are to be piped as above suggested the following specifications will serve:

Each house should be provided with about 430 square feet of radiation. This, if supplied by 1¼-inch pipes, will require thirteen returns the length of the house. If the returns are arranged under the benches a 2½-inch riser carried from the main flow to the most distant end of the house, beneath the ridge, can be used to feed the returns. The houses thus equipped will be satisfactory for hot water in mild weather and can be changed to steam in severe weather if a boiler generating steam is used.

If you are to add two houses next season I would advise the use of a boiler rated to carry 3,000 feet of radiation; not less than 2,500 feet. The boiler pit should be deep enough to place the boiler well below the level of the returns in the houses and of ample capacity. Small boiler pits are a great inconvenience.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

Excellent growing conditions now prevail. Carnations in the field are in splendid shape. Sweet peas, roses and deciduous shrubs are in fine condition. Mums are benched and are coming right along.

Roses in Texas are in bloom outdoors from April to November, and what the florists here need is enough bloom to furnish customers only during the months of December, January, February, and part of March. Raised benches have been used. When the sun shines, the heat is intense. Red spider and mildew run riot. The benches dry out almost as quickly as watered. An east and west house should never be used. In one case one end of a mum house was planted in rose stock that was left over, with practically no care until after the mums were cut. The house was built for sash, which were taken out in the spring and put on again each fall. After the sash was put on the plants were given the same care one would take if growing them in the north, and the result was very satisfactory. There was no sign of mildew until during the wet spell in April, and that was easily killed. So my advice is to plant in solid beds in sash houses running north and south. Take the sash off during the summer and put them on only when there is fear of frost. Bride, Maid, Gould and even Beauties will do well with a light feeding twice during the season.

H. O. Hannah, of Sherman, was called to his old home in Moberly, Mo., to attend the funeral of his mother.

NARCISSUS.

ROCHESTER.

The plantsmen have had a good time and have cleaned out well. At the finish few plants could be purchased at any price, and empty houses are all that can be found, a silent testimony of a good season. All seem satisfied.

We notice today one of the most interesting displays we have seen in years, a new single scarlet geranium, placed in pyramidal form bordered with the small-leaved variegated kind and fringed with evergreen moss. Vick's people do not intend to distribute this new variety until next fall, but the exhibit is well worth the room.

THE MATTER OF CONSTRUCTION

It's just a simple U-Bar rafter encasing the sash bar core. A combining of both rafter and sash bar. That's why

The Test of Construction

Of what use is first-class workmanship and the best material if the construction of your house is antiquated and out-of-date? There is as much in the style of house as in the material of which it is built, and too much stress cannot be laid on the "right kind of construction."

There is a special house for each special condition and the ordinary planing-mill knows nothing of construction details. The first step toward "right construction" is to get our catalogue and estimate. Write now and start right—erect houses that will enable you to compete with the other fellow.

H AND C

of this boiler question gets down to the coal question—what does it burn? What heat do you get for the coal you burn? One boiler may have a grate that cuts out the ashes in an "improved" way, and by the same token it will have more ashes to cut out. The more coal you burn, the more the ashes—but do those ashes mean an equivalent in heat? We can prove to you that the Hitchings boiler is the best greenhouse boiler—prove it by what it has proven for others.

The new gutter with drip gutter, and the way sash bars and clasps are attached.

You Have Read

advance notes and heard a good bit of talk about our new V shaped gutter, and here it is—and with it some straight, plain facts about it.

Sectional view, showing gutter bracket, drip gutter socket, etc.

What it Does and Why

—Starts the smallest amount of water running at once.
—Has greatest water area and still casts least shade.
—Drip gutter actually does take care of all drip.
—All bolts are countersunk, leaving no points for condensation.
—It is cast smooth and straight in lengths of 8 feet, 3¾-inches.
—This length means: a straighter gutter line, economy of posts, the reduced labor of setting posts and the making of gutter joints.
—It costs no more than other gutters.

It's the only gutter that takes care of condensation as condensation should be taken care of—It adds great strength while decreasing the shade. Fully described in catalog L. T.

AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY.

THE BOSTON MEETING.

The annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society was held at Horticultural hall, Boston, June 15 and 16, in conjunction with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society's annual peony show. It is a difficult problem to select suitable dates for such an exhibition. Probably those decided upon were as good as could have been made for New England, but were much too late for states to the south and west. Exhibitors, with the exception of C. W. Ward and E. A. Reeves, all hailed from Massachusetts and it was to be regretted that the largest part of Mr. Ward's extensive collection, which had been in cold storage eight or ten days, dropped to pieces before being staged. It is the same experience he had at Chicago last year.

While climatic conditions prevented exhibits coming from a distance, and while there were comparatively few entries in the Peony Society's classes, there were a good many visitors from other states and a surprising amount of interest was shown in the flowers by the general public, who attended the exhibition in large numbers.

There was a good competition in most of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society's classes and the peony display comfortably filled the main exhibition hall, other exhibits being staged in the smaller halls. In looking over the exhibits the urgent need of such an organization as the American Peony Society was speedily made apparent. Such a pale flesh variety as Baroness Schroeder was pure white in one exhibit, while side by side another grower had a bright pink variety bearing the same name. Lady Alexandra Duff and other sorts showed similar variations in color from different growers.

The Awards.

For the largest and best collection, one flower of each, George Hollis was first with a splendid collection which included some very fine seedlings, T. C. Thurlow & Co. second. For twelve best and most distinct varieties, six blooms of each, C. W. Ward won with a nice selection, T. C. Thurlow & Co. second. T. C. Thurlow & Co. led for fifty white with a fine vase of Festiva maxima, Judge W. C. Hoitt being second with the same variety. The second prize for fifty pink, any shade, went to Thurlow. E. A. Reeves, Cleveland, O., had the best fifty crimsons, T. C. Thurlow & Co. second.

There was little competition in the classes allotted to amateur growers. James McKissick took first for collections of white varieties and pink varieties and for six blooms of any one variety.

In the Massachusetts Horticultural Society's classes there was better competition. For thirty or more double varieties Wm. Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, was in the lead with a well grown and staged collection, H. A. Stevens Co. second, J. McKissick third, George Hollis fourth, and T. C. Thurlow fifth. Wm. Whitman also won the Kelway silver gilt medal for eighteen varieties single or double, George Hollis taking the bronze medal. Wm. Whitman was again in the lead for twelve named double varieties six flowers of each. For specimen bloom Dr. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust gardener, was first for Baroness Schroeder, T. C. Thurlow second for Lady Alexandra Duff. T. C. Thurlow had the best collection of named singles, Wm. Whitman second. George Hollis had the best twelve vases of Japanese singles. Dr. C. G. Weld led in the large china vase class, followed by E. L. Lewis and E. B. Wilder. For six named double whites A. H. Fewkes won with a pretty set. His varieties were Avalanche, Festiva, Duke of Wellington, Festiva maxima, Mont Blanc and Mme. Crousse. In this class T. C. Thurlow was second, H. A. Stevens Co. third. Mr. Fewkes also won for six rose pink varieties, H. A. Stevens Co. second. The latter firm was first for six salmon pink varieties. T. C. Thurlow had the best set of red and crimson varieties, H. A. Stevens Co. second.

H. A. Stevens Co. led for vase of twenty-five white or blush and T. C. Thurlow for pink or rose, with the beautiful bright pink L'Esperance. W. Whitman had the best vase of red or crimson, H. A. Stevens Co. second. For named varieties double, non-commercial growers, prizes went to J. L. Blanchard, E. L. Lewis and James McKissick.

There were numerous displays not for competition. A. H. Fewkes and Mrs. E. M. Gill each had fine collections. E. J. Shaylor had a beautiful table of about 200 varieties, including many of the best novelties from Dessert and other European hybridists. C. W. Ward, T. C. Thurlow, Joseph H. White, James Wheeler gardener; Walter Hunnewell, T. D. Hatfield gardener; Mrs. I. Low, Mrs. J. B. Lawrence and others made displays.

The Best Sorts.

In the way of strictly first-class novelties there were few sorts shown which were not seen last year in Chicago. E. J. Shaylor's French varieties were very promising. George Hollis, among some good things, showed Bunker Hill, a first-class deep rosy pink which should prove a fine commercial sort. T. C. Thurlow also had some good seedlings; of which we especially admired Pride of Essex.

The following varieties, some old and others comparatively new, we especially admired. All the colors are such as to commend them to commercial growers. Festiva maxima, still a leader in its color; Boule de Neige, La Tendresse, Mme. August Dessert, deep daybreak pink, rather a flat flower; M. Dupont, white flaked with crimson; Marguerite Gerard, Ideality, a lovely semi-double rosy pink; Langport Queen, Aurora, semi-double blush white; Whittleyi plena, Duchesse de Nemours, Mme. Lebon, one of the best in the deep rosy pink class; Mont Blanc, Venus, soft pink, broad guard petals; Lady Alexandra Duff, one of the gems of the show; Baroness Schroeder, Halbid, deep pink; Belle Alliance, white; Mme. Calot, Mrs. Rudd, ivory white, Mme. Emile Lemoine, Mme. Boulanger, Marie Jacquin, Juliette Dessert, Camille Calot, James Kelway, a fine scented white variety; Mrs. Gwyn Lewis, dwarf white, fragrant; and L'Esperance, bright pink.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

Miscellaneous exhibits included a collection of eremuri from Mount Desert Nurseries, Bar Harbor, including E. Elwesianus, Turkestanicus, robustus superbus and robustus, awarded a silver medal. Blue Hill Nurseries, Julius Heurlin, proprietor, staged a superb collection of hardy herbaceous flowers in 150 varieties. The labeling was a special feature which other exhibitors might well copy; awarded a silver medal. The same exhibitor had cut sprays of eighty ornamental deciduous trees and shrubs, including a pretty golden form of Acer Negundo and a much improved form of Fagus sylvatica purpurea, named major.

W. W. Rawson received honorable mention for Gladiolus cardinalis Ackermanni and F. J. Rea a similar award for a variety of Anchusa Italica. W. Heustis & Son had a large collection of cut sprays of trees and shrubs. Mrs. J. L. Gardner, William Thatcher gardener, staged a nice table of gloxinias, also Cypripedium Parishii well bloomed. Wm. Whitman showed Cattleya Gaskelliana.

Mrs. Oliver Ames, H. Cole gardener, had a fine tank of hardy nymphæas and other aquatics. C. W. Parker had a display of Iris pallida Dalmatica. James Crawshaw showed his new asparagus. F. L. Ames estate, W. N. Craig gardener, had a group of forty Miltonia vexillaria. The best plant carried eighty-five flowers and was awarded a cultural certificate.

Business Meeting.

The annual meeting of the American Peony Society was held on Friday afternoon, June 15, with a fair attendance. The usual reports were read by the secretary, president and treasurer. The latter's report showed receipts $491.67, expenses $135.93, balance $355.74; membership thirty-eight.

The following new members were elected: J. F. Rosenfield, West Point, Neb.; E. B. Heuges, Westfield, Mass.; O. H. Dickinson, Springfield, Mass.; William Kline, A. L. Gould, Geo. B. Petersen, Fair Lawn, N. J.; B. H. Farr, Reading, Pa.

No papers or essays were read but informal discussions took place on several topics, in which Messrs. C. W. Ward, C. S. Harrison, A. H. Fewkes, E. A. Reeves, E. B. Hedges and others took part. Mr. Coit, of Cornell, spoke of the check list they are working on at Cornell to cover all known named varieties. This when completed will be issued in bulletin form and will be one of the most valuable publications for peony specialists ever issued. Mr. Coit has examined various libraries for all literature pertaining to peonies and has spent a great amount of time on his work. The final catalogue will contain a description of each variety from its original introducers, also from the plant as growing. All duplicates or synonyms will also be given. A list of some 500 French sorts from Modeste Guerin, Verdier, Mechim, Calot, Crousse, Lemoine and Dessert, and about as many English sorts from Kelway, in addition to the American sorts will be given.

A question was asked as to the cause of and a remedy for the blight or fungus disease affecting peonies. This was stated to be Botrytis vulgaris. No remedy was suggested. C. S. Harrison thought it did not affect the health of the plants. A fungoid root disease, however, proves more harmful. For this a change of land each year was recommended. Mr. Harrison recommended the leaving of the dying shoots of the peonies over the crowns as a winter mulch instead of cutting them away.

Some discussion took place over the method which had been recommended of earthing up the stems of peonies to make them produce adventitious buds. The general opinion of members seemed to be that this method of propagation, while it may produce a lot of plants in a short time, will give plants lacking in vitality and that many will be blind. Several years will be necessary under most favorable conditions to produce strong plants. Present methods of propagation are much to be preferred.

The vagaries of some varieties were discussed. A certain sort would come pink one year, white the next and in the third or fourth year would become a fixed color.

Election of officers resulted in the selection of the old board unanimously, as follows: President, C. W. Ward, Queens, N. Y.; vice-president, William A. Peterson, Chicago; treasurer, J. H. Humphreys, Germantown, Pa.; secretary, A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass.

Invitations for 1907 were received from Norfolk, Va., and Ithaca, N. Y. It was voted to meet at the latter place.

The Dinner.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston entertained visiting members of the American Peony Society at a dinner at the Quincy House on the afternoon of June 15. About fifty sat down. At the short post-prandial exercises President James Wheeler presided. He welcomed the Peony Society to Boston and hoped to soon have the pleasure of its company again.

C. W. Ward, on being called upon, expressed the pleasure it always gave him to come to Boston, where he was always hospitably received. The American Peony Society came into existence owing to the defective nomenclature existing. It was an impossible thing to send to any three prominent growers for any peonies outside of a few well known sorts, like Festiva maxima, and expect to get the same article from each. The probabilities were that each would be of a different color. It was impossible to buy hundreds of any one sort and get any guarantee that they were true to name. In his own business he could have sometimes used 1,000 of one color for mass effect, but where could he obtain any such number and get them true to name? It is a small, unpretentious society, but trying to do the square thing in getting the nomenclature down to a correct basis.

C. S. Harrison thought the society stood for a little more than nomenclature. It stood for the beauty of this magnificent, hardy flower. He wished the society would send out a pamphlet telling people how to grow this beautiful hardy plant, so that front yards may be planted with them, rather than be devoted to such live stock as is often now the case.

After a few words from E. A. Reeves, W. C. Barry said the exhibition was a most creditable one. The peony is worthy of the attention of the most refined people. Many European plants are being constantly tried here and proved to be failures. The peony is peculiarly adapted for culture in America and a magnificent future is before it. The Peony Society is doing a grand work and he hopes it will go on and prosper.

The Visitors.

Some of the visitors were: W. C. Barry, Rochester, N. Y.; Mr. Coit, of Cornell, Ithaca, N. Y.; C. S. Harrison, York, Neb.; E. A. Reeves, Cleveland, O.; Geo. C. Thomson, Alex. Wallace, New York; C. Cropp, Chicago; C. W. Ward, Queens, N. Y.; John Ash, Pomfret, Conn.; F. C. Green, Warwick, R. I.; T. McCarthy, Providence, R. I.; Prof. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y.; Geo. A. Petersen, Fairlawn, N. J.; E. B. Hedges and H. J. Miller, Westfield, Mass.; James McPherson, Trenton, N. J.; B. H. Farr, Reading, Pa.

Convention Notes.

C. S. Harrison, the grand old man of Nebraska, was one of the greatest enthusiasts at the meeting. He stated that his peonies were in perfection for Memorial day. From his batch of 50,000 seedlings he expects some good things.

The show came too late for C. W. Ward and he was unable to make a fraction of the exhibit he had intended. He hopes to do better at Ithaca in 1907.

That the peony is the most popular of hardy flowering herbaceous plants was attested by the crowds who visited the show, scanned the exhibits and jotted down names of those sorts which took their fancy.

E. J. Shaylor's collection of 200 varieties, comprising, as it did, so many fine novelties, was a center of attraction. Mr. Shaylor has spent a lot of money on peonies and has one of the finest collections in the country.

George Hollis put up a grand collection of seedlings, some of which are destined to become popular commercial sorts. His single Japanese sorts seemed to be very popular with visitors.

The show was a little early for many of T. C. Thurlow's best sorts, Newburyport being about a week later than Boston. Many of his choicest varieties will no doubt be seen at the rose show on June 22 and 23.

For a purely amateur exhibit James McKissick, of West Newton, showed splendidly, having the cream of the English and French varieties.

The big china vase class is one worth perpetuating. We think, however, a vase filled with one shade of color much preferable to mixed ones.

Many wishes were expressed that the Peony Society would soon elect to come to Boston again. The flower it represents appeals to rich and poor alike, for all can grow it, something which cannot be said of roses, carnations and chrysanthemums. W. N. CRAIG.

Report of the Secretary.

The present membership is thirty-eight, not including two honorary members.

Since the last meeting I have had some correspondence with Prof. Whelzel, of Ithaca, in regard to the fungus which attacks the peony stems and leaves, and specimens were sent him last fall. He is making a study of this disease and expects to publish a report in regard to it. Any facts or observations in connection with this fungus that may have been observed by any members or others would be of value to him in this study and would be appreciated by him.

The exhibition in connection with the meeting at Chicago was held in one of the large banquet halls of the Auditorium hotel and was a very successful one, doing great credit to all concerned. The hall was well filled with exhibits, entirely of a commercial nature, although amateur classes were offered in the schedule. There were several displays other than peonies, including herbaceous plants and Baby Rambler roses from Vaughan's Seed Store and a display of pottery from the Ionia Pottery Co.

This show proved the practicability of exhibiting flowers which have been shipped from a distance and placed in cold storage. While they are in no way equal to freshly cut specimens, it makes it possible to preserve early varieties for late shows, thereby making the exhibition more interesting. As nearly every flower exhibited was named, it made a very instructive exhibition for the identification of varieties and in many cases illustrated the confusion existing in the nomenclature of the flower.

A feature which was entirely lacking was the display of flowers grown especially for exhibition purposes. While this is perhaps a matter which usually concerns the amateur, it is one which should receive the attention of the commercial grower as well. He would find himself amply repaid by making a plantation of a few specimen plants of each of his varieties, giving them extra attention in the way of feeding, water and staking. Many of the flowers in the Peterson collection approached the excellence of bloom which is to be obtained only in the above way, as well as several flowers in the Ward displays.

The most remarkable single display was made by E. A. Reeves, of Cleveland, O., who exhibited 100 blooms of the so-called Lee's Grandiflora rubra. Although there was a question as to the identity of this variety, there was none as to its quality. The flowers were well developed specimens borne on stems fully four feet in length, with magnificent foliage and immense, full double blooms of a deep, rich crimson color.

LADY ALEXANDRA DUFF.

In the year 1901 I sent to Kelway & Son for five plants. They flowered only imperfectly the following year, but I was afraid on account of these imperfect flowers that they were wrong. I immediately wrote them to send me five more plants in my shipment of that year. The next year, when the first five were two years old, they produced flowers of Festiva maxima. The second lot flowered well in 1904 and I showed them at the exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, in June, and they awarded me a first-class certificate for them.

At the rose show of this same society which followed the peony show in one week, Messrs. T. C. Thurlow & Son showed a peony under that name which they had imported from Kelway & Son, which I had on my grounds under two names—one imported from Kelway & Son in the year 1901 as Princess of Wales, and another one as James Kelway, later. I also have had the same peony from another grower in America as the James Kelway. At the last peony show, William Whitman's gardener, of Brookline, Mass., showed a Duchesse de Nemours (Calot) under the name of Lady Alexandra Duff, imported direct from Kelway & Son.

To sum it up, we have first Festiva maxima, second, Grandiflora nivea, an old variety of 1825—for this is the second variety which I received and which was awarded the first-class certificate by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in 190x. Third, we have the one sent Thurlow & Son, which I already had as Princess of Wales and James Kelway. Fourth we have the old variety of Duchesse de Nemours (Calot) which was sent to Mr. Whitman.

Here are two old and choice varieties taken from France and renamed, and perhaps we will yet find that others been given this name somewhere in Europe.

I am led to the conclusion that there is no such peony as Lady Alexandra Duff, or Lady A. McDuff, as it was first called. It has been, probably, a renaming of an old French variety from the very beginning. E. J. Shaylor.

BLACK SPOT ON ROSES.

I have young plants of roses, repotted a few weks ago. They are growing very nicely, but I have noticed that some leaves get one or more dark brown spots on them, causing them to turn yellow and look bad. Will you please advise me how to prevent the spread of the disease?

A. F.

This is a case of black spot, and as the stock is yet in pots the condition can be easily remedied. Pick off all affected leaves and burn them; keep the plants rather dry for a week and repot if necessary.

Black spot is usually caused by some condition which brings a sudden check to root action, thus lowering the vitality of the plants, such as overwatering during cold, damp weather, when evaporation is slow. The spots usually appear just before firing is necessary to keep up the temperature, or immediately after firing is dropped in the spring. By judicious care in firing, ventilating and watering, these conditions can be avoided and the following remedy will cause the disease to disappear after a few applications, even where it has got a good hold: Carbonate of copper, five ounces; ammonia, three quarts; sixty gallons of water; use a nozzle that will make a fine spray and carefully wash both upper and lower sides of the leaf. By repeating this treatment twice a week the spots will disappear. Ribes.

BORDEAUX MIXTURE.

Will you kindly tell me the ingredients and preparations required for making a barrelful of Bordeaux mixture? Is it considered good for thrips on roses, or is there something better? R. B.

The formula for Bordeaux mixture is as follows: Copper sulphate, two pounds; fresh lime, unslaked, one and one-half pounds; water, twenty gallons.

Here is the recipe as used at experimental stations: Put six gallons of water in a tub or barrel and hang in it four pounds of pulverized copper sulphate in a burlap or other coarse sack. Take water-slaked lime, adding water only as fast as it takes it up, and pour together. Before using, dilute to forty gallons.

Enough lime should be added to neutralize the free acid; if this is not done it will injure the foliage. To test this get 5 cents' worth of ferro-cyanide of potassium at a drug store and place in a small bottle of water. Add a few drops of this to the Bordeaux mixture before it is diluted; if it turns it brown the lime is deficient and more should be added until the ferro-cyanide has no effect. A slight excess of lime is generally desirable.

Bordeaux mixture, from all I can learn, has little effect in destroying thrips. For relief from this pest see last week's issue of the Review under the heading of "Roses," page 216. It gives directions for combatting thrips. Ribes.

TO STIFFEN STEMS.

Will you please tell me if there is a fertilizer, or anything, which I can put in carnation beds to grow good stiff stems to plants? Would air-slaked lime be an improvement? H. G. F.

If your soil does not naturally grow strong stems it is likely too light and does not contain enough lime. Perhaps you can find a soil that is heavier, which will grow strong stems and large flowers. If you can find a natural soil that contains these various elements in proper proportion, it is better than any combination you may mix.

I would not add lime to the compost, but would prefer to add it after the benches are filled and planted. Unless you know from experience that this particular batch of soil will not grow strong stems you had better wait and see what kind of growth it will produce. It will not take long to stiffen the stems after you see it is needed.

Air-slaked lime is good to use for that purpose, and when used properly it is a benefit to the soil. We prefer, however, to use hardwood ashes for that particular purpose, as it seems more effective. Wood ashes is a good plant food on account of the large percentage of potash it contains, and when it is used judiciously it is a great help during the flowering season. The time to apply the first dose is in the fall, just about the time the first crop of buds is showing. It will stiffen the stems and help develop the blooms. If the stems do not stiffen sufficiently from this first dose another may be given in four to six weeks. Trouble over weak stems does not appear, however, usually before early winter, and if you give the first application about October 1 and the next one between November 15 and December 1 you will be likely to see the plants respond nicely to the treatment.

Care should be taken not to use wood ashes too strong. They vary a great deal in strength and in using them it pays to keep on the safe side until you know just what you have. We use about a scant 3-inch potful to go halfway across a 5-foot bench to each row of plants. We find this quite sufficient, although some growers recommend much heavier applications. Do not apply it too often, as too much will harm your crop, especially during midwinter, when feeding should be light. Some varieties will respond to the effects of wood ashes much quicker than others, as you will soon find. If you use too much of it you will find many varieties produce very brittle stems, so that in handling them they will snap off at the joints easily.

It is understood, of course, that your plants are to be well established and strong when you do feeding of any kind. Then only are they in condition to take up what you give them.

MANNHEIM EXPOSITION.

I would respectfully advise that beginning May 1, 1907, and closing with October of the same year, the city of Mannheim, Germany, will hold an international horticultural and art exposition to commemorate the three hundredth anniversary of the advancement of Mannheim to the rank of a city. The town has upwards of 165,000 population, not counting Ludwigshafen on the other side of the Rhine, and is one of the principal manufacturing and commercial centers of the empire.

It is expected to make the exposition first-class in every respect and to give special emphasis to landscape gardening and to all branches of fruit and floriculture. Grounds selected include one of the handsomest city parks and are well adapted for the purpose. Much work has already been done on the exposition grounds. Our manufacturers of gardening appliances, seeds, etc., may find something in the exposition of interest to them.

Any inquiries directed to this consulate will be passed to the proper authorities, or they can be directed to the "komitee Gartenbauausstellung," Mannheim, Germany,

ANEMONE CORONARIA THE BRIDE.

Where quantities of white flowers are needed for cutting in early spring, this is one of the best plants for florists to grow. The roots should be planted very shallow, preferably in flats four to five inches deep, as soon as received, and kept in a cold frame until well leaved, when they may be removed to a cool greenhouse and given a light, airy position. Unless very early flowers are needed it is a good plan to allow them to remain in the frames all winter. A good freezing will not harm them in the least. If the flats can be stood over a spent hotbed where the roots can push through, it is simply astonishing the quantity and quality of flowers which will be produced. The last season we picked stems eighteen inches long from plants grown in this way and the picking season lasted over a month.

As cut flowers they cannot be too highly commended. We find they outlast carnations and, as they bloom in March and April they make a pleasant change from the ubiquitous carnation. They will not stand strong fumigation and should not be watered with any force from the hose, as it knocks the foliage and spike down and they do not straighten readily. The brilliant anemone succeeds well under the same treatment.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

SEASONABLE NOTES.

There is yet time to put in cuttings of late varieties to be used for late plantings, but it is about the hardest time of year to get them to root, as the heat dries up the sap in the cuttings so quickly. A moist atmosphere, heavy shade and continual spraying are necessary, and with all precautions the man who roots fifty per cent is doing pretty well at this time of year. Varieties that are naturally late are best to use for late planting, Chadwick, Yellow Chadwick, Mrs. Swinburne, Jeanne Nonin and Mrs. Geo. Beech being all excellent late kinds.

Just as soon as the benches can be filled, the main crop should now be planted, if not already done, as every day that the young stock is neglected means so much less in the net results.

Every year this question is asked me in one form or another: "What is the nearest one can plant to make the most money from a bench of a given length?" If one has a market for extra special blooms 8x10 inches is not too much space to allow for each single-stemmed plant, and with some heavy-foliaged varieties even more is better. These flowers should bring the grower half a dollar each, and if your market will not stand for that price, you might run two stems to each plant instead of one and figure on $3 per dozen as your selling price. Personally, I believe that there are many towns in this country where the local florist could make twice as much money on his chrysanthemum crop as he now does make if he grew at least a part of his crop to the highest possible quality, instead of trying to make every plant produce as many flowers as possible and trusting to providence to provide him with enough funeral work to use them up.

The florist himself is often to blame for the price he gets for his flowers. Without any but the most vague idea of the cost of producing a crop, he looks on the mum as a space-filler for summer and figures on the winter crop to make his money. Good chrysanthemums are almost as easily grown as poor ones, and there is a whole lot more satisfaction in marketing the product. If a florist has the reputation of growing the best stock in town it will naturally follow that he will pick up the best trade, since well-grown stock in any line is the best advertisement a man can have; and when one is catering to a high-class trade better prices follow as a natural consequence.

Gluts and low prices always occur in the chrysanthemum season in the large cities, but that condition should not necessarily apply in thousands of smaller towns that boast of one or perhaps two florists' establishments. There the population is steady and demand even, while in large cities the demand fluctuates with the incoming or outgoing of large masses of people. Again, the larger city is used as a dumping ground by local growers when home trade is slack, the natural consequence being that the market gets demoralized.

One often hears in the fall that "there are too many chrysanthemums grown." I would amend by saying that there are too many poor chrysanthemums grown. Often when I have looked over a batch of poor white and pink Pacific, competing for a buyer with fine late asters, I could not blame the buyer for preferring the asters. Yet, if the former had been well grown, there should be no comparison between the two. The mum is here to stay, no question about that. Nothing will ever supplant it in its season, and I think if the mum growers had kept everlastingly at it, as the carnation men have, in improving the quality of the flowers, it could be made a much more lucrative business.

Charles H. Totty.

PINCHING BACK.

I have several hundred mums potted into 3½-inch and pinched back. Most of them have made three nice shoots. I like to have three flowers on a plant. Must I again pinch these shoots back, or can I leave them? How late can I pinch back chrysanthemums to get a good seasonable crop? A. F.

It is not necessary to pinch the plants back any more if you have three shoots on each plant and only figure on taking three flowers from each plant, as each shoot will produce a flower, barring accidents. I would not advise you to pinch any more now, as unless the plants are very tall, they will not run on an average over three to four feet high and one needs a reasonable length of stem. If plants are tall and thin, they can be pinched once more, solely with the idea of reducing the height at flowering time, but if they are in good shape, dwarf and sturdy, I would say, do not pinch any more. THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

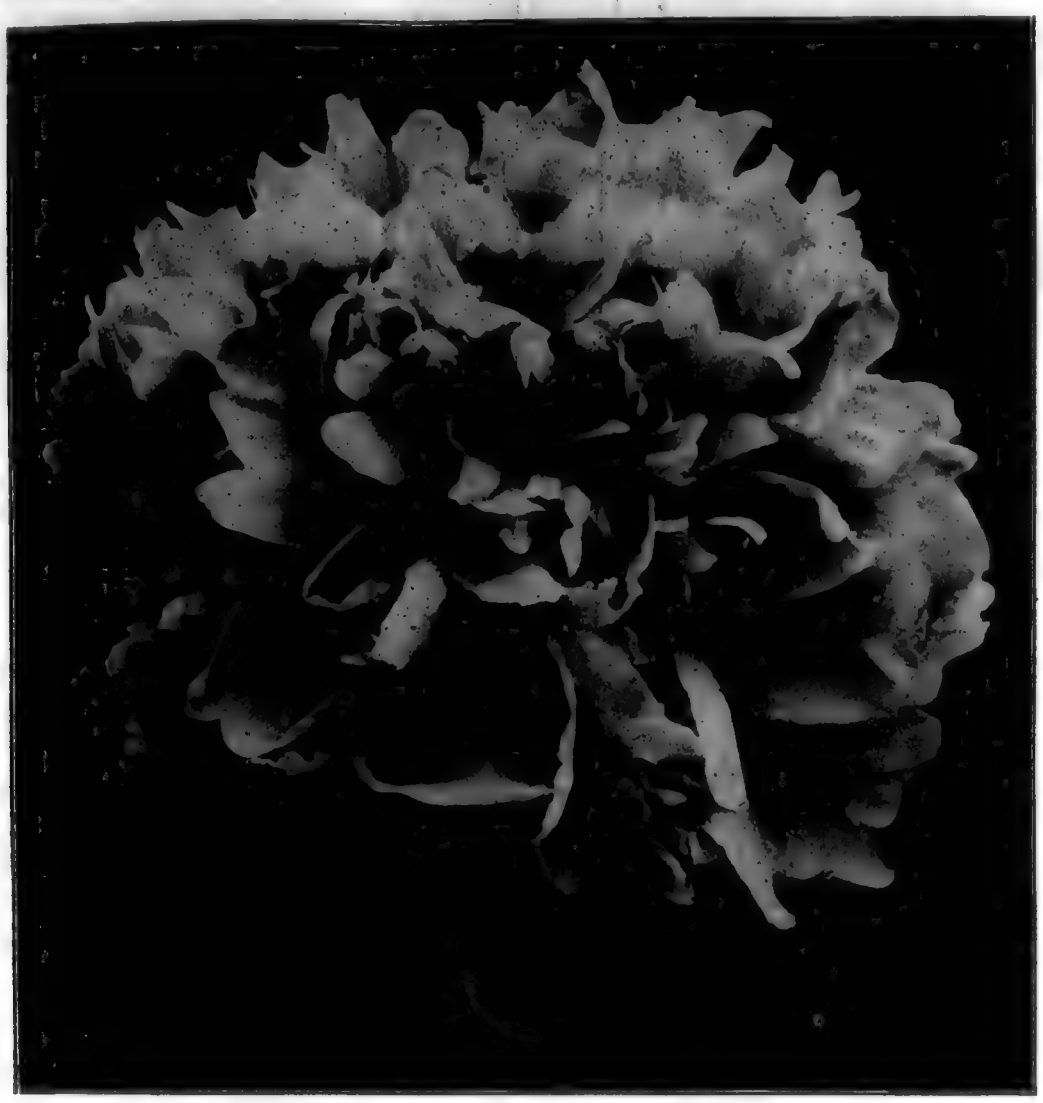
SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Now the summer flowers are coming on, pretty groups can be arranged for the store in new effects. Have a yellow corner for a change. Choose yellow greens like Boston ferns and Sprengeri for foliage, and snapdragons in yellow, white and bronze in a generous basketful with a full rosette of yellow gauze. At a respectful distance introduce a vase or bowl of Coreopsis lanceolata among a mass of foliage. A lower place will suggest itself as convenient for a fernery containing yellow pansies, or bright salmon sweet peas softened with white. Off at a distance use your full blown Chatenay and Kaiserin in a tall handled basket in close proximity to the red and rose-colored sweet peas. Lavender peas with white are much improved by the introduction of a delicate warm pink in small touches.



An interesting group of Crimson Rambler plants may be arranged something like this: Set one good tall specimen on a flat stand well up. Group other plants of the same size around it on the floor in a circular shape. Make several groups of its kind at convenient distances apart and fence in the whole display with smaller plants of the same or of Baby Ramblers arranged to resemble a hedge.

A fine specimen of palm or fern may be mounted in the same way and banked around by several vases of one kind of flowers from the floor up.

Daisies, to be most effective, should be massed, and massed, and then some, without very much additional foliage.

Have them in water if possible. They are frail out of water, but last for days if in water.

At a chapel decoration for a daylight wedding the windows on either side of the altar were raised slightly so as to show glimpses of palms and Easter lilies, supposedly visible from a garden beyond. No palms or plants were used in the decorations about the altar, only cut greens and flowers. White and green was the color scheme, Kaiserin roses being the sole flowers, arranged in two large sized French baskets with long garlands of roses and asparagus, hanging downward and draped back to a groundwork of asparagus over white cheese-cloth. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

FERNS WITH OTHER PLANTS.

Can ferns be grown successfully in the same house with a general line of bedding plants? If so, what soil is best? Anything else regarding their care to help a beginner in their culture will be thankfully received. S. C. C.

There is not the slightest reason why ferns of almost all species cannot be grown with flowering plants. Specialists who grow the adiantum do a little better with houses devoted entirely to them, because they do not like tobacco smoke or any strong insecticide.

The great majority of the ferns we grow commercially are natives of the tropics, although we do not always treat them as such. The nephrolepis, the most useful of all ferns, will grow anywhere, and so will all strong-growing species. Broadly, I would say ferns like a cool bottom and a warm atmosphere. The A. cuneatum type does best on a bench with no heat under it, but should have 60 to 65 degrees of temperature.

I have many times spoken of the folly of keeping little ferns in 2-inch or 3-inch pots on a bench that has a lot of steam or hot-water pipes beneath it. The roots quickly dry out and the little ferns shrivel up. If pipes are beneath your bench, which is so beneficial for the majority of bedding plants, put on two inches of sifted coal ashes for ferns.

As to soil, I would say ferns are the least particular of any plant. Osmunda regalis is found growing in a wet bog, while Pteris aquilina is at home in a stiff clay. The most successful adiantum grower in the country uses the same soil that he does for his rose beds, a yellow loam sod well decomposed, with a fourth or fifth of cow manure not too much decayed. If it is adiantum you want to grow for the fronds, then sprinkle plenty of air-slaked lime on the soil between the plants and on the crowns of the plants where the slugs hibernate.

A WIDE, FLAT HOUSE.

I am going to build a house 43x54 feet, but before doing so would like to have your advice. I have two houses now and intend to build another one 43x54 feet. The ground slopes seven feet in the fifty-four feet. If I build the house ten feet above the ground at the upper side and the lower end eight feet, which makes a slope of two feet, then add the slope of the ground, seven feet, making nine feet slope altogther on the fifty-four feet or length of the house, do you think I would have enough fall in the roof to give satisfaction? I thought at first I would build three houses on the short-roof plan, but if a house with a slant roof will do I can save money in its construction. I intend to raise carnations and bedding plants in this house. The house runs east and west and gets full sun from morning to night. Do you think a house like this would get too hot in summer? G. J. L.

I think your house fifty-four feet wide would be dark in winter and snow and ice would lodge there. It would also be very hot in summer and difficult to adequately ventilate. It would be much better to build two houses each twenty-two feet on two different ground levels; then the south house would not in the least shade the house to the north. Don't make the bars of unequal length, but make them of equal span. The principal thing to observe is to have a very substantial and water tight gutter between the houses. W. S.

BONE MEAL.

How much bone flour should I use in a solid bed for carnations, 6x80 feet in size, and one foot deep, in soil that was one-third cow manure last year?

M. M. W.

If you use bone flour, i. e., finely ground steamed animal bone, it will be safe to use 100 pounds on the bench 6x80. If the bone is superphosphate, i. e., bone treated with sulphuric acid to make the phosphoric acid more available, fifty pounds is probably as heavy an application as would be safe.

ECHEVERIAS.

I intend growing some echeverias for next spring and would like to know the best way to get a start. How can they be propagated and would it be best to get plants now and propagate in fall? Which are the best kinds to grow?

W. A. S.

With the exception of the variety E. secunda glauca the echeverias are not so generally grown as they were ten years ago, but for the florist the above kind is indispensable for carpet bedding. The taller growing sorts are increased by cuttings. Metallica makes a fine plant for the conservatory or the center of a carpet bed and retusa is a pretty flowering plant for early winter. They should be lifted before severe frost. After flowering the tops should be cut off and the old plants kept in a warm, dry place, when small growths will start from the stems. These, when large enough, can be removed and put into flats of dry sand and when they have made a few roots potted into 2-inch or 2½-inch pots.

The low growing, stemless species, such as secunda glauca, Californica, Peacockii, rosea and others, if planted out make a number of shoots, little miniature plants, often called hen and chickens, and in lifting in the fall these are removed and planted in shallow flats of sandy soil and placed in some cool, dry house. Very little if any water is needed during winter and any drip on the plants should be avoided.

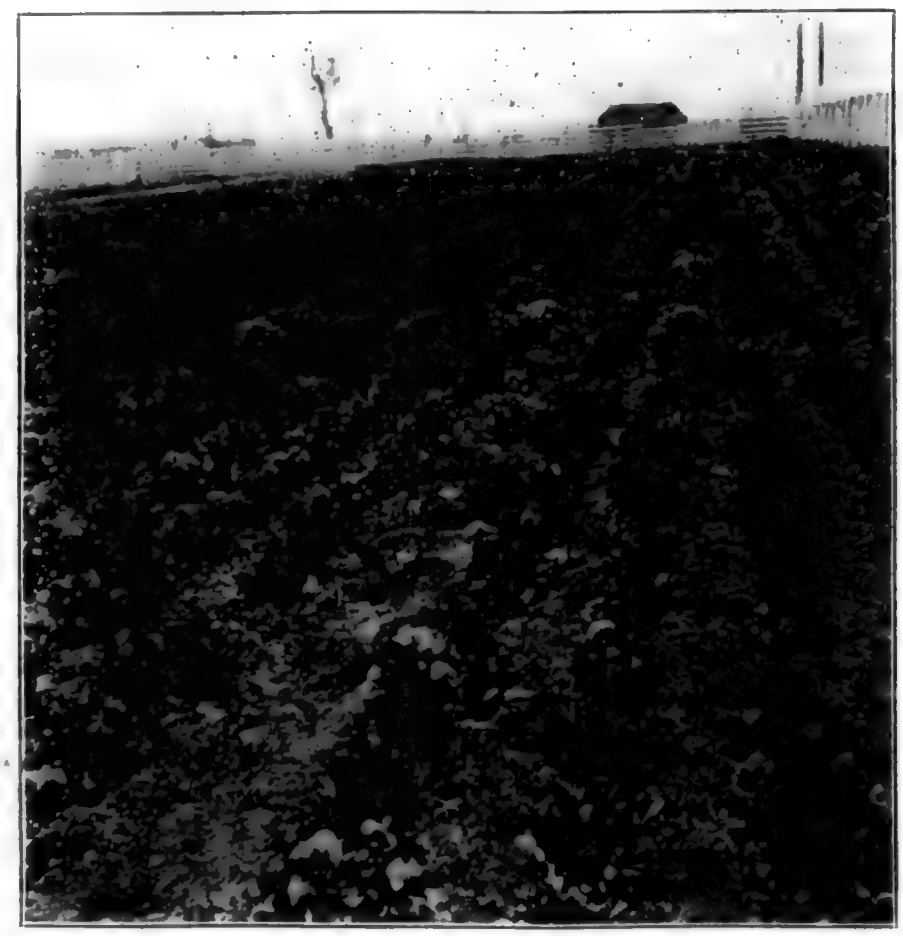
In lifting them in October it is well to sort them into different sizes, placing the old plants in one flat and the next size in another flat and so on. This is economy of space. We notice that our park department wintered many thousands of secunda glauca in deep cold frames, protected with mats. They received no water at all during winter and came through in fine shape.

To get up a stock of these bedding echeverias buy what strong plants you can and plant out at once. You will get a lot of shoots in the fall, and, if desirous of getting up a large stock, you can propagate by the leaves. Lift the plants in October and box in dry, sandy soil. A month or two later carefully twist the leaves from the stems, a few from each. There is a latent bud at the axil of the leaf and if that is not removed with the leaf you will get no plant. Put two inches of sand in a 4-inch pot and place the leaves around the edge of the pot, each with the base only deep enough to keep it upright. Give no water until the roots appear. When the little plants are formed and large enough to handle, place them in flats of sandy soil and be careful not to overwater. These little plants can be kept warmer during winter than the larger and older plants, because you want them to increase in size, while with the older bedding size you only want to keep them dormant. W. S.

KEEP A GOIN'.

If you strike a thorn or rose,
Keep a-goin'.
If it hails or if it snows,
Keep a-goin'.
'Tain't no use to sit and whine
When the fish ain't on your line:
Bait your hook and keep on tryin'—
Keep a-goin'.

When the weather kills your crop,
Keep a-goin'.
When you tumble from the top,
Keep a-goin'.
S'pose you're out o' every dime!
Gettin' broke ain't any crime;
Tell the world you're feeling prime—
Keep a-goin'.



When it looks like all is up,
Keep a-goin'.
Drain the sweetness from the cup,
Keep a-goin'.
See the wild bird on the wing,
Hear the bells that sweetly ring,
When you feel like sighin', sing.
Keep a-goin'.

The Market.

While conditions are a little better than a week ago, the market remains erratic. School graduations this week are taking considerable material and the fact that indoor roses are becoming scarce and that some carnation growers are now throwing out their plants will relieve the congestion. Indoor roses are moderately scarce. Beauties are not in much request, the best make $15 to $20 per hundred. Some nice Kaiserin and Carnot came in, making $2 to $8. Bride and Maid are poor and some are hardly worth marketing. Outdoor hybrids comprise Jacqs, Brunners and Luizets chiefly. The red shades sell the best, all the way from $2 to $8. The quality of these is very good this week and they have the call over colored indoor sorts.

Carnations with few exceptions are very poor. A few select make $2, poorer grades down to 50 cents. A good many poor blooms were cleared the past week at 25 cents per hundred. Sweet peas make 25 cents to 30 cents per hundred. These are not of specially good quality, but scarce. Better outdoor stock should come in this week. Lilies are rather scarce. Lily of the valley is in good demand at $2 to $4. Outdoor stock is now done. Spanish iris from outdoors makes $2 per hundred. Feverfew, sweet williams, stocks and other flowers are not in much request. Peonies are abundant and prices vary widely. Common sorts move slowly up to $8 or $10 in special cases. Green goods continue in very good demand.

Club Field Day.

The plan of holding a field day and club meeting on the same day proved very successful. The attendance on June 19, when the estates of Larz Anderson and Mrs. W. C. Brandegee were visited, was the largest the club has yet had at any similar outing. A number of ladies were included in the party, and several visitors from a distance.

At the Larz Anderson estate the Italian garden commanded the greatest attention. This is admitted to be the best of its class in America and the planting is not of that miserable carpet-bed-like style which disfigures so many similar gardens. Here at present Canterbury bells, rockets, sweet williams, aquilegias, digitalis, peonies, etc., in big beds make a gorgeous show, while tuberous begonias, Nicotiana Sanderæ, salvias and other tender plants are used. Every bed is well blossomed all summer long, for so soon as one crop is gone another planted to succeed it is in flower. The collection of rambler roses around the sides will be very beautiful in a few days. The specimen bays and boxes here are very fine. Great credit is due Mr. Anderson and his skilful head gardener, Duncan Finlayson, for the originating of and planting of this garden.

In addition to the Italian garden the lawns, shrubberies, kitchen garden, etc., were inspected. All looked beautifully fresh and green after the recent copious rains. In the greenhouses carnations, roses, etc., were in grand shape. Several divisions of grapes and nectarines were carrying heavy crops of good fruit. Good batches of gloxinias, achimines, tuberous begonias, gardenias, orchids, etc., were noted and admired. Everything is clean and well grown and shows that a skilled hand is at the head of affairs. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Finlayson before the party left and a few short speeches made, ending in cheers for the generous hosts.

At Faulkner Farm, the extensive estate of Mrs. W. C. Brandegee, over which David Weir is superintendent, the sweeps of well kept lawns, shrubberies and perennial flowering plants were admired. Rhododendrons were on the wane but kalmias were at their best, as were the hybrid perpetual roses. The fine Italian garden is well planted and very attractive. Some of the finest bay trees in the country are used in it. In the greenhouses good batches of orchids, palms, ferns, pelargoniums and other plants were seen. Everything on the estate, including the farm department, over which Mr. Weir also has charge, is in excellent condition. Before departing President Wheeler thanked Mr. Weir and Mrs. Brandegee, in behalf of the club, for the pleasant outing enjoyed and courtesies extended.

On arriving at Horticultural hall refreshments of ice cream, cake, strawberries, etc., were served before the regular club meeting opened, about 100 ladies and gentlemen being in attendance. There was considerable discussion over the place for the club's picnic, Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury, being most favored. Date and other details were left to the committee and will be announced later. Several new members were elected.

Short addresses were made by C. W. Ward, on peonies; by S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, and J. W. Rodgers, park superintendent at Cincinnati, who is gathering ideas in the east.

Awards included a report of superior merit to Mount Desert Nurseries for eremurei; a report of merit to Charles Sander for Egan rose, and to James Crawshaw for his new asparagus. An award was also given for a new heliotrope.

An invitation was received to hold the next field day with Wm. Sim, Cliftondale.

In lieu of a regular lecture there was a general discussion on seasonable topics and some queries from the question box were answered. Coming so soon after the peony show, there were not so many exhibits as usual. It was quite late before the meeting terminated, all present voting that the day had been a delightful and profitable one.

Various Notes.

W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia; Robert Scott, Sharon, Pa., and Hugh Dickson, the well known rosarian, of Belfast, Ireland, formed an interesting little party of visitors the past week.

Hugh L. Cameron will sail on the Ivernia on July 10 and will meet Mrs. Cameron, who sailed June 12 on the same boat, in Scotland, for a two months' tour.

A very large number of out-of-town gardeners and florists visited the peony show and nearly all took down names of desirable sorts.

The annual show of hardy roses, strawberries and other seasonable fruits, flowers and vegetables occurs June 22 and 23. The recent copious rains have benefited roses wonderfully, but the dates selected are a few days too late for the immediate vicinity of Boston.

A rigorous fight is now being made against the gypsy and brown tail moths in this section. Superintendent A. H. Kirkland, who has charge of the work of suppression for the state of Massachusetts, says the damage done this June is no greater than in 1905 and thinks that the war waged has begun to tell. Let us hope 'tis true.

Carnations are making splendid growth in the fields at present, thanks to recent soaking rains. Cutworms continue, however, to do considerable damage. The destruction they cause during winter indoors is a serious matter for many leading growers. W. N. CRAIG.

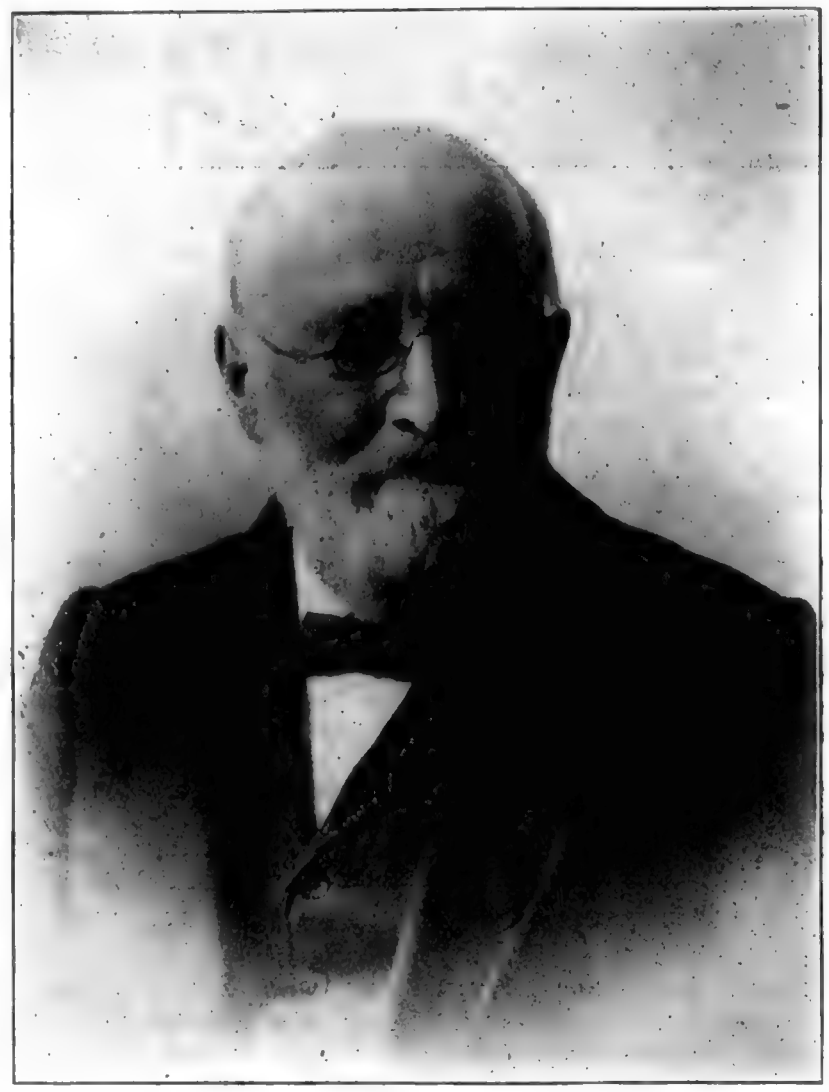
AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.



The executive committee of the American Rose Society met in New York city, Thursday, June 14. President Alexander Montgomery being unable to be present, Vice-President Robert Simpson occupied the chair. The others present were Treasurer Harry O. May, Secretary Wm. J. Stewart, Messrs. F. R. Pierson, A. Farenwald, H. A. Siebrecht, W. A. Manda and Peter Bisset.

The question of the location for the next meeting and exhibition of the society, which had been left to the committee to decide, was discussed at much length. An official invitation from the Washington Florists' Club was read by the secretary and the eligibility of several other cities was discussed informally, the result being a unanimous vote in favor of Washington, D. C. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, March 13, 14, 15, 1907, were selected as the dates for the annual meeting and exhibition.

President-elect Robert Simpson was authorized to appoint a committee with power to prepare a schedule and the exhibition rules were revised so that all exhibitors not members of the society shall pay an entrance fee of $3, same to be applied as membership initiation fee.

Mr. Bisset, representing the Washington Florists' Club, as its president, informed the committee that it is the intention of that organization to give a general horticultural exhibition in connection with the American Rose Society's show. Arrangements were then made, subject to ratification by the Washington Florists' Club, for a joint schedule and joint participation in the net profits, if any, after the expenses of the exhibition have been paid.

Frank C. Moninger.

OBITUARY.

Frank C. Moninger.

Frank C. Moninger, one of the first men to manufacture greenhouse construction material in the west, passed away June 16, at his home at Chicago, at the age of 85 years. He was the father of Lena and Lambert Moninger, and the late John C. Moninger.

Mr. Moninger was born in Germany in 1821 and came to this country when a boy, settling in his early youth in Chicago. He was identified from the start with the interests of the truck gardeners and florists located north of the city, in what is now High Ridge, Rogers Park, Bowmanville and Edgewater, manufacturing as far back as 1849 to 1854 sashes for the construction of greenhouses. Sashbars were not made at that time and greenhouses were very scarce, all of them being built with sashes. Some of these sash houses are standing today. One house built with sashes for which Mr. Moninger furnished the material is now being used at Des Plaines, Ill., over 45 years old. Geo. W. Miller and George Wittbold were two of the first customers for greenhouse sashes, and other gardeners and florists in the vicinity of Chicago built with his material shortly afterwards.

Mr. Moninger early recognized the fact that the increasing demand for better material and lighter construction would mean the specializing of the work, with which thought in mind he formed a partnership with the late John L. Diez, making at that time, in 1869, the first sashbars for greenhouses manufactured in Chicago. These sashbars were furnished Geo. W. Miller. The business flourished under his guidance and when finally succeeded by the son, John C. Moninger, nearly every florist in or around Chicago had been a customer for his material. The present firm of John C. Moninger Co. is the result of the start made by Frank C. Moninger and the manufacture of material has now been brought to a state of perfection and the business developed to an extent beyond the most sanguine expectations of the founder of the business.

South Weymouth, Mass.—George Hollis reports an unusually favorable season for peonies. He now has a large collection, including a number of seedlings of his own raising.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES

Our Beauties are easily the best in this market and we believe it will be difficult to find their equal anywhere in the United States in this warm weather. They are in every way as good as our famous crop last summer—and most Beauty buyers know what that means. Mostly long stems.

PEONIES—We handle the best stock in town—choicest varieties, cut right, bunched right, handled right—in any quantity. Will have them all through June.

KAISERINS—The Kaiserin is the only really good summer rose. We have them in large quantity—fine stock in every respect.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business continued quiet throughout last week. Stock in all departments was equal to the demand, although in Beauties, Brides and Maids it was not always possible to fill orders with the grade of stock desired. Carnations continued in very large supply and there is record of sales at as low as 2 cents per bunch, where the buyer was willing to clean up accumulated job lots. Sidewalk salesmen outside the loop district were doing a thriving business on Saturday with carnations at 5 cents a dozen. Of course, the stock was such as would not have passed muster in any flower store.

This week opened with a much better tone. Supplies in all departments are much less than in the last fortnight. This is especially true of roses, for all the growers who have not replanted are busy at this annual task. Beauties are especially scarce and selling at good prices. The fact that many buyers are unable to get Beauties of the grade they need is making a good market for long-stemmed Liberty, of which one or two growers have very good cuts. Bride and Bridesmaid are still seen in considerable quantity, but most of the stock is very poor. Much grading is required to get out an order for 100 Maids and when a house has call for several hundreds it is no small task to find enough that will pass inspection. Kaiserin is received in considerable quantity and sells fast. Those firms which have houses of roses grown especially for summer cutting are enjoying very brisk demand.

The low prices which carnations have realized the last fortnight have resulted in many growers throwing out their stock and receipts are lighter. Much of the stock is of exceedingly poor quality and will not do for shipment, or in fact for any store use. The result is that good carnations have stiffened in price and the market is on a much more satisfactory basis than a week ago.

Those houses which hold large stocks of peonies in cold storage are well pleased with the situation. It had been feared that there would be a poor market for peonies this year, but such has not been the case at any time except when the cuts were at their height. Good peonies are bringing first-class prices. There is some complaint that the stored stock is dropping quickly when brought from the cooler, but most of the poor stock has been closed out. A big business is being done in peonies because of the low quality of roses and carnations. It looks as though all the stock would clean up at profitable prices.

Calla lilies are gone. There are not so many longiflorums as a few weeks ago, but still enough for all requirements. Auratum is abundant. Gladioli are seen in many houses but are slow sale. Sweet peas are again of better quality and selling well. Cape jasmine lasted longer than usual this year, but has at length passed in its checks. Pond lilies are abundant and of fine quality.

There are only moderate supplies of green goods. Asparagus strings are scarce, but there is enough smilax. Common ferns are again to be had in quantity.

Cost of Greenhouses.

L. Coatsworth has been figuring up the cost of the three houses, each 27½x300, added this spring to the establishment of the Benthey-Coatsworth Co., at New Castle. He finds that they cost a penny or two more than $10 per running foot. It is a cheaper price than he has previously paid and he thinks the houses are the best ever built at their place. The cost includes material and erection, also piping and an eighty-five horse-power steam boiler from the Frost Mfg. Co., Galesburg, equipped with a Martin rocking grate. Two of the Frost boilers have been in operation ever since the Benthey-Coatsworth Co. built its first houses and have given excellent satisfaction.

One on Bohanon.

There is a woman of advanced years, well known to the wholesalers, who is a frequent visitor begging flowers. When refused she turns loose a storm of vituperative wrath which is something to marvel at. Occasionally she visits a retail store. One day she asked a donation from Lovelace R. Bohanon, before he located on North State street. Mr. Bohanon declined with thanks and the beggar did her best to express her opinion of him. As she was going out the door she met a lady just entering. "Don't go in there," she said, "that man insulted me." It was Mrs. Bohanon! Last Sunday morning Mr. Bohanon happened into the Flower Growers' Market just as the woman was telling Percy Jones what she thought of him for not giving her stock, and the story came out.

Growers' Expressage.

C. L. Washburn, commenting on the action of the United States Express Co. in raising charges to the New Jersey rose growers, stated that in the week of June 3 to 9 Bassett & Washburn paid the Adams Express Co. $175 for bringing stock in from Hinsdale. This was exclusive of the charge for the return of empties. It was, of course, a sum above the normal, for it included peony shipments and was a week of large cuts in all departments, but it shows what an important item express charges are to the grower and what a hole it would cut in the profits if the tariff were raised even a small percentage.

Club Meeting.

In the absence of President Hauswirth and Vice-president Leonard Kill, James Hartshorne presided at the Florists' Club's meeting June 14. Plans for the picnic afforded the principal topic of discussion. A telegram was read by the secretary in which President Hauswirth, now in California, suggested that the chairman appoint a committee on transportation to the Dayton convention. He suggested George Asmus, W. N. Rudd or J. C. Vaughan. On motion, the chairman appointed the committee of three.

Various Notes.

C. H. Grant, a skilful flower worker and former employe of well-known New York retailers, arrived in town recently and is domiciled, with his wife, at 542 North Clark street. No sooner had they reached town than Mrs. Grant lost her handbag, containing practically all the money they possessed. Mr. Grant then took a temporary job at Marshall Field's and the second day had a toe crushed in an elevator. He is now laid up on half pay.

Julius Ristow is planting his entire place to carnations for next season. Last year it was two-tnirds roses.

At E. F. Winterson's they are still receiving a large cut of peonies. They come from Lake City, Minn., and the force spent Sunday in rebunching them.

Peter Reinberg has planted 7,000 of the new rose, Mrs. Marshall Field. They are beginning to cut from the young stock and find the demand very good for this variety.

An attraction in John Mangel's window this week is live rabbits and ducks. They keep a crowd before the window all day long.

C. M. Dickinson, manager of E. H. Hunt's, has been confined to his home since last Thursday with an attack of tonsilitis, to which he is no stranger.

N. J. Wietor and John Sinner leave June 26 for a fortnight's fishing in the vicinity of Tomahawk Lake, Wis. Mr. Sinner is getting in training by going to the greenhouses each day, as soon as he has sold out on the Market floor, and spending the afternoons cultivating carnations.

A. L. Randall spent Saturday and Sunday at his fruit farm in Michigan. He says he expects to harvest 400 bushels of peaches this year as against 3,000 bushels last season. Farther back from the lake the crop will be better. Mr. Randall's daughter, Miss Grace, will graduate June 22 from the Grand Conservatory of Music, on Forty-sixth street, and has been awarded one of four medals offered for meritorious work in that institution.

what he has been able to do with Beauties in the past two winter seasons and contemplated planting his place to Brides and Maids, but the splendid results which have been achieved with his spring and summer crops in both years have caused him to reconsider and he will continue growing Beauties, much to E. C. Amling's satisfaction.

George Reinberg has enjoyed a very big business in rose plants this spring. He has had excellent success in propagating, especially with Beauties. One sale this week was of 10,000 Beauty plants, but he had 18,000 ready at the time.

C. W. McKellar says that the demand for orchids was a little slack last week but that he has a good run of orders booked for this week and a prospect of fine business for the rest of the month.

Kruchten & Johnson report themselves as well pleased with the results since they formed their partnership.

A. L. Vaughan and family will go to Spirit Lake, Wis., about July 1 for an outing.

George Harrer, president of the village of Morton Grove, has achieved newspaper notoriety through an action on a charge of malfeasance in office brought by citizens of the village who allege that Mr. Harrer does not keep the lid on tight enough.

The George Wittbold Co. is tearing down two of its houses built in 1892 and replacing with one structure 28x100. The old houses were in surprisingly good shape considering their long term of service.

The hedge surrounding the rose garden on the Wooded Island at Jackson park all Sunday afternoon enclosed more admiring visitors than it did rose blooms. The attendance is said to have been the largest in years and the island was thronged all day. The roses were several days past their best.

Eaton's Flower Shop, 86 Jackson boulevard, makes a very good showing. The proprietors are Mrs. E. L. Eaton and her daughter, Miss M. M. Eaton, the latter having a wide acquaintance, especially in theatrical circles, which is bringing a good run of business. Chas. Balluff does the making up.

The "exposure specialists" are after Paul H. Rapp, city superintendent of small parks, because he went to Sam Pearce and bought plants for his friends at wholesale prices, the same as is paid by the park department. The rakers seem to have got down to a point where it is not so very mucky.

At the Union depot, George Manos has a stand beneath the stairway where he makes a good showing of stock and keeps busy all day long with sales to outgoing suburbanites.

Among the week's visitors were W. W. Sekins, Duluth; J. W. Lyons, mayor of Belvidere; George F. Crabb, of Grand Rapids.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Summer is long delayed. Drought, followed by the regular Sunday cyclonic rain storm and the after humidity, fog and chilly nights, so far have characterized the month of roses. A hot spell of any duration has not yet materialized, and on Thursday the days begin to shorten again and Thanksgiving and Christmas will loom up not far away. Before we realize it we will be at Dayton and just two short months away is the convention of the S. A. F.

The worst days in the wholesale cut flower section have probably been realized in the last two weeks. It is hard to conceive how even in the hottest days of August there can be greater sacrifices, or worse stagnation. Last week was exceptionally bad. The present is expected to show some improvement and next week, with its many school commencements and its final June weddings, ought to be the best week of June. The crop of weddings progresses most encouragingly. The retailer is certainly having his innings. He has little to complain of. The steamer trade is enormous. Many orders come from distant cities and the list of reliable retail stores serves an excellent and convenient purpose, our bon ton artists having many an order from their brethren in the south and west.

Outdoor blossoming is in all its glory. The ramblers especially make a glorious exhibit around every suburban home. The cut bloom is also abundant and is heavily used in decorations. The shipments of up-state peonies did not materialize. The great storm of a week ago completed the devastation wrought by the late frost. One firm with 40,000 plants and an expected shipment of over 100,000 blossoms did not send a single flower. The loss was complete. Some of the nurserymen around Geneva and Newark and in other sections of western New York suffered losses amounting to many thousands of dollars. What few peonies now reach the market are of only medium quality and this week will see the last of them. Roses are sold by the box, seldom unpacked, and a good sale, so-called, on Monday, was 2,000 Maids and Brides, as they ran, for $4, or, to be more explicit, 20 cents per hundred. Carnations fared quite as badly and prices at times were unmentionable. There is a tremendous lot of mildew on the roses.

A great many lilies are coming to the market, some very fine ones from John Scott that bring top prices, though the top is not "out of sight" by any means.

Orchids are very abundant and the weddings are being made rich and elegant displays through their instrumentality. Sweet peas realized the best prices of the year last week. This week they arrive more freely and values have retreated. Rudolph Fischer has been sending some grand stock daily to Kessler. Abundance is blooming as freely as ever. There seems to be no resting spell for this wonderful carnation. But it will be thrown out shortly to give room for Purity freesia. One hundred and fifty thousand bulbs of this wonderful discovery of Mr. Fischer's will be sent out this season. Already the bulk of the stock of this great acquisition has been ordered. Mr. Fischer has lately added to his property a fine block of several acres in the heart of the Great Neck residence section.

Various Notes.

Mr. Matthews, of Great Neck, will start in a few days on an ocean voyage to Scotland.

The summer exhibition at the New York Botanic Garden last week was poorly attended and the exhibits were few in number. F. R. Pierson Co., Siebrecht & Son and Julius Roehrs Co. were the principal exhibitors. The roses were a creditable selection. Few irises, peonies or vegetables were staged. The lecture by Mr. Powell deserved an audience of a hundred instead of a single dozen. The Bronx conservatories contributed some splendid cacti. Geo. Skene was in charge, as usual, for the Botanic Garden. There were good collections of herbaceous perennials.

The Hinode Florist Co., of Whitestone, has just received a fine shipment of kentias selected by Mr. Dimmock, the Yokohama Nursery Co.'s English representative. This firm has added about 15,000 square feet of glass to its plant this season.

Buiding is progressing rapidly in every direction. The output next year from within fifty miles of New York will be at least twenty-five per cent in excess of 1905-1906. Of building greenhouses, as of making books, there seems to be no end. If prosperity waves do not continue to roll in there will be some disappointed builders before another June.

This week will end the auction business. It has been a good year for these knights of the rostrum.

A new firm is projected for next year, with Geo. Lorenz as its promoter. The rise in real estate and the auction of Wednesday ought to make another auction venture in the city safe. The field has enlarged tremendously since May. Some days there have been more bidders than stock. The transients and the suburbanites have awakened to their opportunity.

The trade in several of its branches has the June fever and weddings have been and are to be. Some of the younger wholesalers contemplate the plunge into the unknown. Mr. Johnston, of the Johnston Heating Co., was married on June 14. Still another greenhouse man is close to the edge of the sea, and some cut flower merchants are about ready for the launching. Dame Rumor has had one of them "jined" for months. Still a few old bachelors remain, especially on Twenty-eighth street, who are as immovable as Niagara and as silent as the sphynx.

Arthur Newell and wife and Samuel Murray, of Kansas City, have been with us for some days, on their way home from Boston, enjoying the sights of this great city and visiting their brother florists, gathering suggestions for later illustration in their progressive town. Both were loud in praise of everything Bostonese.

Very few local florists visited the Boston peony exhibit. The Cottage Gardens sent a fine lot of blooms to the society last week.

Next Thursday the popular cut flower expressman, M. J. Tierney, will be married and a European wedding trip is contemplated. The wholesale boys are planning an appropriate send-off with floral accompaniments.

The outing grows daily in interest. A week from Monday leaves but little time for complete preparation. Tickets should be purchased in advance to facilitate the committee's arduous duties and insure proper entertainment. With fine weather the attendance should reach 500. The date is chosen with a view to the enjoyment of all the school children. Every handsome baby will receive a prize; so will almost everybody else, for there are games and prizes innumerable.

Frederick Zahn has one of the finest stores now in the Bronx, at Seventh avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street. He has just doubled it in size and is building up a larger business than he has ever had in his twenty-five years' experience.

Meyer, at Madison avenue and Fifty-eighth street, had a big wedding last week. The bridal bouquet of valley and white orchids was very handsome. It was a shower bouquet, of course, and the bridesmaids' bouquets were of valley and Killarney roses. Meyer also had the famous Kelley wedding, using over 1,000 white peonies, with many enormous palms.

A. Warendorff reports the largest steamer trade in his experience. Every sailing day is a repetition of the big delivery. The steamers are floating palaces, most of them. B. Suzuki returned last Friday on one of them and will soon start for Japan.

Boddington is having a great call for his challenge pansy seed. Harry Bunyard was back from one of his trips last week with some good fish stories and many a string of orders as confirmatory proof of his skill as an angler.

Wm. Elliott & Sons wind up the auction season next Tuesday, June 26, with their big annual trade sale. They have a large stock to offer and anticipate a brisk business, for the items are mostly those in strong demand. Their sales have been exceptionally successful all season.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Last week was a very busy one, there being plenty of work for weddings, school commencements and funerals. This about winds up the season's work as far as the retail florist is concerned, and we might include the wholesaler as well.

There is an immense overstock of second grade stock at all the wholesale houses, but really first-class stock in roses is very scarce and has been for some time. The cool nights have covered the leaves with mildew, Bride and Maid being especially affected with it. Some fairly good Ivory, Richmond and Beauty are to be had, but the supply is limited.

Carnations continue plentiful, with prices down on common grades. Lawsons are very much off color. Enchantress keeps up fine, as do all of the whites, with the demand still very good. Sweet peas were in big demand for school closings last week. White and lavender, the latter especially, had a big call, it being the high school color. Lily of the valley is coming in fine and plenty of it for the demand. Choice brings $4 per hundred. Outdoor stock is generally poor, though some good stock of outdoor Jacqs, gladioli and cornflowers are seen.

The plant trade is about over for this season. From reports from some of the leaders the season must have been a good one for all the plantsmen.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club had another slim attendance at the regular monthly meeting last Thursday afternoon. President Ammann came all the way from Edwardsville to preside over the meeting and only a handful of regulars faced him when he opened the session at 3 o'clock. The regular proceedings came first on the program, and after disposing of these the chairman appointed F. J. Fillmore, E. W. Guy and Carl Beyer a committee to draw up suitable resolutions on the death of W. J. Schray.

William C. Smith was elected a member of the club. William Winter, of Kirkwood, then led a discussion on "Growing Sweet Peas Under Glass and Outside." Mr. Winter's remarks were well received and Messrs. Steidle, Fillmore, Guy and Ammann joined in the discussion.

The picnic question came up, which ended in the trustees being instructed to prepare an outing for the latter part of July and report at the next meeting of the club. The first of the outdoor meetings will take place at Edwardsville, Ill. President Ammann invited the members to meet at his place for the meeting July 12, when officers will be nominated. This was accepted and means a royal good time, especially as the ladies are invited, too. Everybody knows what it is to be guests of President Ammann. A large attendance is already assured.

The secretary reported that the discussions for the next meeting will be by Henry Braun, on "Growing Asters Under Glass and Outside," and Frank A. Weber, on "Growing Roses, Both Tender and Hardy, in the Field."

After the regular order of business had been disposed of, a general discussion followed for the good of the club on how to make the attendance better, and on the S. A. F. convention.

Various Notes.

Henry Aue left Sunday for a trip to Germany on a steamer that left New York on Tuesday. He expects to be back the latter part of August.

Miss Lottie Scheies has opened a flower store at Easton and Euclid avenue. She was formerly employed at Young's.

John Connon was married to Miss Sallie Watson at Webster Groves last Friday evening. The happy couple will reside in their new home on Mr. Connon's place in Webster Groves.

The decorations at the closing of the Mary institute and high school were by Mrs. M. M. Ayers, and were a credit to the firm.

The executive committee of the American Apple Growers' Congress held a meeting here last Friday and decided to hold their fourth annual meeting here August 14 and 15. An excursion over the Frisco road to the apple growing country of the Ozarks was arranged for, and will be one of the features of the meeting.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill.; E. W. Guy, of Belleville; William Winter, of Kirkwood, and John Steidle, of Central, Mo., spent the day in the city on last Thursday and attended the club meeting in the afternoon.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The feature of the market this week is the decrease in quantity of flowers coming into town. The falling off in carnations is especially noticeable. The supply of roses is receiving a welcome reinforcement from the cooler section lying to the north, Beauties, Brides and Maids all being very fine. Gladioli are arriving in quantity. Iris is also quite plentiful, double petunias have made their appearance. Cattleyas are of excellent quality and lower in price. Sweet peas are good, though their arrival is irregular owing to the drenching rains. Taken all in all, business is fair for the season, with a considerable amount of shipping. There is enough good stock to meet practically all demands.

Evolution.

"Have you any campaign literature?" was asked of J. Otto Thilow, secretary of the Henry A. Dreer Co., one day this week. "Oh, we're always campaigning here," Mr. Thilow replied. "How about perennials?" his interlocutor coaxingly continued. "Wonderful. The increase in the demand for these plants grows steadily, and what is better, the buyers themselves specify the varieties they want and the number of each color instead of leaving it to their landscape gardener or to us. We consider this a very healthy sign, and attribute it in some measure to such works as "The Woman's Hardy Garden" and others like it. Ladies who would not dream of planting a bed of geraniums or a border of coleus, delve in the earth themselves to plant foxglove or monkshood, with true gardening enthusiasm. They consider the country residence as the picture with its setting of beautiful green lawn dotted with shrubs, framing it with a border of peonies, larkspurs, and all the other popular perennials."

Various Notes.

M. Rice was hard at work in his handsome warehouse last Monday, checking up orders, despite the twenty-hour delay to the great Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, due to fog off Sandy Hook.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Kahlert quietly celebrated their silver wedding anniversary last Saturday. Mr. Kahlert has been well known for many years as manager for Pennock Bros.

Henry Heilerman, with the Leo Niessen Co., has decided to abandon the ranks of the bachelors in favor of the benedicts. He is accepting the best wishes of his many friends.

The new Tradesmen's Trust Co. was tastefully decorated with plants and cut flowers last Monday by the Wm. Graham Co.

Commodore John Westcott entertained a party of his friends at Waretown, on Barnegat bay, last Friday and Saturday. Among the Commodore's guests were Wm. H. Westcott, William Westcott, Robert Craig, William K. Harris, J. William Colflesh, Samuel S. Pennock, Charles F. Eimerman, Richard Lynex, John Denham, Robert Kift, David Rust, G. C. Watson and others.

Wm. J. Muth, manager for the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., has received some very complimentary lines from consignors, appreciative of his efforts during the past season. One of them wrote, "Well done for the May days! I shall now be satisfied even if June only realizes enough to cover express charges."

Edw. Reid is receiving some very fine gladioli.

The golden jubilee of the republican party held in this city this week brought out the decorators' skill more in the line of electric light, flags and bunting than in that of plants and flowers. There was, however, a marked demand for yellow daisies.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have received large consignments this week by the steamers Abyssinia and Marquette; some 60,000 cycas leaves arrived, nearly all of them being ordered. Adjustable plant stands and F. F. pins are also in heavy demand.

J. F. Mergenthaler is planning improvements in his store and greenhouses for next season.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

There has not been such a surplus of flowers here as we read of in some other cities, and for the next two weeks we can look confidently to graduations to keep down oversupply. Our local peonies are only just in bloom and there is no great demand for them. Roses are good, bad and indifferent. Carnations are first-class. We have had three or four weeks of extremely dry weather, which has been trying on young carnations in a locality where we have no means of irrigation. In the city we do not feel the absence of rain, for there we have the hose with a man or boy at one end and Lake Erie at the other.

Various Notes.

A few visitors have called of late. That very practical young man, C. B. Knickman, dropped in on his return to Gotham. Arnold Leonine Ringier, of Chicago, makes Buffalo his central depot while he makes short radiating trips to small communities like Rochester, Toronto and Tonawanda. Mr. Ringier seems to have entirely recovered from his rheumatism, and is as robust as Jeffries and has the complexion of a Zulu maiden. Nothing like a milk diet. Philip Scott, of the Scott Floral Co., Denver, is also here. The preservation of his health demanded a short sojourn in a lower altitude.

We were tempted by the congenial company of Henry Wise, of East Aurora, and Charles Guenther, of Hamburg, to take the trolley for Lancaster to call at the large establishment of William J. Palmer. It was June 15, the gala day of the whole year. There was a parade through the village by every one who owned a nag and wagon, and then a hoss trot. Many of the horses had never seen a trolley car and attempted to climb a tree rather than pass these vehicles with no visible motive power. Barney Myers, the able manager of Mr. Palmer's 300,000 feet of glass, had the mayor in his buggy and led the procession and it was his horse that desired to ascend the elm tree. The attraction of the 2:40 trot did not keep Barney at the track when he heard that three such veterans were at the greenhouses.

As usual, the place looks fine, work well up to date, several carnation houses planted about a month, a wonderfully thrifty house of Kaiserin planted in early March and now yielding a fine crop. A portion of this house was lifted plants from a house planted two years ago. They had scarcely finished transplanting and had already this spring given two fine crops of flowers. A very noticeable house is one of Richmond. Surely this is a great rose. They are covered with buds this early, but will not be allowed to bear a crop until the end of July. With all the splendid appearances of these plants, Barney does not think the variety is as free as Liberty. Surely he must have had exceptionally good fortune with Liberty to say that. Notice, I did not say luck, for success in gardening is not luck. It is a mixture of brains, hard work and close attention. We noticed between two houses in a sheltered spot a fine bed of a yellow Spanish iris. We have always bought these simply under color, but there may be choicer varieties under name. This was a most beautiful flower, as attractive as an orchid, and Mr. Myers said they sold at the store like the proverbial hot cakes, bringing almost as much per dozen flowers as the bulbs can be brought at per thousand. We have seen some of these irises in town showing no signs of flowering. We noticed where the irises were flowering that the soil was very sandy, the remains of any propagating bed being dumped there. This may be a point in their culture and accounts for their earliness and fine condition. If any one needs to study the bench question, he will find every kind on this place, as well as the most up-to-date methods of growing flowers. There is a bed of Adiantum Croweanum, 1,000 plants, which look about as good as if they were in Utica, and that is saying enough. Mr. Myers in his municipal capacity has already discovered attempted "graft" and nobly frustrated it. I always knew if there was more of the horticultural craft in our city government there would be less to complain of. Of course, many a florist has his price, but they come higher than the ordinary tradesmen.

We regret for our sake that on July 1 Henry Wise gives up his share of the firm of Wise Bros., of East Aurora, N. Y., and takes charge of the establishment of W. F. Kasting, at Erie, Pa. Mr. Kasting is fortunate. If ability, integrity and close application to business lead to success he has all embodied in Henry Wise. He has lived so long a neighbor to the sage of East Aurora, Elbert Hubbard, that he must have absorbed a lot of brilliancy.

The King Construction Co., of Tonawanda, is erecting two houses, each 22x100, for Mr. Newman, of Akron, N. Y., who is going into the commercial business. The dry spell is broken and we are having this Sabbath day a most beautiful rain. W. S.

RICHMOND, IND.—The new range of the E. G. Hill Co. is going up rapidly. It is expected to have the houses finished and planted by August 1.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The regular June business is the order of the day. A number of weddings and commencements called for more good stock than was to be obtained, but there were quantities of rubbish for the garbage man. The few cold days we have just had have improved the roses a great deal. Sweet peas are still plentiful, but many of them are soft and have no value. The Pittsburg Cut Fower Co. is offering storage peonies, which came in good play last week for the large decorations, as lilies and other large flowers were very scarce. There are some gladioli in evidence, but nothing fine. We wonder why a sane man will buy cheap varieties to force, when the same expense will grow good varieties and bring more than twice as much money. Most of the rose growers have part of their stock benched and are just waiting for the trade to let down a little to clean out the balance and finish planting.

Various Notes.

We have had a number of storms with heavy hail all around us, but in some way they have managed to keep away from the greenhouse section and no damage has resulted.

The plantsmen who have been in the habit of covering the sidewalks opposite the market, have been notified to gather in their stock and confine themselves to their stands on the street. This is not much of a hardship, as they are about through for the year.

A. W. Smith is changing the uniforms of his messengers. They now wear a neat brown suit and cap, with his name on the front of the latter.

Ed. McCollum, of the Pittsburg Florists' Exchange, and William Patter, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., are putting in their spare time getting their fishing tackle in shape for an excursion into Canada.

Ernest Zieger, of Charles T. Siebert's, reports the best season they ever had, both for plants and flowers. He says that he is glad it is about over, as he would like to get an opportunity to renew his acquaintance with his family.

T. Beckert was a visitor to the city one day last week. He had been so busy getting in sweet peas for the last month that he could not spare time to visit his friends.

David Geddis reports trade in Homestead as brisk. Several large weddings and a big funeral order made last week a good one for business.

Hoo-Hoo.

An industrial edition of the Leader contains the following:

Pittsburg Florists' Exchange is one of the unique institutions of this city and is owned and managed by P. J. Demas, a native of Sparta, Greece, who came to this country in 1891 and has made a success of life. Mr. Demas is but 29 years old, but has more than the usual business acumen and his business is supplying in a wholesale way the retail florists of this and surrounding cities. He receives his stock on consignment from all over the country and does a large business, paying out for express charges alone from $35 to $60 per day. He employs ten people and is a leader in the Greek colony of Pittsburg.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Business the past week has been quiet with all of the dealers. The growers are about winding up their orders for planting. On account of the wet and unfavorable spring, planting was delayed to a large extent, consequently nearly all of them still have some orders unfilled for planting. Bedding stock, if anything, was much better than last year, and from all reports the demand was much heavier. The different greenhouses are pretty well torn up, making improvements, alterations, etc.

The cut flower business is very dull and stock is plentiful. Roses particularly were in abundance the past week; the market was practically glutted; in consequence they were sold by the growers at close figures. The small dealers are getting $1 per dozen for them, while the better stores are yet able to get $1.50 per dozen. American Beauties sold fairly well last week, no doubt on account of the reduced price on them. Some very nice Beauties are offered for $3 and $5 per dozen. Carnations are keeping up nicely and are sold for 75 cents and $1 per dozen. June weddings are few and far between, and reports from all of the dealers say they do not amount to very much in dollars and cents. Sweet peas are in demand, and a great many have been used for wedding bouquets.

Minneapolis.

The Whitted Floral Co. reports that business in the new location is away ahead of anticipations and is well pleased with the move.

Ralph Latham is doing a good business, and the fact of his being out of the high rent district no doubt cuts considerable figure in his profits. He claims his present location has increased his trade wonderfully.

Geo. Murtfeldt is doing a nice business and reports satisfactory results for his past season's work.

Both Donaldson and the Powers Mercantile Co. continue to carry heavy stocks, principally of carnations. Their packages bear no label as to where they come from, which no doubt is pleasing to the majority of their customers, as the average recipient of a box of cut flowers prefers to have them come from a regular florist. They have sold a great many potted plants, principally geraniums and ferns at close figures.

Patthey & Thompson have discontinued business; their stock was pretty well bought up by the different florists.

Oscar Amundson, of the Rosary, says trade has been very good; he has been in business about one year, but has succeeded in building up a nice trade. He is almost surrounded by the Greek trade, but has evidently won out.

St. Paul.

L. L. May & Co. have just completed filling up their conservatory with a fine lot of palms, which were imported direct and came through in fine shape. They report a good retail trade, principally in the funeral work line; also a few good decorations the past week.

Otto Hiersekorn is doing a good retail business in plants and cut flowers. He says trade is ahead of last year.

The Swanson Floral Co. continues to put up a good display and now has some white peonies which cannot be beaten in this locality. Gus Colberg says that trade has kept up remarkably well.

FELIX.

BURBANK'S RHUBARB.

Will you kindly let us know if you have had any experience with Burbank's Crimson Winter Ever-bearing rhubarb? Have you ever forced it or do you know of any one who has? Can you tell us where we could buy it? Do you know if it is all right, or better than our old rhubarb? H. S. P.

I have had no experience with the rhubarb spoken of and do not know any one who has. No doubt any of the leading seedsmen could procure it for you if they do not happen to handle it regularly. Perhaps some other reader will be able to give us the information wanted? W. S. CROYDON.

Seed Trade News.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at Toledo, O., June 26-28, 1906.

HALF a crop of onion seed is about all that any of the California growers are looking for.

THE harvest of onion sets in the Chicago district will likely begin a week to ten days earlier than last year.

REPORTS from Iowa and Nebraska state that crops of sweet corn are in good shape so far, and that the outlook on vine seed crops is satisfactory.

THE agricultural appropriation bill is back in conference again, but it is the meat inspection amendment, not the one for free seeds, which is holding up the final passage of the bill.

LUTHER BURBANK, who already has a record in the way of the potato that bears his name, again has taken up that family with the purpose of improving on existing varieties. A large planting of potatoes has been made on his grounds at Santa Rosa.

VISITED CHICAGO:—J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb., en route to his old home in Washington county, New York. He will take in the seedsmen's convention returning; Waldo Rohnert, Gilroy Cal., en route to seedsmen's convention, via Detroit, Mich., his former home.

REPORTS in general indicate a satisfactory condition of summer trade. There seems to be no unusual demand for turnip seed. The weather has been unfavorable for the usual plantings of beans and the demand for the article at present is below normal. There is still quite a demand for good tomato plants. The outlook is that the supply of spinach seed for midsummer planting will be short of the demand.

CHICAGO:—Charles Hollenbach and Leonard H. Vaughan are a committee on transportation to look after the comfort of the Chicago delegates to the seedsmen's convention. This committee is perfecting arrangements with the Wabash R. R. from Chicago to Toledo, and it desires to hear from any of the western seedsmen who intend coming via Chicago. Address either Leonard H. Vaughan, care of Vaughan's Seed Store, or Charles Hollenbach, Hollenbach's Seed Store, Chicago. Time schedule and rates will be known shortly.

MUCH needed rains during the last two days have helped the Chicago onion set fields.

THE Dutch Horticultural Society has given a first-class certificate to J. Witteman, of Hillegom, for a new single white early tulip, White Beauty, said to be a sport from Pink Beauty.

THE following Chicago seedsmen are intending to take in the convention at Toledo: J. C. Vaughan and Leonard H. Vaughan, of Vaughan's Seed Store; S. F. Leonard, of Leonard Seed Co.; Peter Hollenbach, W. W. Barnard and A. H. Goodwin, of W. W. Barnard Co. The Illinois Seed Co. and the Albert Dickinson Co. will also be represented.

EVERYTHING indicates a very successful convention at Toledo next week. The attendance will be large.

OF late years the growth of hyacinths in Holland has largely exceeded the demand, which has been gradually decreasing, especially in England.

BEGINNING July 1, the business formerly conducted by Aug. Rhotert, at 26 Barclay street, New York City, will be continued by H. Frank Darrow, who has been associated in business with the late Mr. Rhotert for nineteen years. The street and post-office address, as well as the foreign connections, will remain unchanged.

THE Cox Seed Co., San Francisco, has opened an office at 2077 Sutter street.

ABOUT half of a normal crop of onion sets is the prediction for the 1906 harvest.

No changes are reported in conditions in the pea, bean, radish or vine seed districts.

W. F. COCKSHUTT, Brantford, Ont., is clearing ground for a new seed building on Queen street.

THE Nebraska growers of cucumbers for seed have said as little as possible about their surpluses, but they have not planted as large an acreage as usual.

WALDO ROHNERT, Gilroy, Cal., was in Chicago last week enroute to his old home at Detroit for a brief stay prior to the seedsmen's convention at Toledo. He says that the damage to onions by mildew has not been greatly overstated.

HAD the seedsmen elected to stand by their first expression and meet next week in California instead of Toledo, they would have encountered a most unusual season. It would have been a very interesting trip, but doubtless it is better that the California meeting should be held when conditions are more nearly normal.

TRADERS' RESOURCES.

As showing the resources of the big general mail order houses which have gone into the seed business the following will be of interest:

"Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, said to be the largest mail order house in the world, is to be incorporated with $40,000,000 stock. Goldman, Sachs & Co. are financing the incorporation. The company will have $10,000,000 of seven per cent preferred stock and $30,000,000 of the common stock. The quick assets which will be turned into the treasury of the company, it is said, will amount to $10,000,000, equivalent to the total issue of preferred stock."

It is stated that in the year prior to the removal of Sears, Roebuck & Co. to their new buildings, their annual business amounted to over $30,000,000, or about $100,000 a day. Since moving to the new site it is said the business is nearly doubling.

average, but crops have improved. Carrots and onions are only moderate. Peas and broad beans are good. Of runner beans there are complaints of a poor plant with some growers; it is yet too early to say what these will do, as late frosts may do much harm.—H. A.

CALIFORNIA SEED CROPS.

Gilroy, Cal., June 5.—Late rains and favorable cool weather have caused nearly all seed crops in California to take on a vigorous growth. These conditions, while benefiting nearly all crops, have been a great detriment to the onion seed crop. The estimate now is that about fifty per cent of the seed stalks are mildewed, some very badly and some just touched. With favorable cool weather the later ones may pull through with some seed in the head, but those stalks that are badly mildewed will never recover enough to form any seed whatever. All varieties seem attacked about the same, and the same conditions exist on about all the seed farms.

Lettuce, radish and sweet peas are taking on a very fine growth and with favorable weather during June and July the growers feel confident that the crop will be above the average, and contracts will probably be filled in full.

The small flower seed crops are looking well and the growers in the Santa Clara valley are hopeful of a just return on their investment.

NOTES FROM HOLLAND.

The lifting of the bulb crops will now soon be at hand and even in some of the less favorable localities has begun already. The month of May, which is really the decisive month for the tulip crop, was cold and rainy and the appearance of the blight in the tulip leaves might not have taken such proportions if dry and warm weather had prevailed. The continued wet has, however, been the cause that this blight kept spreading with marvelous rapidity in some of the fields and put a sudden stop to all growth. In consequence the crop in such places will only be middling and in some places where the leaves were killed off altogether the bulbs will be poor. Crocus have also suffered severely and as the area planted out is much smaller than in previous years, it is quite certain that they will be scarce and higher in price this season. Hyacinths are looking well and if the month of June should turn out warm, we may expect to lift a good crop, although the quantity of salable bulbs is likely to be considerably less than last season, and especially in whites there will not be any surplus.—Horticultural Trade Journal.

FEEL NEED OF GUARANTY.

At the recent annual dinner of the Agricultural Seed Trade Association of Great Britain much of the discussion turned on the desirability of a recognized standard of purity and germination, which should be guaranteed in all transactions. Geo. Somer, of Peter Lawson & Son, said: "I do not think there is anything of such importance that we have to face in the immediate future as the question of purity and growth; it is a matter of the greatest moment. This is a matter which should be taken in hand by the association, and I think the minister of agriculture should be approached on the subject. Take the case of samples arriving from abroad. We know nothing of their germinating capabilities. I think we ought to have some rule established to protect ourselves, as it often happens the samples arrive and one has to cable the reply out the same day. I consider it is a subject which should be thought out thoroughly, as at present there is no rule framed which covers this point."

Herbert Le May said: "With regard to the very important question—purity and germination—which is daily coming more to the front, the association ought to take it up very strongly. In a very short time every article will have to be sold by sample on a guaranteed purity and germination. It is not so much the question of the color of the seed; what does it matter to the farmer what it looks like; what he wants is good healthy seed that will grow." He was also strongly of opinion that a central control station should be established in this country. "Why should we have to send to Zurich to have our seeds tested? Why not have a central control in England? Surely England is of sufficient importance."

SEED IMPORTS.

The records of the New York customs house show receipts of seeds at that port last week as follows, including all classes:

The Market.

We have been most agreeably surprised by the steady and continuous run of good business we have been having. No matter how hot it has been we have had trade; as yet there has come no summer dullness. The usual number of June weddings, school exercises, as well as much funeral work, has made the entire month busy. The demand for roses keeps brisk, and the supply is large. Beauties still are good in size, but other varieties are small and poor. Carnations are plentiful, quality good for the season, and the demand cleans them up, even if some do go at low rates. Peonies have had a great run this season; they seem to become more popular every day, and have sold at good prices from the first. Other flowers and green goods are reasonably plentiful.

The death of Gov. Pattison at Cincinnati, June 18, made considerable funeral work for our stores.

The weather has been showery lately, and everything is making a fine growth outdoors.

Various Notes.

One of our largest department stores has been having large sales of bedding plants; their latest prices have been 29 cents each for Baby Ramblers. They say, "This rose has been sold right here in Columbus, not more than a week ago, for $2 each." Other plants are: Coleus, 1 cent each; cannas, 3 cents, and they were good plants.

Graff Bros. have been handling during the past fortnight enormous quantities of carnations, in two grades, at 25 and 35 cents a dozen. Customers are plentiful at these rates.

The bowling team of our club is working hard at least one evening a week. We expect to have a very good number of bowlers to select from for the Dayton tournament.

The Livingston Seed Co. has been having sales of tomato plants that run into several millions. Owing to the general shortage of plants, business in this line has been especially brisk.

Mrs. M. B. Faxon, the seedsman's wife, is in Boston visiting her mother and sisters. Mr. Faxon is with the Livingston Seed Co.

The premium lists for the Ohio State Fair, which takes place here September 3 to 7, are now being distributed. The premiums are very liberal for flowers and plants.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. tells us that its force never was so busy, or had so many wedding and floral decoration orders ahead, as at this season.

LENOX, MASS.

The regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held June 16, with President S. Carlquist in the chair. William Henry, gardener to Greenville Winthrop, was awarded a diploma for a grand display of peonies. H. Schmieske brought up the matter of building a home for aged gardeners. The question was thoroughly discussed, but nothing definite was done, as details seemed to be lacking.

Everything promises well for a good show on June 26. G. F.

HOBE SOUND, FLA.—F. Schultz has gone to Niagara-on-the-Lake, Canada, to spend the heated term.

MARYSVILLE, KAN.—P. A. Hammett is building a greenhouse and will shortly be ready for business.

AVONDALE, N. J.—Richard W. Young brought suit against George R. Hill to compel the reformation of a lease. The defendant is owner of the greenhouses occupied by the complainant, and the latter charges that a verbal understanding in regard to repairs and alterations, which had been reached between himself and the defendant, was not incorporated in the written lease, and that certain of the agreed-upon alterations and repairs were never made.

VICTORIA, B. C.

The bedding season is over. The demand has been unprecedented and there has been a great clean out, much to the gratification of the fraternity.

Tomatoes are realizing a handsome price, 20 cents per pound. All who have houses of these are well satisfied. A. J. Woodward is growing 30,000 of them. Covent Garden turned in the first lot. They began cutting in March.

We have had some nice showers and carnations in the field are looking very fine. The effects of the severe frost in March are still making themselves visible. Lilium candidum, which usually is so good here, is all blackening at the bottom and the flower spikes wither and die. Delphiniums are particularly good. I saw some today nine feet high and many bore flowers two to two and one-half inches across.

We are trying to get park commissioners appointed instead of leaving our beautiful Beacon Hill to the tender mercies of three aldermen, who are appointed annually, and who usually know as much as the ordinary individual about gardening and landscape work—but not always. Our park is wonderfully situated, beautifully planted with oaks and Douglas firs by nature. Under good management it would be one of the loveliest spots on the coast. E. A. W.

SAN JOSE.

Death of Joseph Jacquelin.

Joseph Jacquelin, the pioneer San Jose florist, died June 9 at his home at 383 West San Fernando street. The deceased was born April 6, 1838, in Bourges, Chev., France, and in 1852 came around Cape Horn to California. For ten years he worked in the mines and then came to this city. Establishing a nursery at Delmas and San Fernando streets, he continued in the business of florist for twenty years or more.

Mr. Jacquelin was one of the best known residents of this city. He was identified with public work and was prominent in fraternal circles. His death was hastened by the shock he received at the time of the San Francisco disaster. His daughter's home on North Beach street in San Francisco was destroyed by fire and the aged pioneer was brought to this city in a precarious condition.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business in every line is gradually assuming a normal condition and the florists will have some additions to their number the coming week. Although the retail trade of the town is still practically centered on a few streets on the edge of the unburned district, there are quite a number of business blocks in the course of erection down town. It is impossible at this time to tell where the trade of the town will eventually concentrate itself, and the dealers who have already leased stores have in most cases made the contract for one year, with the privilege of two years. It is thought by many that at the expiration of a year it will be easier to tell where the limits of the town will be and locations can be selected accordingly.

From inquiries among the newly established retailers regarding the state of trade at the present time, I find that there has been a great falling off in shipping orders, as is natural at this season, when our interior towns are in the throes of warm weather, and there will be little business in the florists' line until the fall season arrives. The weather here in town is delightfully cool; we have not had a warm day this year. This, of course, favors the handling of flowers, both for the growers and retailers. There is little business except funeral orders, so that the demand is principally for white stock. The price of everything is very low and for many kinds of flowers there is no demand whatever.

Among the growers there is much speculation as to what the demand will be for the coming season. There has been such a vast quantity of stock allowed to go to waste that the output will be only a fraction of what it formerly was. This is particularly true of roses, carnations, lilies and mums.

Over in Oakland business is only fair and as in town here the demand is principally for funeral flowers. There is little movement in the social way—quite a few weddings, but little decorating seems to result from them.

Several San Francisco firms have tried to get locations in Oakland with the object of opening flower stores in that city, but have not as yet found anything they considered suitable. Good stores are hard to find and it is not likely that the business done will warrant the payment for anything that can not be had at a reasonable rental.

Various Notes.

Fregosi & Co. have opened a new store on McAllister and Fillmore streets. A. Fregosi has been associated with Podesta & Baldochi for the past five years and previous to that he was in business on Geary street.

The establishment of Podesta & Co., on Polk and Sutter, is now ready for occupancy. The premises have been fitted up in good shape and a splendid trade should be done at this popular corner.

Kien & Co., of Elmhurst, are cutting large quantities of Enchantress and Prosperity carnations at present. Their stock is in splendid shape.

The Cox Seed Co. has opened an office at 2077 Sutter street.

The Art Floral Co., of which V. Matria is manager, will open on July 1 in the same building with Tait's Cafe.

H. M. Vanhorn has sold the ground formerly owned by him, and used as a nursery, near Piedmont. It will be cut up and sold in building lots. The price received for its sale is $30,000.

Domoto Bros. are handling their wholesale business from the store of the Fugi Company.

The Eureka Wire Works Company is working day and night shifts at present in an effort to stock up the stores with floral designs. This firm lost heavily in the recent fire.

J. T. Sheppard, formerly in the floral business in Oakland, is now interested in the manufacturing of mining machinery.

The Navlet Co., of San Jose, is shipping floral designs in considerable quantities to the local dealers.

A. Mann, Jr., reports a steady out-of-town trade for florists' supplies. Mr. Mann carries the largest stock on the coast.

Miss Wallenberg, formerly in business on Sutter street, will leave for an extended eastern trip in a few days.

Miss Solomon, the well known decorator, reports several large orders for early in August.

Chas. Stappenback will shortly be ready for business at his old stand.

G.

ELMHURST, CAL.—L. G. Gardner is one of the number of growers in this vicinity who were compelled, by the destruction of San Francisco and the interruption of business, to seek other occupation. He is now working as a pipe-fitter, but fully expects to be growing roses again as soon as the demand is restored. For the last five years he has produced some of the best roses available in the San Francisco market.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.—The water company is extending its mains seven blocks to supply the Herman greenhouses at Ninth avenue and Twenty-ninth street.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

NURSERYMEN CONVENE.

The American Association at Dallas.

The thirty-first annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen at Dallas, Tex., June 13 to 15, was farther removed from the centers of the industry than the association has gone before, but the meeting without doubt was one of the most successful of the long series. The attendance was up to the usual record and a large number of new members was gained in a territory heretofore not largely represented in the association. Besides, the regular attendants saw a new country, and formed personal acquaintance, and established business relations in a section of the country which rapidly is taking a place of first importance in all things horticultural.

The Texans made good their promise to provide hospitably for their guests and the weather was in delightful contrast to the memorable experience at West Baden last year.

The opening session, on Wednesday, was marked by a great flow of oratory. Rev. J. T. Sneed, of Tyler, offered prayer, followed by addresses of welcome by Stanley H. Watson, Mayor C. P. Smith, President M. H. Thomas, of the Commercial Club, and President J. E. Farnsworth, of the Hundred and Fifty Thousand Club. These were responded to by Judge Lynn, of Rochester, and W. M. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.

President E. Albertson then read his annual address. He reviewed the work of the various standing committees, on tariff, and reports of secretary and treasurer. He recommended the employment of an agent for the association to look after legislation, transportation and things generally affecting the interests of the association.

The transportation committee made a lengthy report covering the classification changes and other matters to which full publicity has already been given.

The legislative committee reported on existing conflicting conditions in the many state laws relating to interstate shipments of nursery stock. It was recommended that effort be continued uninterruptedly to secure some degree of uniformity in laws and administration.

The transportation and legislative committee reports were referred to the same committee as the president's address, thanks being given to each committee, especially the former, whose work has saved thousands of dollars to members of the association.

The secretary's report was read and referred to proper committee. The treasurer's report was read. It reported a total available sum of $2,570.74. Expenses during the year amounted to $1,060.62, leaving a balance of $1,509.92.

A committee was present from the national association of state entomologists, and a committee was appointed to meet them in conference to formulate plans for greater uniformity in inspection and certificate requirements. Later the committee was authorized to continue its work during the year.

On Thursday, Mr. Hale, for the committee on president's address, reported, recommending the adoption of that part relating to the appointment of an agent to look after the interests of the association in the matter of freights, legislation, etc. It was recommended that $1,200 be appropriated for salary and a like amount for the expenses of the office, the dues to be increased if necessary to provide funds. The report was adopted unanimously amid cheers.

A motion to combine the offices of secretary and treasurer was lost.

The election of officers brought out a lively fight and showed up some sore spots. Orlando Harrison, of Berlin, Md., received 73 votes to 57 for E. Albertson. J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia., was elected vice-president; Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, secretary, and C. L. Yates, Rochester, treasurer, all by acclamation. The executive committee consists of E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; J. H. Dayton, of Painesville, O., and F. H. Stannard, of Ottawa, Kan.

The following vice-presidents were nominated:

Mr. Underwood, Minn.	F. W. Power, Cal.
R. I. Bagby, Mo.	C. R. Burt, Conn.
G. H. Marshall, Neb.	D. S. Collins, Del.
John C. Chase, N. H.	R. C. Berckmans, Ga.

J. Van Lindley, N. C.	A. M. Ferguson, Colo.

J. B. Pilkington, Ore.	C. P. Bernardine, Kan.
J. A. Lopman, Ok.	H. F. Hiller, Ky.
J. McFarland, Pa.	W. R. Collins, I. T.
E. W. Chatten, Tenn.	H. P. Kelsey, Mass.

P. A. Dix, Utah.	M. Z. K. Jewett, Wis.
B. D. Southern, W. Va.	George H. Whiting, S. D.
W. T. Hood, Va.	Aubrey Frink, Fla.
Herbert Chase, Ala.	A. K. Clingman, La.
W. G. Vincenheller, Ark.	L. W. Crowell, Miss.

Detroit was chosen for the meeting place in 1907.

On motion of H. P. Kelsey, of Boston, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That this association urges its members to adopt three classes of prices: first, retail; second, wholesale; third, trade. The latter class is to be available only to nurserymen and florists, or those who buy for public plantings. And that we disapprove the practice of advertising in periodicals trade prices.

Resolved, further, That this association disapproves the practice of sending or quoting trade prices to others than those strictly in the trade, as mentioned before.

Essays and Discussions.

The papers read were not so numerous as usual, but were not missed. E. J. Wickson, of California, sent a paper on "Specific Requirements of New Varieties in California Fruit Growing," which was principally devoted to the achievements of Luther Burbank. C. C. Mayhew, of Texas, discussed "The Importance and Best Methods of the Bud and Scion Supply in Grafting." Geo. S. Josselyn, Fredonia, N. Y., was assigned the topic, "Credits," but had so many stories to tell he had no time left for his subject. Prof. T. V. Munson, Denison, Tex., spoke briefly but interestingly on his widely appreciated work with plums. Chas. T. Smith, of Concord, Ga., related his experience with fertilizers and a sharp discussion followed, all favoring fertilizers but disagreeing on the kind and method of applying.

There was the usual trade display, the salesmen's samples being reinforced by a considerable showing of Texas fruits.

Local Hospitalities.

Seldom if ever has the nurserymen's convention been held in a community more hospitable. As had been promised, there was something doing every minute. Here are some of the things, mostly in special honor of the tree growers:

Watermelon feast at fair grounds.
Badger fight.
Banquet at the Oriental hotel.
Trolley trip to Fort Worth.
Trip to Oak Lawn park.
Barbecue at home of Col. S. E. Moss.
Ball at Oak Lawn park pavilion.

C. J. Malloy, C. L. Watrous and J. W. Gaines were appointed a committee on final resolutions and expressed the association's appreciation in fitting manner.

NURSERIES HIT BY STORM.

The vicinity of Geneva, N. Y., was visited June 10 by the heaviest wind and rain ever experienced in that section. The nurseries were hard hit, the W. & T. Smith Co. suffering a loss on stock estimated as running well up toward the $100,000. Trees were broken or torn, and young stock literally beaten into the ground. Howard Merrill places his loss at $14,000. Maxwell Bros. say their principal loss was in damage to fruit crops. All the nurseries suffered more or less.

ORLANDO HARRISON.

Orlando Harrison, of Berlin, Md., who last week was elected president of the American Association of Nurserymen, is business manager of the firm of J. G. Harrison & Sons, Berlin, Md., who are among the largest growers of peach and apple trees in the United States.

Mr. Harrison is a native of Delaware, born in Sussex county in 1867. In 1884 his father moved to Berlin and started the nursery, with which the son has been associated ever since he became of business age. He is now mayor of Berlin for his fourth term. He has been prominent in Maryland horticultural organizations, and is vice-president of a local bank, director of a building and loan association and identified with several other local enterprises. He was elected to the state legislature on the Democratic ticket, and is an exponent of the anti-saloon idea in his county. He is interested in the largest apple orchard in Maryland, planted in Washington county. The firm cultivates more than 1,000 acres in the nursery, and employs more labor than any other firm or corporation operating in Worcester county.

THE Gilbertson Nursery Co., Mason City, Ia., is to erect a storage and packing house 120x350.

A HOLLAND nursery is offering a drooping form of Picea pungens glauca. It makes a fine specimen.

THE Southern Nurserymen's Association, Orlando Harrison, president, holds its annual convention at Lookout Mountain, near Chattanooga, Tenn., August 15 and 16. The program will consist of five-minute addresses and the program as outlined provides for a wide range of discussion.

WASHINGTON.

State of Trade.

A week of cloudy and sultry weather has put the quality of greenhouse stock below par. Roses are coming in with small, unshapely blooms and short and weak stems. About the only exceptions received from the local growers are some lots of La France that show up in better form. Pennock, of Philadelphia, has been shipping in a very good quality of American Beauty, also good peonies.

We are fast settling into the rut of summer business, when the retailers will have leisure to go fishing and otherwise disport themselves.

Park Superintendents Meet.

The American Association of Park Superintendents convened .in this city June 12. Among the members present who are well known in the horticultural circles of the country, were Jackson Dawson and J. A. Pettigrew, of Boston; John Chambers, of Toronto, Canada; Theodore Wirth, of Minneapolis, and W. R. Smith and George H. Brown, of this city. Jackson Dawson advocated the establishment of a national arboretum by the government, at Rock Creek park in this city. The sessions were held at the St. James hotel and on the night of June 13 a dinner was given the visitors by several florists of Washington. The modesty of these gentlemen forbids the mention of their names.

The following officers were elected: President, Byron Worthen, Manchester, N. H.; vice-presidents, John Chambers, Toronto, Ont.; John W. Duncan, Boston; Fred. Nussbaumer, St. Paul; John F. Cowell, Buffalo; W. S. Manning, Baltimore, and C. E. Keith, Bridgeport, Conn.; secretary and treasurer, F. E. Mulford, Harrisburg, Pa.

SCOTTY.

Col. Edwin B. Hay, past grand exalted ruler of the Elks, who did so much for the florists, notably in presenting the shooting badges last August, died suddenly June 11.

CHILLICOTHE, O.—G. H. Ede has returned from an eight months' visit at his old home in England.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.—Roy F. Wilcox has returned from Ithaca, N. Y., where he has been pursuing the course in horticulture at Cornell.

Concerning Photographs.

We are in entire accord with what N. B. Stover stated in the last issue on the question of photographs. Far too many photographs are published purporting to be reproductions of fine houses of carnations, roses, etc., which are in reality family groups, with the flowers as a suitable setting. We consider it poor taste to disfigure any photographs of plants or flowers with either the growers' portraits or, as not infrequently happens, that of their wives, families and employees into the bargain. Of course we are all glad to see family groups, but let them be apart from houses of carnations and other florists' staples. There may be cases where a grower's portrait might appear with his productions and still seem in good taste; it is, however, quite exceptional.

We think that a good many readers of the REVIEW will not consider our views nor those of N. B. Stover peculiar.

W. N. CRAIG.

ST. THOMAS, ONT.—Ralph Crocker states that June 8 is the usual date for beginning cemetery planting here. He is now quite busy.

HOLDREDGE, NEB.—Dr. W. E. Davidson and his two brothers have purchased four lots on East avenue and will erect a greenhouse 22x100 feet. A plant for hot water heat will be installed and it is expected to have everything in running order by autumn.

GENEVA, N. Y.—June 10 this city was visited by one of the most disastrous storms on record. All sorts of buildings were more or less wrecked and the general loss is estimated at $300,000. The repairs and stock lost at the greenhouse of John P. Welch represent $1,000.

ELIZABETH, N. J.

One of the most important matters to come before Elizabeth's board of aldermen in several years, and which will have a material effect on the growth of the city if the request of the petitioners is granted, was a communication received by the aldermen June 15 from Hitchings & Co., Jersey City, which wants to remove its business to Elizabeth. The company is engaged in the construction of greenhouses on an extensive scale and was established in 1844. It has now two plants on West Side avenue, and Arlington avenue, Jersey City, erected in 1880, but has not the necessary room there and wants to erect a big plant in the northeastern section of Elizabeth.

In its petition to the aldermen the company states that its capital is $200,000, with a cash surplus of $90,000. It has acquired a large tract of unimproved land in Elizabeth and asks that parts of certain streets be vacated so that it can put up its industry, which will consist of a storehouse 200x60 feet, a wood working plant two stories high, 205x67 feet, and an iron construction shop two stories high, 160x100 feet; a boiler shop, 100x60 feet; a foundry, 200x70 feet, and other buildings, 200x70 feet, including a pattern shop and office building—all to cost many thousands of dollars. The company will employ more than 200 men, all skilled mechanics, molders, machinists, carpenters and glaziers. Its weekly pay roll will be more than $4,000. The president of the company is E. W. Hitchings, while Charles Armitage is secretary and treasurer. The streets it wants vacated are parts of Louisa, Meadow, North avenue, Henry, Spring, Magnolia avenue and Meadow lane. The matter was referred to the committee on streets and parks, with instructions to report in July.

It was the consensus of opinion among the aldermen that the coming of this industry to Elizabeth would cause quite a boom to land values in that heretofore undeveloped section of Elizabeth. Most of the employes of the firm are married and have families and as they will have to live in this city to be near their work their advent will mean a substantial addition to the city's population.

Abe J. David, attorney for the company, briefly addressed the aldermen last night on the importance of the enterprise to the city and requested speedy action by the board in the matter. There is hardly any doubt of the favorable report on the subject at the aldermen's next meeting.

ELBERON, N. J.

The Elberon Horticultural Society held its first rose and strawberry show on Monday, June 11. There was an excellent display of roses, strawberries, and cut flowers, some fine exhibits being staged. The principal awards were as follows: For best collection of strawberries, A. Greil won first; for best dish of strawberries, G. Conover; for best collection of roses, J. Kennedy; for best twelve roses, F. Dettlinger; for best vase of sweet peas, A. Bauer.

Special prizes were awarded to W. D. Robertson for a fine collection of cut flowers; to H. Hall for a vase of poppies; A. Bauer for a vase of peonies, and a special prize donated by F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, was won by G. Kennedy for a vase of roses. The judges of the evening were Mr. Kennedy, of Oceanic, and H. A. Bunyard, of New York.

The society holds its summer show July 13 and 14 and everything indicates at the present time that it will be quite a success. G. M.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

It is ideal growing weather. Mums are planted and are making fine growth. Carnations in the field are doing well; one can almost see them grow. Roses are putting on fine growth for fall bloom, and all nature smiles.

So far I have had no reason to change my first impression of the possibilities of this country. Granting that the heat is intense during July and August, yet I have no doubt that deep and constant cultivation will do wonders. My observations lead me to believe that the majority do not give the attention necessary to succeed. Another thing, I find here the preference is given to unintelligent labor simply because it is cheap. This I think is a great mistake.

Reports from different sections are very flattering. The volume of trade has increased considerably over last year, and those who are in a position to speak claim that the outlook for the coming season is good.

Mr. Majors, formerly with Munson, at Denison, but now with the Texas Nursery Co., reports plenty of work at his place. Narcissus.

Stamford, Conn.—Alma C. Lindstrom removed May 1 to a large new store on Bank street, where two wide show windows afford facilities for a fine display. A better spring business than ever has been done.

SCENT IN TULIPS.

The artificial conditions of civilized life have largely deprived our race of the sense of smell, but there are still a few among us capable of deep pleasure in the scents of flowers. It may therefore not be without interest to draw attention to the fact that though some of the bedding tulips are scentless, and several rather objectionable in this respect, there are a few really deliciously scented. The finest variety, without doubt, from this point of view, is Prince of Austria, which very few with their eyes shut could tell from a Marechal Niel rose. Yellow Prince has also a delightful fragrance of its own, and Rose Grisdelin, when grown in large breadths, as in Holland, will scent the air for a long distance. Other varieties may occur to our readers which may be added, and we would suggest that the attention of customers should be drawn to this often disregarded quality; as we are quite sure that most ladies having once inhaled the fragrance of any of the varieties alluded to, would promptly place an order for the following season.—Horticultural Advertiser.

RABBIT-PROOF PLANTS.

To the list of plants that rabbits will not eat may be added cannas, nicotianas, Hemerocallis fulva and flava (sometimes when the last-named commences to grow rabbits will nibble the growths, but not to damage them to any extent), polemoniums, peonies, heucheras, Celsia cretica, Iris Germanica and varieties. They will occasionally eat the young shoots of Michaelmas daisies when first planted, but if, when cut down in the autumn, the stems are left some six inches long, they do not appear to eat the young shoots the following season. Pentstemons are seldom touched. Where rabbits abound they are always attracted by freshly-stirred ground, and several plants (scabious, for instance) will remain untouched through the summer months, but if left through the winter they may be eaten during frosty weather.

Among plants that rabbits have a weakness for are nasturtiums, perennial lobelias, all the campanulas, petunias, violas, ribbon grass, sunflowers, delphiniums, stocks, etc.—Gardeners' Magazine.

Decatur, Ind.—W. B. Flick, secretary of the State Horticultural Society, has completed arrangements to run a car over the state, with a corps of instructors and lecturers for the purpose of teaching farmers and fruit growers how to care for their trees and fruits. The first trip of the car will be from Greencastle to Richmond. It will occupy one week, beginning Monday, July 23.

Newton, Kan.—C. L. Shanks has moved his dwelling across the street and will use the space vacated in the extension of three greenhouses forty feet each. Another house, connecting these three houses, will be added at the east end.

Greenwood, Ind.—J. O. Bishop says spring business has been good. There was a shortage on both cut flowers and pot plants for Decoration day, but he is increasing his establishment one-third, and will be prepared to handle the business next year. Carnations look well in the field, and everything is doing nicely.

Maids will be Roses of the past when

The Market.

No one is complaining about business last week. There was a good, steady demand for all kinds and grades of flowers and the supply was just about heavy enough so that we could take good care of it. The early part of the week it looked for a while as if there would be a glut of carnations, as they were coming in by the thousands, but the demand did not fail and they were all closed out at fair prices.

One noticeable feature was the demand for sweet peas. This flower is coming quite heavily now, and they sold out clean and at good prices. At present the supply is scarcely equal to the demand. There are still a few cold storage peonies, but the supply will not last much longer. A few asters are making their appearance. Beauties were in good demand. White roses were a close second and brought good prices. Stocks, feverfew, candytuft, sweet alyssum and snapdragon sold out clean.

Various Notes.

Speaking of snapdragon, you would surely be surprised to see some of the varieties originated and grown by W. K. Partridge. They are simply enormous and are of the most beautiful colors. They grow almost four feet tall and bear trusses of bloom a foot long. As grown like this, you would scarcely recognize the snapdragon. They sell at a good price and when used in decorations they create a beautiful effect.

Frank Huntsman has a seedling rose, a cross between Cusin and Chatenay, which originated on his place. From all points of view this rose seems to be a good thing. It has fine stem and foliage, a beautiful pink color, on the order of Bridesmaid, is very double, and stands hot weather well. Mr. Huntsman had a bloom on exhibition at the last meeting of the Florists' Society, and it created a favorable impression.

The outing committee has not yet decided on a locality for our annual outing. Charles Pommert, of Amelia, O., which is a small town about twenty miles from this city, has invited the society to hold the outing on his farm. Many of the craft have expressed themselves as being in favor of going there and having an old-fashioned basket picnic. There is no question but that if the committee decide to hold the outing there, Charles Pommert will see to it that every one has a fine time.

J. Lodder & Sons, of Hamilton, O., have purchased the greenhouse plant owned by Haeffner & Zumstein, of the same place, and are now busily engaged moving the greenhouses and adding them to their present range. C. J. Ohmer.

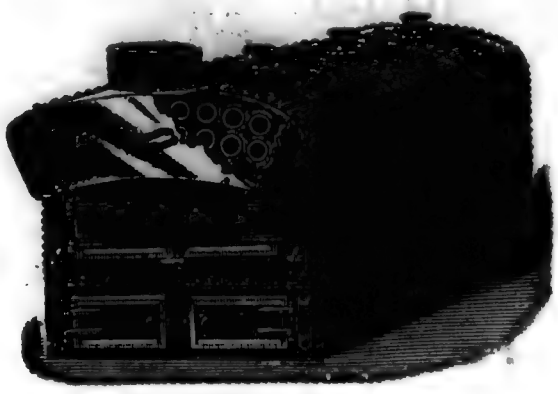
"We have had four of your boilers. The first gave us thirteen years' service, the second one eleven years, and the other two were put in in the last two seasons.

"We used the first two boilers nine years before we had to put in new flues. We have not used any other boilers, but our neighbors have other makes, and the life of their boilers is from three to four years shorter than ours.



"We are satisfied with the boilers in every possible way."

GRANT NEWPORT, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

"I bought a No. 2 boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7,000 sq. ft. of glass; would take care of 2,000 more. I have had a cast-iron boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down December 29, 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. I have now two No. 2 Kroeschell boilers, and do not worry about their breaking down."

JACOB PHILLIP, Rogers Park, Ill.

"I bought a No. 10 boiler in 1901. Have 20,000 sq. ft. of glass. We keep temperature at 60 degrees in the coldest weather. I have had one Kroeschell boiler 15 years, and the only repairs were a set of flues. Your boiler is so satisfactory to me that I do not care to try any other. Please enter my order for another No. 8, delivered in July."

TANKS AND PIPING.

I am building three houses, and I want to pipe them for 50 degrees in zero weather. Please give me some ideas. The top of my boiler, on account of drainage, stands about two feet above the level of the floor, so that the return pipes are about on a level with it. By putting in a closed expansion tank, would results be better? Please tell me what capacity of tank I would need. Would a 4-inch return pipe in each side wall of the houses 33x80 feet, sides three feet, ridge nine feet, be successful, with a 2-inch pipe in the middle, and a 4-inch one for flow? By having a 4-inch on the side I would have more fall to the boiler. The other houses are 22x90, sides four feet, ridge eight feet, and 11x104, sides four feet, ridge eight feet.

M. M. W.

Not necessarily a closed expansion tank, but one of good size, say fifty gallons, elevated fifteen feet or more above the level of the top of the boiler, should prove an advantage. The manner in which you purpose to arrange the piping in the house is not clear and I fear that my suggestions may not be to the point. If 4-inch pipe is to be used in the plant, the house 33x80 feet can be heated by using eight runs of pipe or about 600 lineal feet, the house 22x90 feet by 510 lineal feet or about six runs of pipe, and the house 11x104 feet by 314 lineal feet or three runs, i. e., one flow and two returns. The higher the flow pipes can be carried, if the returns are about on a level with the top of the boiler, the better the arrangement. Connect the supply pipe of the expansion tank to the main return near the boiler. L. C. C.

TEN NEW HOUSES.

We are to erect ten houses, each 20x 100 feet, five on each side of a packing shed 12x100 feet. What horse-power boiler will it take to heat it with steam in zero weather to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees? The flow pipe from the boiler at the north of the packing shed runs through the packing shed, the pipes to branch from the main at each greenhouse. The gutters are five feet high, the ridges twelve feet. The boiler is to be set in the ground six feet. Can we get a good return at that depth? Slack coal is to be used for fuel. We shall build with cement walls. The gable ends of the houses are to be glass. The houses run east and west. How many 2-inch flow pipes will be needed in each house and how many 1½-inch return pipes under the benches? We shall use low pressure steam. M. & A.

To successfully handle the plant you contemplate it will be best to install two forty horse-power boilers and carry a 6-inch flow pipe through the potting shed, from which to take the ten 2-inch flow pipes needed for the ten houses. If the main flow is 6-inch for the first fifty feet it can be reduced to 4-inch the remainder of the distance. The boilers should be set in the ground deep enough so the top of the shell of the boiler will be below the level of the returns in the houses and so there will be a good grade and at least two feet offset from the lowest point in the main return to the water level of the boilers. You will make no error by putting the boilers down deep. Each house 20x100 will require one 2-inch flow under the ridge and ten 1¼-inch returns. Valves should be placed in at least four runs of pipe in each house so as to make it possible to increase or decrease the amount of radiation in the house according to the condition of the weather. L. C. C.

BOILER AND PIPING.

I wish to know how many runs of 2-inch pipe it will take under each bench to heat a house 43x54 feet. I intend to use hot water, and wish to heat to 50 degrees. Sometimes we have zero weather or less for a few days. I wish to grow carnations and bedding plants. The house will have six raised benches and one bed six feet wide, with 2-foot walks between. Will one 2-inch flow and two 2-inch returns under each bench be sufficient? I have at present in my house 16x40 feet two 2-inch flows and three 2-inch returns, or about 500 feet, which is satisfactory. In the house 10x45 feet I have about 600 feet of 1¼-inch pipe. What size boiler should I have to heat the whole plant? Is it necessary to lower the boiler, which is at the lowest corner, on account of the slope of the ground, and if so, how much?

G. J. L.

The quantity of pipe you have estimated, viz., one 2-inch flow and two 2-inch returns under each of the seven benches of the proposed house 43x45 feet should be sufficient to maintain the heat specified. As the three houses you have require in the aggregate about 1,000 square feet of radiation, a boiler rated to carry 1,500 square feet of radiation should be sufficient for your work.

L. C. C.

PIPING TWO HOUSES.

I have been having some little difficulty in heating my houses. I have two houses, running north and south, protected on the north by a dwelling. The east house is 21x58 feet, the west house 16x90 feet, with two feet of space between. The walls are four and one-half feet high, with no side sash, well lined on inside and outside. The boiler house is situated at about the center at the side of the west house. Please give me a general plan for piping for hot water in 2-inch pipes. What size boiler is required? The lowest temperature is 10 degrees below zero. If you think best I can move the boiler house to the northwest corner of the west house. I am planning to make the east house the same length, ninety feet, and widen the west house to eighteen feet, so as to make use of the space between. Any advice will be greatly appreciated.

C. A. S.

Personally I should prefer having the heating plant at one end rather than in the middle of houses of this length. A boiler rated to carry 2,000 feet of radiation will be ample for your work. The house 21x90 feet requires 600 square feet of radiation, which can be provided by the use of one 2½-inch flow pipe and ten 2-inch returns. The house 18x90 feet can be heated with a 2½-inch flow pipe and nine 2-inch returns. Make as few bends as practicable, arrange the expansion tank to connect with the main return near the boiler and secure, if possible, at least fifteen or eighteen feet elevation for this tank. Put air valves at the high points on the flow pipes and, if possible, pipe each house from the boiler independently. L. C. C.

METHOD OF PIPING.

I wish to ask you something in regard to greenhouse heating. In my new house 18x33 feet, running north and south, I am having a hot water heater installed. How should the pipes be placed, along the sides of house or running underneath the benches? I will grow carnations and miscellaneous stock. K. C. C.

In a house intended for carnations and general stock the best satisfaction will undoubtedly be derived from pipes arranged under the benches. As a general rule this style of piping is more economical of space than other methods and for most florists' crops bottom heat is preferable to overhead heat.

L. C. C.

BOILER CAPACITY.

Please tell me how much pipe I will need for a 50-foot house built from the end of my present range to my boiler shed, for a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather. Will a boiler ten feet long, thirty-six inches wide, with thirty-two flues and a 3-inch return heat the following: A dwelling of five rooms, a lean-to 12x60 and a house 28x180, all in a straight line? W. G. H.

I judge from the wording of your letter that the house in question is 28x50 feet. If so, and it is to be heated with steam, the riser to be carried direct to it from the boiler, it can be piped by using one 2-inch flow pipe and sixteen 1¼-inch returns. This will supply the requisite amount of radiation. The house 28x180 feet requires 1,200 square feet of radiation, the lean-to house 12x60 feet requires 220 square feet of radiation, and allowing 100 feet for each of the five rooms in the dwelling, i. e., 500 square feet, the total load for the boiler will be about 1,920 square feet of radiation. The boiler in question, if a regular stationary, should do the work easily, as it should be able to provide steam for about 3,000 square feet of radiation.

POT MAKERS FOR 140 YEARS

MOLINE, ILL.

Tri-city florists enjoyed a fine time at their monthly meeting at the residence of William Knees, June 7. All the florists of the three cities, numbering about eighteen, were in attendance, and most of them were accompanied by their ladies.

The occasion was the laying of the cornerstone of Mr. Knees' new greenhouse on the rear of the plot of ground on which his home stands. The cornerstone was of cement in which an iron post was set for the corner of the greenhouse. As a novelty a tin can containing a paper bearing the names of all the florists present was sunk in the cement. The cornerstone speech was delivered by J. T. Temple, of Davenport, president of the association.

Mr. Knees intends to move from the old place on Fifteenth street and Sixteenth avenue in the course of a few years, as fast as he can build the new houses on Fifteenth street and Nineteenth avenue.

Another feature of the meeting was the peony show. H. G. Bryant, of Davenport, had on display at least twenty-five varieties of magnificent size and color which were sent him by his uncle in Princeton, Ill., who conducts a peony nursery.

IT'S A STRONG COMBINATION

that of uniting the rafter and the sash bar in one—a combination that has done more to revolutionize greenhouse building than anything that has happened since the introduction of the iron frame.

THE TEST OF DURABILITY

Durability in greenhouse material is of first importance. It is expensive and tiresome to be constantly rebuilding and repairing—trying to patch up houses built of poor material.
